POLICE OUTRAGE IN ARREST OF INNOCENT WOMAN

An Officer Accuses Miss Sally E. Beck, a School Visitor, of Intoxication, and He Is Then Compelled to Apologize

Blundering of Force Shown in Case Which Will Be Fought After the Officers Try to Keep the Facts Concealed

THE false arrest of Miss Sally E. Beck, public school visitor in the North End and supervisor of social work at the North Bennett Street Industrial School and a friend of Mrs. Quincy A. Shaw and Mrs. James J. Storrow, became known last night. Although the arrest was made ten days ago, no report was ever made public. The police suppressed the news. The arrest of Miss Beck was made by Patrolman Samuel J. Sweetland of the Hanover street station. The police say they have apologized and that Commissioner O'Meara is investigating.

Miss Beck was walking to her home on Hanover street one week ago last Friday night. She saw a child playing in the gutter, whom she thought ought to be in bed. Miss Beck saw Patrolman Sweetland standing on the opposite corner of Hanover street and Parmenter street, talking with a woman who proved to be his wife. Miss Beck asked the patrolman to send the little boy home. The patrolman said he didn't know "who the boy belonged to." Miss Beck insisted, and after she took the patrolman's number and threatened to report him, she was arrested on the charge of being intoxicated, sent to the police station in a patrol wagon because "her eyes were red, her hair was being blown about and she had her hands in her pockets like a college student," as Patrolman Sweetland declared last night.

Freed by Lieutenant.

After Miss Beck had reached the station house and was detained half an hour, she was released by Lieutenant Allen, who found she showed absolutely no signs of intoxication. Patrolman Sweetland was called in from the street, and he apologized.

Miss Beck declared last night that she was determined that Sweetland should be punished for his action. The whole police department has tried to square the false arrest, but hasn't succeeded.

The versions of the arrest as told by Miss Beck and Lawyer Frederick Cabot on the one side and Patrolman Sweetland on the other are given by the Boston Sunday American to-day.

Miss Beck said: "I was arrested by Patrolman Sweetland for absolutely no reason but malice. I was arrested falsely. Many of my friends have advised me to get out of the matter as quietly as possible, for the reasons that it would create a great deal of undesirable publicity and talk if the news of the arrest became public. I do not feel that this is true. I feel that it is my duty as a citizen to have the matter taken up officially. The officer knew very well that I was not intoxicated. The children who saw me arrested told the officer who I was.

Tells of Apology.

"I was walking down Hanover street that night when I saw a small boy playing on the sidewalk across the street. I then saw the patrolman and crossed the street to speak to him. I hardly had a chance to tell him that I though it would be a good idea for him to send the boy to his home, when the officer placed his hand on me and took me to the patrol box. I was taken to the police station in the wagon. When I got there, Lieutenant Allen, who was in charge, was very kind to me. I was not booked and there was no record entered against me. He saw in a moment that I was not guilty of the charge which the officer had made against me.

"I was in the police station a short time

POLICE ACCUSED IN AMAZING EXPOSURE OF FARO SWINDLE

Swindlers Were Allowed to Operate Boldly, Declares Boylston Street Doctor, Who Carried Information of the Bunco Game to Police Headquarters and Was There Informed That He Had No Chance to Stop it.

THE most startling development of the exposure of the "Bunco Syndicate," which has swindled scores of victims for five or ten years in Boston without police interference, came last night when a reputable Boston professional man declared exclusively to the Sunday American that he had invoked the aid of the police to break up the gang and the police did nothing. Not only are the police charged with negligence, but Deputy Superintendent William B. Watts is specifically mentioned.

This is the second time that the Deputy Superintendent of Police—the man in actual charge of the entire criminal work of the Boston Police department—has been openly brought into the case.

The man who gave the information to the Sunday American is Dr. F. E. Schubmehl, of No. 100 Boylston street, whom the gang attempted to swindle. Dr. Schubmehl declares that he gave all of the facts to the police in time to trap the gang and that Deputy Superintendent Watts, then Chief of the Bureau of Criminal Investigation, refused to do his duty. He thus links Watts' name openly and definitely with the "Bunco Syndicate."

Doctor Confirms Story of Ex-Representative

His statement is corroborative of that made by Delos M. Bristol of Winthrop, ex-Representative in the Legislature. The "syndicate" attempted to swindle Bristol. He trapped them, and seized $2,500 of their money. He accompanied an agent of the "syndicate" to Police Headquarters, where Watts advised him not to do anything because of the notoriety that would ensue; told him that he, Watts, could do nothing, and actually induced Bristol to give back to the agent the $2,500 that had been stolen from other victims.

Here is Dr. Schubmehl's statement:

"Three Winters ago I was 'put wise' to the fact that a friend of mine had been victimized by this game of faro swindlers, and he had 'got to' them by clipping an advertisement out of a Boston paper. The advertisement was for a scheme for a man with money, the investment to net the investor $150,000 or some such sum within a few months. The advertisement was in the Business Chance columns.

"By following the paper I was able to pick out successive advertisements of the same kind after my friend had shown me the advertisement which had caught his eye. My friend dropped quite a tidy sum when he played with the faro bunch. They took him in, head over heels. He

TAXICAB PLUNGES INTO LIQUOR STORE

One Woman Injured and Many Are in Danger When Steering Gear Breaks.

Many men and women at Summer and Washington streets had narow escapes at 7:45 o'clock last evening, when the steering gear of a taxicab broke and the cab dashed into the north window of the liquor store of G. Frank Davenport at No. 422 Washington street.

A young woman, who gave her name as Mrs. Silveria Tower of No. 161 Tower street, Somerville, was struck, knocked down and her right leg broken. There is no such number, and the name does not appear in the Somerville directory. Others walking nearby escaped in a mad scramble from the path of the motor car.

A man who said he was the woman's husband was inside the store when the taxicab hit Mrs. Morse. He took her into Davenport's office, while he got the number of the chauffeur and the names of witnesses. Both he and the injured woman refused to give their names until several policeman demanded them.

The ambulance of Police Station 4 responded to a police call, but the victim refused to go to a hospital and was taken home in another taxicab. The name of the chauffeur of the runaway car was Leary.

West Pointers Delight Soldier's Heart, He Writes.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—A photograph was made of the review at West Point September 29, 1909, for the following guests of the Hudson-Fulton celebration: Admiral Sir Robert Seymour of the British navy, in front, the Imperial Great Admiral Von Koester, of the German navy, behind him.

A copy of this photograph was sent to Admiral Von Koester who sent it back with the following inscription by the hand of the Emperor of Germany: "A fine body of promising young gentlemen; a sight delightful to a soldier's heart. Wilhelm I.R."

EIGHTEEN TAKEN IN RAID ON CRAP GAME

Roslindale Police Smash In Somerset Club Doors and Gather in the Members.

Captain Harriman and Sergeants Arnold and Gilman, with a dozen policemen of Station 13, armed with a search warrant, raided the Somerset club on the second floor of No. 33 Poplar street, Roslindale, late last night.

Eighteen men were taken to the Roslindale police sub-station and booked on a charge of being present where a crap game was being played. The police seized three tables, fourteen chairs, four dice, a deck of cards and four table covers.

The eighteen prisoners gave bail at 12:30 this morning. They are William Harington of Batavia street, Robert A. Lonprette of Metropolitan Terrace; Henry Wilson of Highland avenue; Charles W. Nelleon of Washington street; William A. Norton of Norfolk street, Dorchester; Irving Parce of Ashland street; William G. Gillon of Brook street; George Glasheen of James street; Daniel Fair of Bellevue avenue; Robert Staten of Kittridge street; Nicholas Dana of 8 Clarendon Park; Henry Mitchell of Amherst street; William Donlin of Sherwood street; William Friary of Newbury street; Charles Grant of River street; Frank Mitchell of Hyde Park avenue; Joseph H. Pierce of Montello street and William Danders of Clarendon Park.

WOMAN "COP" IS HERE.

Indianapolis Mayor Brings Comic Paper Policeman to Life.

INDIANAPOLIS, March 5.—She's been a powerful long time arriving, but she's here at last. The farce comedies have had her so have the comic papers. Now, its on the level. Mayor Shank is going to put some women on the police force.

They will not be assigned to beats in the general sense, but will be detailed to duty in the down town districts. They will have full police powers—even to the right of eminent domain over the Greek on the corner fruit stand.

Mayor Shank said to-day that he had had several conferences with Superintendent of Police Hyland on the question and would soon announce his appointees. Can you beat it?

SUICIDE SHOT FATAL.

After living for three weeks with a bullet in his brain, James J. Herlihy of Winthrop avenue, Revere, died last night in the Relief Hospital. On the morning of February 18 Herlihy who was a clerk at the General Express Company's offices at No. 65 Pearl street, shot himself in the head with a .32-calibre revolver. The bullet lodged in the brain and the surgeons at the Relief Hospital did not care to probe for it. Why he tried to kill himself remained a mystery.

MOVE TO FREE KING FROM PRISON

"Broker Was Never Intentionally Dishonest," Says G. J. Raymond, Who Leads Movement for a Pardon or Parole

Will Urge Governor to Permit Financier to Resume Business to Make Restitution; Suffers from Idleness in Prison Life

AN EARNEST effort is to be made by the friends of Cardenio F. King, the former Boston financial agent, who is serving a ten-year sentence for grand larceny in the Charlestown Prison, to obtain his release. A petition is being prepared by George J. Raymond and others which will be presented to Governor Draper and his council, asking that the prisoner be paroled if not pardoned and allowed to take up his business and make restitution to his defrauded patrons.

King is suffering from a trouble, the result of an accident, which Raymond says, will kill him by the time his term expires if he is kept in prison. King is now a sort of assistant librarian in the prison. He was put in the knitting-machine shop beside a Negro when he first went to prison, and as King was born in the South he naturally thought this was "rubbing it in" a little. His transfer to the library was a good piece of luck for him, as he is a great reader. He has been in prison a little over a year. He has a warm friend and a hustler in Mr. Raymond.

"Never Intentionally Dishonest."

"C. F. King was never intentionally dishonest in my opinion," said Mr. Raymond yesterday. "He was a big, good-natured boy, with more than a man's abilities, who made enemies in high places, attracted attention and business by his effective mode of advertising, and he never had the slightest idea that he would not be allowed to continue his business and repay those who suffered by his stock transactions.

"As a proof of this C. F. King made good about $200,000 just before the crash came, and after it was upon him allowed everything to go by the board and did not attempt to conceal either the money or the truth.

"I am led to belive that even his creditors, to a man, will sign a petition for his release from prison. He is far from well; he is suffering constantly from aggravated hernia and cannot long survive prison life. He is capable of a long, honest and successful business life.

"It is our notion that C. F. King might be released from prison and allowed to resume his affairs without being formally pardoned.

No benefit is derived from his confinement, and we claim that being not intentionally dishonest, all purposes of justice would be conserved by giving him his liberty, either conditional or otherwise.

Will Write Creditors.

"It would be within the province of the Governor and Council to decide what the terms of his liberation should be, I understand. If not, the courts could collaborate upon the point.

"A letter has been written to C. F. King asking for the address of his family, and through them we shall acquire all the names of friends and of his creditors. So far as we can learn they will all be willing to sign the petition. Personally I know of no man in Boston who would be unwilling to sign the document for King's release.

"We shall employ an attorney to see that everything is done in legal form and hope to make a convincing argument to the constituted authorities."

GUM-CHEWING GIRLS, READ!

Rest Your Face, Says Chicago Doctor, and Be Beautiful.

CHICAGO, March 5.—If you see a girl so homely she looks like she had an ache in her face, don't think she was born that way. You can set her down as a gum-chewer.

This is what Dr. Helen Reynolds Kellogg practically told the members of the Klio Association in a lecture. The title of the lecture was "Rest Your Face."

"You don't have to leave your face at home to rest it," said the doctor. "You can rest it while wearing it around town. But don't chew gum. That'll spoil any face. If you would be beautiful avoid gum and don't be afraid to laugh. Women laugh too little. A good laugh will cure a bad case of dyspepsia. But from gum good Lord deliver all our faces."

FAILS TO WIN BACK WIFE, ENDS HIS LIFE

Husband Shoots Himself as Woman, Fearing Death, Runs Away.

When his wife, from whom he had been separated for two years, refused to consent to live with him again, Edwin McNeil, thirty-eight years of age, last night drew a 32-calibre revolver from his pocket and, as the woman fled from his presence, fired a bullet into his brain. He died instantly.

McNeil, who was a cloth cutter by trade, lived at No. 2 Oakfield terrace, Jamaica Plain. His wife, Clara, and their eight-year-old daughter, Edwina, lives in a five-room suite on the third floor of the house at No. 43 Paul Gore street, Jamaica Plain.

McNeil went to his wife's apartments. His little daughter was not at home. He pleaded with his wife for a reconciliation, but she would not consent.

Suddenly McNeil drew the revolver. The woman, thinking that he was about to slay her, fled shrieking from the room and down the stairs. McNeil never made a step to follow her.

Mrs. McNeil was completely prostrated. She is a hard-working woman and has supported her daughter by working as a dressmaker. McNeil had recently served on the jury in the Suffolk county Superior Court.

$65 FINE AS SHOPLIFTER.

Fashionably Dressed Woman Among Prisoners in Dock.

A fashionably-dressed woman, who gave her name as Mary Waters and her home in Brockton, was fined $65 by Judge Forsythe in the Municipal Court yesterday. She was charged with shoplifting.

Grace Bullock, thirty, of Chelsea, was held in $300 bonds for a hearing next week on the same charge. Nellie Atkins of Charlestown, paid $15 for shoplifting.

TREADWAY, BEWARE!

Farmers With Milk Grudge to See You Next Saturday.

The farmers of Massachusetts will hitch Old Dobbin to the shay next Saturday and drive to the State House to protest against the suggestion of President Treadway of the Senate that the bills for a reduction of the milk standard be side-tracked to a special commission. The farmers want action this year.

The bills have been presented to the Legislature annually since the milk standard was fixed at 12.15 per cent. total solids and 3.35 per cent. butter fats. The farmers say that this standard can't be met by Holstein herds.

Dozen Firemen Injured and $250,000 Property Loss Caused by Five-alarm Blaze That Destroys New England Building in the Heart of the Wool District.

BOSTON had one of the most spectacular and threatening Saturday night fires last night that has occurred in this city in many years. Thousands of people jammed Dewey Square and crowded in and about the South Terminal Station, while flames leaped from floor to floor of the six story New England Building, at No. 200 Summer street, flashed out of the windows in great sheets of flame and shot straight into the heavens in quivering tongues for fifty feet.

It was a pyrotechnic display that held the gaze of the immense crowd and challenged the bravery and skill of the fire-fighting men of the city, practically all of whom were called to the burning structure by five alarms that were rapidly sent in.

By prompt and daring work the fire was confined to the one building, leaving the front of it for a depth of fifty feet a mere shell. The greedy flames were balked as they raced through the building by two immense walls that shut them off from the rear, where wool of great value is stored. The damage was estimated at about $250,000. The all-out signal was sounded at 12.12 this mornign.

The blaze was in the heart of the wool district of the city, the greatest wool centre of the world, and the momentous loss that was threatened was responsible for the five alarms.

Dozen Firemen Injured Fighting Flames.

Fully a dozen of the firemen were injured to some extent in fighting the flames. Following are the names of eight which were taken at the hospitals where they were treated and by ambulaance surgeons:

CAPTAIN JEREMIAH F. GILLEN, Engine No. 7, struck by falling wall, injuries to spine and shoulders; internal injuries feared. Critical condition, at Grace Hospital.

LIEUTENANT MICHAEL TEEHAN, Engine No. 7, struck by falling wall. Injuries to shoulder. Taken to Grace Hospital.

CHAUFFEUR T. W. DEVENEY, aid to Deputy Chief Peter F. McDonough, struck by pole of hose wagon in collision at Summer street and Atlantic avenue. Injuries to shoulders, possibly dislocation. Attended at Relief Station ambulance in Dewey Square, and afterwards sent home.

HOSEMAN CORNELIUS MURPHY of Engine Company No. 39, injured by fall in building and partially suffocated. Taken to Relief Station.

LIEUTENANT WILLIAM H. McCORKLE of Ladder Company No. 18, struck on shoulder by piece of roofing. Treated at ambulance in Dewey square and returned to duty.

HOSEMAN WILLIAM O'BRIEN of Engine Company No. 26, struck by falling mortar in building. Treated at ambulance in Dewey square and returned to duty.

DRIVER CHARLES LANE of hose wagon of Engine Company No. 23, shaken up by collision with District Chief McDonough's automobile at Summer street and Atlantic avenue. Treated at ambulance in Dewey square and returned to duty.

HOSEMAN CORNELIUS CROWLEY of Engine Company No. 23, struck by falling mortar in building and cut by falling glass. Treated at ambulance of Station 1 on Summer street and returned to duty.

Sky Illumined by Great Tongues of Fire.

The fire was discovered shortly after 7 o'clock. The streets were filled with Saturday shoppers. It had been a beautiful day, with a real breath of Spring in the air, and the city held a larger crowd than usual. A great stream of humanity was pouring into the great maw of the South Terminal Station. A counter stream flowed from its doors, the early theatre crowd coming into the city for the shows.

A wild cry of fire came from across Summer street from the entrance to the station. It was followed by quick, black puffs of smoke that curled from crack and

FREE RYE TO VOTERS BUT NO 'REPEATING'

If You're on the Roxbury List You're O. K. at Fox Head Tavern.

Some of the regulars who rest their falling arches on the iron rail of Fox Head Tavern, Roxbury, say Barney Flanagan is entitled to all the credit.

You can find just as many to say the idea originated with Henry Schwab.

It doesn't seem to make any material difference; Cartoof & Co., own Fox Head Tavern and Cartoff & Co. are getting the money.

The scheme is this: If you live in Roxbury (and if you don't you will probably be out there this afternoon nosing around for a flat or a furnished room), you have already received through the mail a card which reads as follows:

> Mr.........................
> This card entitles you to one glass of our famous LEE 61 RYE WHISKEY
> FREE AT OUR BAR
> Not good after April 1st, 1910
> CARTOOF & COMPANY
> Clerks:
> Barney Flanagan
> Henry Schwab No. 2510

When Cartoof & Co. admitted last night that they were taking addresses from the voting lists of the Roxbury wards, and that they were playing no favorites, habitues of Fox Head Tavern resolved to drop around to-day on relatives and friends in the ward who are well known to be Prohibitionists or no-license.

There is grave danger of illegal registration, not to say repeating.

MOUNTED POLICE CHARGE MOBS; 50 INJURED, 100 JAILED IN DAY OF RIOTS

PHILADELPHIA, March 5.—Absolutely defying the orders of the police and the mayor, about 3,000 of the 6,000 striking car men and about twice that number of sympathizers this afternoon held a parade, which marched around the city and then moved upon Independence Hall, the home of the old Liberty Bell.

Although there was no great violence during the course of the parade itself immediately after it disbanded there came a series of attacks upon cars which sent truck loads of policemen racing at forty miles an hour toward half a dozen different sections. During the day fifty were injured. Several may die.

The worst riot was at Twelfth and Walnut streets, right in the heart of the city. There a mob of about 3,000 men and boys drove the crew from a car, beat the policeman who was on guard upon the front platform and then started to shove the car off the tracks. One hundred policemen on motor trucks were whirled down there and a squad of mounted men, twenty-five strong, followed with their horses at full gallop.

Fifteen are Injured.

It was the most warlike scene since the beginning of the strike. For a few minutes the policemen seemed lost in the midst of a mob, but gradually they appeared again, driving everything in front of them. They were ahead of the mounted men. The latter rising in a line abreast that swept the street and swinging their clubs like swords, came as a welcome reinforcement.

When Walnut and Twelfth streets were cleared about fifteen persons were found to be hurt from clubs and horses hoofs. The car had all its windows shattered, and neither its crew nor its bluecoated guardian could be found in the neighborhood.

The crowd moved away slowly and as it went it threw bricks and stones at the windows and panes of every car along Walnut street, from Twelfth east to Seventh. Passengers fled in fright, and in a few minutes there was so much glass along the asphalt that automobiles had to take to other highways. Many of the strike-breaking crews deserted their cars and "double-headers" were the rule, with one crew doing the work of two.

Trouble All Over City.

From that time on until late to-night there have been innumerable fights, some large, some small, all over town. What with "sympathy strikers" who went out at midnight on the general walk-out which had been planned all week, and other working people who had the afternoon and evening off because it was Saturday, there were tremendous crowds of men and boys on the streets with nothing to do but look for trouble and mix in it whenever it appeared.

Police Superintendent Taylor, on his way back from the Twelfth and Walnut riot in a racing automobile, ran down and seriously injured James Espegito, a boy. A great crowd gathered about the machine and there were ugly murmurings for a few minutes until his identity and the fact that the happening was a pure accident became known.

Calls began to pour into the City Hall from Kensington in the northeast; Southwark in southwest, and from distant points of West Philadelphia.

These continued until well into the evening and a total list of wounded—several persons may die—wolud reach perhaps fifty. There were more than 100 arrests.

The strikers to-day issued the following invitation: "To the working people of Philadelphia: By order of the general strike committee of the Central Labor Union and Building Trades Council, you are requested to assemble at Independence Square Saturday afternoon, March 5, to participate peaceably in a demonstration in behalf of the Street Car Men's Union now on strike."

As soon as this appeared in the evening newspapers a general movement was begun toward the historic old park where the Revolutionists assembled in 1876 and over which the tone of the Liberty Bell sounded fight to Great Britain.

Mayor Reyburn immediately issued a proclamation, which an extra of the newspapers rushed out a few minutes later. He called upon the people to obey the laws and announced that he had ordered the Director of the Department of Public Safety to direct the officers in command of the police to enforce the act commonly called "the riot act," and to use all necessary force and means whatever to disperse unlawful assemblages.

Parade Was Orderly.

At the same time Reyburn ordered Director of Public Safety Clay to concentrate 1,000 policemen at Independence square. They looked like a whole army as they marched down Chestnut street with riot clubs held at "right shoulder."

These actions the Mayor and director thought would put an instant stop to the demonstration. The strikers and their friends assembled at Thirteenth and Market streets, moved south to Chestnut street, and, marching four abreast and waving American flags, proceeded to Independence Hall.

"Make no noise and creat no disorder," was the order they had from their leaders, C. O. Pratt, the organizer of the carmen, and John J. Murphy, president of the Central Labor Union.

As a car manned by strikebreakers passed through the ranks, a few hot heads hooted, but generaly the parade was quiet. As the strikers passed the doors of the hall through whose glass panels could be seen the old cracked bell they raised their hats and waved their flags.

Once or twice the parade halted and then the 1,000 policemen moved forward and ordered the men to keep moving. West on Chestnut, the march went to the City Hall at Broad. There it dispersed. When the union men—who could be distinguished by their uniforms and badges—departed about their business the sympathizers began the work of lawlessness.

The general strike which went in effect at midnight has taken away from their jobs, according to the estimate of the labor leaders, between 55,000 and 70,000 men. The police say the number only reaches about 30,000. Few important industries are affected.

No matter which is true, there have been ominous looking bands of idle ones passing through the streets in almost every section of the city since morning. It did not take much to stir them into action and before long the Rapid Transit Company deemed it wise not to run many cars.

The officials gave out a statement that they had 1,050 cars in operation, but there really couldn't have been many more than 500.

RUSSELL CASE NEAR END.

William C. on Stand Again at Opening Monday.

The great Russell will case is drawing to a close. William C. Russell, the Melrose recluse and present custodian of the entire estate for which the Dakota ranchman claiming to be Daniel Blake Russell, a brother, is fighting for a half share, takes the witness stand again to-morrow. "My re-direct examination of Mr Russell will be brief," said Attorney Nason last night. Nason said that he expected to offer little more evidence. Then Attorney Simpson, for Daniel Blake Russell, will offer his rebuttal evidence. The final arguments by Nason and Simpson will bring the greatest will case New England has ever known to a close.

GERMANS TO GO FOR SOUTH POLE

Geographical Society Plans Expedition to Rival Plans of English.

BERLIN, March 5.—Germany is going after the South Pole. The Geographical Society meet this evening to discuss plans for an expedition and lay out a tentative campaign. Lieutenant Shackleton, the British Antarctic explorer, recently lectured to the society on his expedition, and this greatly stimulated interest in the project.

BRITAIN WATCHING PINCHOT

Controversy Creating Great Interest, Says Alaskan Consul.

NEW YORK, March 5.—Colonel Stuart Weatherby, British vice-consul at Nome, Alaska, who arrived on the Lusitania today, said there was intense interest in England in the Ballinger-Pinchot controversy and in the sifting of the Alaskan coal claims.

"The matter is arousing as much interest in England as it is here," he said. "One reason for this is the large number of claims by British capitalists which preceded the Cunningham and the Guggenheim claims. I think the general sentiment in Alaska is with the claimants."

Fr. McKeon to Meet Friends.

Rev. Father McKeon of Mayo, Ireland, who has been sent by his bishop to America in behalf of a fund for building a Catholic chapel at Straide, the birth and burial place of Michael Davitt, wishes to meet his friends next Thursday evening. The reception will be held in Unity Hall, No. 724 Washington street, at 8 o'clock. Father McKeon desires that all who have booklets for the promotion of his fund will return them to him that evening.

CASH REWARD TO HEAD OFF CUPID

Chicago Phone Girls Wed So Rapidly Management Is Driven Distracted.

> $100 REWARD.
> To anyone who will tell us how to prevent our operators from marrying we will pay one hundred dollars ($100).
> Chicago Telephone Company.

CHICAGO, March 5.—This is a real offer. Cupid is keeping up a constant warfare on the hearts of the Chicago telephone girls and, according to H. N. Foster, traffic manager of the company, the loss is something appalling. He is responsible for the notice.

"But, don't the Government statistics from Washington say that 92 per cent. of the telephone girls in the United States are unmarried?" he was asked.

"Sure thing," he said. "But statistics sometimes are foolish. The moment an operator gets married she isn't a telephone girl any longer. Let the Bureau of Labor give us the number of former operators who now are married and I'll venture to say its percentages will be reversed.

"Twenty-five per cent. of our girls are married every year. Practically all the changes we make in our force are made necessary by the inroads of Cupid. It is the eternal question with us how to prevent our girls from marrying, and if anybody thinks our offer of a reward for a preventive scheme is a joke let him come across with a feasible plan and see how quick he'll get his $100."

Presbyterians to Hear Taft.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 5.—President Taft to-day accepted an invitation to address the meeting of the Presbyterian General Assembly on May 2 at Atlantic City, N. J.

"ANANIAS CLUB" IS IGNORED IN PLAN FOR ROOSEVELT WELCOME

NEW YORK, March 5.—When the reception committee of seventy-five, headed and selected by Mayor William J. Gaynor, lines up at the dock next July to shake the hand of that distinguished statesman, author, philosopher, orator, political economist, globe trotter and big game hunter, Colonel T. Roosevelt, there will be a few familiar faces missing from the very front row.

The members of the "In Bad Club" will not be present officially or unofficially; neither will there be representatives from the various branches of these large organizations, the Ananias Club, the Nature Fakers' Club and the Short and Ugly Club. Neither will that other organization, the Malefactors of Great Wealth, be present officially, though they may send flowers.

Among the Missing:

Where, for instance, will be the whiskered countenance of former Senator William E. Chandler of New Hampshire, founder, first member and past noble grand of the Ananias Club?

In the beginning President Roosevelt was said to have said something which he afterward denied. The ex-Senator, known for years as "The Wasp of the United States Senate," originated this grand American order by passing the buck right back to the White House while hot.

"There is fortunately circumstantial evidence," said Chandler," of a high order, which proves that the President could not have omitted to make, in substance, the statement which he now denies."

In the best circles this sort of a thing is known as wrapping the sledge hammer in verbal velvet. The President felt the bump, however, and immediately made William E. Chandler the founder of the Ananias Club.

About the same time Senators Tillman and Bailey were sent down the chute to keep Chandler company and to make it a foursome. Secretary of War Wright, becoming embroiled over a matter of eight West Point cadets found the runway greased for him, and thereafter there were enough members of the Ananias club to make whist possible.

How Hemenway Landed.

Then there is the Hon. James A. Hemenway of Indiana. "If they nominate that man again," said the gentleman from Indiana, "I will take off my coat, collar and tie and go on the stump in every county in my State and tell the people what kind of a——"

And then the gentleman became unprintable. When the Honorable Hemenway opened his eyes, he found he had been elected to the growing young organization.

Then, too, there are Dr. Albert W. Ferris and Dr. Wilgus, who were jointly elected because they took a wallop at the secretary of commerce and labor.

Then there are the representatives of the other distinguished branch of scientists who have been decorated with the Presidential uppercut—the nature fakirs.

When the Ananias club began to languish the President cast about him for some means of recruiting an organization of a like nature to affiliate with the parent body. Picking up a book one day written by the Rev. William J. Long, faunal naturalist, the President found a statement to the effect that a wolf had bitten a caribou fawn to death.

"Of all the nature fakirs," said the president, for publication, "the most reckless and the least responsible is Mr. Long. I am dealing with deliberate invention, deliberate perversion of fact."

Whereupon the reverend gentleman became the charter member of the Nature Fakirs club, not, however, without a struggle.

The Gay Procession Ends.

Jack London came next. Jack wrote about a bulldog which whipped a wolf. The President allowed as how a bulldog can't whip a wolf. Mr. Lonodn made only one answer to this criticism.

"Bring on your wolf."

The President did not bring on the wolf, but he mentioned Jack as a worthy mate for the Reverend Long.

Charles D. Roberts also came in for a light tap on the jaw.

These gentlemen will not be on the dock when the Colonel marches down the gang plank. London may send his bull dog.

There is also the sole surviving French member of the "Short and Ugly Club," M. Jean de Bunnefan went over to Naples and sent back an interview with the Colonel on his way to Africa.

"Never saw him," said the Colonel. "Never said it. Never heard of his paper. He's elected."

These are a few of the gentlemen who were not named by Mayor Gaynor.

HOUSE GIVEN A SCARE.

Detectives Looking for Senders of Dynamite Warning.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—Postoffice department detectives were to-day turned loose on the trail of the committee which had the temerity to threaten members of the House of Representatives with dynamite, demanding that the cost of living be lowered. There are a few trembling hearts in the House to-day. The little missives informed the members of the House that food prices are beyond the reach of those who must labor for a living. The letters were postmarked Chicago, and as dynamite bombs have become a favorite form of amusement there, certain Representatives feel rather nervous about the "warning."

MEGAPHONE TO WARN DRINKERS IN OASIS IN CHELSEA

"Floor Walkers" to Tell Thirsty "Last Car Is Now Moving."

"LAST car for Lynn! Drink up!"

"You'll lose the car for Danvers, sir, if you don't hurry; we'll be open next week, however."

"Gentlemen from Salem and Beverly have time for two rounds before their car is due!"

That's what the megaphone is going to say in the Chelsea bar rooms this Summer—at least in the four big places in process of construction on the Revere border—and it isn't the last of the improvements that Commissioners Lawrence, Norton and Burns have in mind for the accommodation of visitors from the dry territory to the north.

The bars of the four places on the Chelsea border line will be the longest in the world. This will obviate standing three deep before a short bar, and this, in its turn, will obviate many a Saturday night quarrel.

Seventy-three gentlemen have applied for the thirty-seven licenses to be awarded on the last night of April. They have been told just what the Commission will expect of them.

No woman must be allowed in a Chelsea bar room.

No woman must be given a drink in the establishment of a man who sells goods only in bottles.

No woman must be served liquor in any place except a licensed restaurant, to which she has resorted as a bona fide guest for a bona fide meal.

Rules and regulations must be printed and posted in English, Yiddish and Polish.

Brewers Can't Get In.

Licensees must be the real owners of their own places. Twenty-dollars-a-week clerks will not be allowed to conduct in their own names Chelsea saloons really owned by breweries.

The sale of liquor to men who have "had enough" is going to be eliminated if the Commission has to eliminate every saloon in the city.

A special policeman, detailed from the regular force, will be under the orders of the License Board. He will see that rules and regulations are obeyed to the letter. He will report daily to the License Board, and not to the Chief of Police.

Men who have a license of the first class and a license of the fourth class (A) will pay $1,750 for the privilege.

Chelsea, it was announced yesterday by the License Commissioners, will make a special effort this year to take care of the rush from the Torrid Country. Being the only Wet Territory for miles and miles around, Chelsea expects a flood.

"And so," Chairman Abbott Lawrence said last night, "we shall attempt to place four licenses close to the five-cent line and hard by the Chelsea-Revere boundary. This is the Mill Hill district. There were eleven places in that section two years ago. It was thought that safety lay in numbers. This year we shall try a new tack.

Drink and Get Car, Too.

"The board has already in mind two men who will put up the kind of buildings and the sort of bars we want. We have said to these gentlemen that in case they get their licenses we should also like to have them announce the arrival of street cars bound for Lynn, Revere, Saugus, Danvers, Peabody and so on.

"'This suggestion holds good only in the Mill Hill section.' It may not affect more than these four bars. The reason for making it is the nuisance brought about by throngs of men from dry territory, especially on Saturday night, who would overflow into the street and block the sidewalk against ordinary travel.

"Every one of these places will have a 'floor' man. It will be a simple matter for him, having little more to do than look across the street to the car barn, to sing out that the car for Lynn is at the door."

It is looked upon as practically certain in Chelsea that Gus Hubbner and Pat Claffey will again have the "outpost" saloon. They have the carpenters at work. They will build the longest bar in Massachusetts, probably the longest in the civilized world.

Old Spring Is Back To Linger for Awhile

And the Weather Man Says Today Will Be "Fair," So Why Not Cheer Up?

"Oh, Lil, I'm so glad to see you. How's the folks?"

"Fine and dandy. Ain't it a swell day? I'm so glad Spring has come; ain't you?"

Spoken between two gum-chewing girls in Washington street in yesterday's mid-afternoon, the day was thus described. Nothing that Bill Shakespeare ever penned would have done it better.

It was sure one big, grand day, and no more joyous welcome was ever given to one long-absent friend than Boston and New England gave to their several-months' departed friend, old etherial Spring.

Ethereal seemed right glad to get back North, too. But his friend, the Weather Man, speaking for Eth, said it wasn't any too sure of being a very long visit. Ethereal brought several robins to the Common and the parks, while delegations of escorting bluejays were made welcome in the country districts. Pussy Willows were out in E. S.'S honor, and other indications of his visit were everywhere evident.

It was the warmest March 5 in Boston in eleven years, and at the Weather station it was predicted that it will be still warmer this week. The highest temperature yesterday was 56 degrees, at 3 p. m.

It is due to be fair to-day, with unsettled but probably fair weather to-morrow, when it will be somewhat warmer. The winds will be westerly to southerly.

In fact, it was fair yesterday throughout the country, except at Winnipeg, St. Paul and Duluth, where light rains fell. There was no snow anywhere in the United States. In the lake region the weather conditions were almost summery.

LOBSTERS ON THE WAY.

Forty-eight Tons of Fish Saturday's Record.

A lot of fish reached T wharf yesterday and more is on the way, with lobsters in a plentiful supply promised for to-morrow. About forty-eight tons were in the nine vessels which tied to old T wharf, about all the dealers desired for the day. In the vessels were 57,000 pounds of haddock, 10,000 of cod, 6,000 pollock, 17,000 hake, 6,000 cusk.

Prices were: Haddock, $4.25 per 100 pounds; cod, $4.75 for large, $3.75 for market cod; pollock, $3.75; large hake, $6.25; small hake, $4.25; cusk, $3.50.

CHARGE TRICKERY IN BIG CHECKER MATCH

Banks Accused of Getting the Secret Manuscript from Boston Man.

TOLEDO, O., March 5.—A decided sensation was created here to-day at the Banks-Henderson match for the checker championship when J. J. Lannin, a wealthy New Yorker and backer of Hugh Henderson of Pittsburg, openly accused Newell Banks of Detroit, who is leading, with having access to Henderson's manuscript of plays, owned by Isaiah Barker of Boston. Lannin's remarks followed Friday night's game, in which Banks, after a bad start, made a draw by a series of moves known only to Henderson until that time and recorded in the manuscript.

Henderson coached Charles F. Barker of Boston for his match with Drouillard of Kansas City. During this coaching Henderson, Barker and Lannin, who backed Barker, compiled a lot of plays and put them in manuscript form. Shortly after the match Charles Barker died, and the manuscript fell into the hands of his brother Isaiah. Previous to the Banks-Henderson match, Lannin asked Barker for the manuscript, but he refused to give it up for less than $300. Lannin refused to pay more than $50.

Banks' supporters are indignant over the accusation and claim it is a ruse to rattle Banks. Banks himself says:

"The charge is an absolute lie from beginning to end. They are attempting to rattle me, but will not succeed and when this match is over I may have some sensations to spring."

FALLS 40 FEET; SPURNS AID.

Injured Man Walks Quarter Mile to Home; Rejects Ambulance.

STAMFORD, Ct., March 5.—Spurning an ambulance Edward Prendergast, a lather, walked a quarter of a mile to his home on Chapel street this afternoon, a priest on one side of him and his brother assisting on the other. Mr. Prendergast fell on the inside of a house forty feet or more and landing on his hands in a pile of sand, escaped serious injury. The physicians found Prendergast sitting up in the sand and holding his head.

De Sagan Denies He Is Bankrupt

PARIS, March 5.—The Duke of Tallyrand and of Sagan, better known as the Prince De Sagan, denies the report from Berlin that he has been declared a bankrupt or that he has any intention of going to Germany to live.

Second Attack On Peary in Congress

Representative Macon of Arkansas Says "Whole Thing is a Farce."

WASHINGTON, March 5.—Representative Macon of Arkansas made a bitter attack on Commander Robert E. Peary, U. S. N., to-day while discussing the failure of Congress to reward the explorer for his reported discovery of the North Pole. Mr. Macon said:

"I am against any legislation made in the dark. Furthermore, if this committee decides in favor of Peary without inspecting the full records and making them public, I will expose the whole business on the floor of the House, or in a statement to the press. If we reward Mr. Peary, the American people have a right to know what we are rewarding him for.

"The committee has requested him to submit his proofs and he has absolutely refused to have his documents made public. I am not and I don't believe any member of the committee or any member of Congress is willing to pass legislation without proper grounds for doing so. I am beginning to believe the whole thing is a farce. He might have reached the 'farthest North,' but he will have to show us that he discovered the Pole. The whole matter ought to be exposed."

PEARY WINS WORLD.

Geographic Society Says All Scientists Accept Discovery.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—The verdict of the National Geographic Society that Peary reached the North Pole has been accepted by practically the whole scientific world. The society has issued a statement showing that its findings have been approved by the geographic and scientific bodies of eight countries located at London, Paris, Berlin, Vienna, Rome, Brussels, Antwerp, Geneva, Dresden and St. Petersburg. According to the announcement made to-day by the society, Peary, after speaking before the Royal Geographic Society of London on May 4, will speak in Paris, Berlin, Vienna, Rome, Brussels, Antwerp, Geneva, Dresden and St. Petersburg. It has been decided by the London, Vienna and Rome societies to present Mr. Peary with medals.

FARMAN'S NEW RECORD.

Flies Over Two Hours in Machine of His Own Make.

PARIS, March 5.—A new world's aeroplane record was established to-day at Mourmal by Henri Farman, in a machine of his own construction. He flew an hour and two minutes with two passengers. He manoeuvred without trouble against heavy wind for the last quarter of an hour, the biplane being under perfect control

TAFT STARTS REVOLT IN HIS HOME STATE

Conditions Reach Point Where Party Doesn't Want the President's Aid.

CLEVELAND, March 5.—President Taft and the national administration are face to face with wholesale desertion by Ohio Republicans. Swiftly moving events about the State Capitol to-day furnished positive evidence that State officers, Assembly leaders, candidates for important places on the State ticket and members of the State committee are bailing out the life boats. They purpose to save themselves.

In a single day the back from Elba movement has gained noticeable impetus in the home State of the President. What is now characterized as the "Black Friday" declarations of the President in which he washed his hands of all responsibility for the selection of State Chairman Wade H. Ellis and repudiated the Republican legislative program have started a real revolution.

The Republicans who are occupying more or less conspicuous places in the State House, Legislature and organizations have agreed to act for themselves on their own responsibility. For the present, at least, they announce that no more advice will be sought from the White House and none will be accepted.

The feeling of insecurity reported existing among members of the Ohio delegation at Washington has spread among Republicans.

WORLD A FLOWER GARDEN.

Miss Dawson Urges "Horticulture as Profession for Women."

The whole world, including Holyoke, is going to be a great flower garden some day. Miss Laura Blanchard Dawson of Jamaica Plain conveyed the flower garden thought yesterday, speaking in Horticultural Hall on "Horticulture as a Profession for Women." Miss Dawson said that the flower business is a very pleasing and profitable business for women. She prophesied that in the future women will have a part in the making of the world into a whole flower garden.

Urge Dry Docks at Portsmouth.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., March 5.—Representatives of New Hampshire at Washington will try to convince the Navy Department that the Government has the only land now in its possession, Seavey's Island, Portsmouth harbor, where suitable dry docks can be built to take the big 27,000-ton battleships recommended by Secretary Meyer of the Navy.

LOUIS JAMES DEAD OF HEART DISEASE

Noted Actor Stricken in Dressing Room of Theatre at Helena, Montana.

HELENA, Mont., March 5.—Louis James, the actor, died here to-day. He was stricken with heart disease in his dressing room at the Helena Theatre last night and his life was despaired of. The performance was cancelled and Mr. James was removed to his hotel.

Louis James was born in Tremont, Ill., in 1842. His parents were Benjamin F. and Almira James. When he was 22 years old he joined McCauley's stock company, Louisville, Ky., and later acted at Mrs. John Drew's Arch street theatre, Philadelphia, in 1865-70. In 1871 he was at Augustin Daly's Fifth Avenue Theatre.

He was afterward connected with McGuire's San Francisco, Ford's Baltimore, and then with the Boston Theatre. He was leading man with Lawrence Barrett for five years, and starred with Joseph Jefferson in 1891-1892. He starred with Frederick Ward until 1895 and has since then been with Wagenhals & Kemper. He was married to Lillian Scanlon in 1871, who died in 1876. He then married Aphie Hendricks in Philadelphia.

He owned much property in Kansas City, but he made his home in Long Branch, N. J., where he also had extensive interests.

DRIVER THROWN, INJURED.

Fall From Cab Seat Results in Broken Hip.

Robert McGregor of No. 14 Freeman street, Brookline, a hack driver for the Bradbury Livery Stables, that town, was thrown from the seat of his cab at 10 o'clock last night while driving in Lincoln street, Brighton. The hack lurched while it was passing over a crossing. The driver's left hip was broken and his right shoulder was strained. Policeman [illegible] stopped the horses when they started to run.

Minstrel Show at Salem.

The Father Matthew Society of Salem will give a minstrel show early in April. In addition to bright music by a mixed chorus of 150 voices, there will be many novelties, among them a pony ballet. William H. McSweeney is to be musical director.

Governor Fears for Life, Asks for Guard

Pothier Afraid Cranks, Who Have Killed Three in Three Months, Will Take Him Next.

PROVIDENCE, March 5.—Because three atrocious murders have been committed in this State by "cranks" within three months, Governor Aram J. Pothier to-day had High Sheriff Hunter assign him a special bodyguard at his offices in the State House. It is the first time that this has been done in Rhode Island.

Sheriff Hunter assigned Deputy Sheriff Hugh F. McCusker to the place for the present, but later a regular officer will be created.

GOOD-BYE TO SUPERFLUOUS HAIR

Lady Will Send Free to Any Sufferer the Secret Which Cured Her.

From childhood I was distressed and humiliated by an unwelcome growth of hair on my face and arms. I tried all the depilatories, powders, liquids, creams and other rubon preparations I ever heard of, only to make it worse. For weeks I suffered the electric needle without being rid of my blemish. I spent a great deal of money on various things in vain, until a friend recommended a simple preparation which succeeded where all else failed.

This simple remedy, a harmless soluble liquid, enabled me permanently to find entire relief from all trace of unwelcome hair, and forever end all embarassment. It is simple, safe, sure and can be used privately at home, without fear of pain or blemish. It makes the electric needle entirely unnecessary.

I will tell in detail full particulars to enable any other sufferer to achieve the same happy results as I did. All I ask is a two-cent stamp for reply. Address Caroline Osgood, 113 S. Old P. O. street, Providence, R. I.

TOO LATE

How many people you meet who tell you that they "once had good teeth, but let them go so long without taking care of them that they finally lost them."

Are you neglecting your teeth? They may not ache and they may not be loose, and still they may need attention. Tartar and disease are slow moving attacks on your teeth and gums.

A thorough dental cleaning of teeth and gums for $1 may save you endless cost and trouble later on. We employ only registered expert dental operators. No students. Don't forget that half of the stomach troubles are caused by bad teeth—failure to masticate properly and improper salivation. And it can all be remedied so easily, if taken in time.

Examination free. If your teeth require treatment, we will say so. If they are all right, we will tell you so. We are not always looking for trouble. We spend most of our energy trying to prevent it.

HALF MILLION DOLLAR BLAZE IN WOOL DISTRICT GIVES FIREMEN HARD FIGHT

Dozen Men Injured in Battling With Flames Which Destroy 6-Story New England Building on Lower Summer Street

Five Alarms Call Out Greater Part of the Department and Thousands of People Pack Dewey Square to Watch Blaze

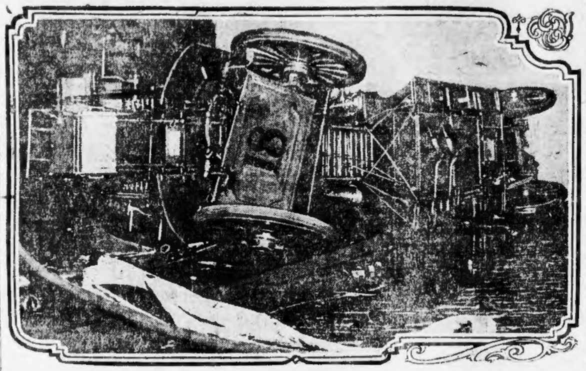
Picture by American photographer of Ladder Truck No. 18, after it had tipped over when Water Tower No. 1 was being placed in position in front of the burning building on Summer street. The ladder attached to the truck was leaning against the window on the fifth story, when the wheel of the tower struck body of the truck it careened and fell to the sidewalk, causing the truck to turn turtle.



crevice of the towering New England building. Out of the Hathaway building, which stands to the north, ran a number of excited girls. They had been apprised of the fire by John H. Vaughan, the watchman of the New England building.

Vaughan was on the third floor when he discovered a blaze near an elevator in offices occupied by the Boston Rubber Company.

He did not stop to fight the flames, but dashed over a bridge to the Hathaway Building, yelling "Fire!" at the top of his voice. He kept running until he reached a fire box in Dewey square. He yanked the box and then hastened back to the building.

It was only a few minutes until the down-town section of the city echoed to the clang of the fire gong. Deputy Chief John Grady was the first to reach the burned building. He ran into the structure, took a hasty survey of the situation, ran out again and shouted to his aide:

"Pull a second—pull it quick!"

By this time Boston's Fire Chief, John A. Mullen, had reached the scene. The flames had found material to their liking and were flaring out of the windows and reaching up with covetous darts to the roof. The electric globes in the street looked like lighted matches beside the illumination that was lighting the sky. One glance was enough for Mullen.

Fifth Alarm Sent In.

"Send a fourth alarm," he cried to his assistant, skipping the third. The man had hardly returned when Chief Mullen decided that a fifth alarm was required to meet the dangerous situation. This was sent in, and about all of the fire apparatus of the city responded. This brought two fire boats, even, to the rescue. The boats lay at the Summer street bridge while their men landed and helped handle the hose wherever they got a chance to lend a hand.

Police reserves swept down to the fire and had their hands filled trying to push the crowd back out of the way of the firemen. They finally crowded them to the sidewalk across from the burning building and then roped off Summer street from the north.

Water Tower No. 1 rolled up and stopped in front of the building. It was in charge of Lieutenant Charles Long and Hoseman John Williams. They directed a giant stream squarely into the flames, where they glowed fiercest. Through the windows they played the deluge, now and then turning to the Hathaway Building to quench flames that tried to eat away the awnings and then to the Estes Building on the other side, where the blaze was trying to reach. The giant tower has a reach of 100 feet on either side and the water was played about in sizzling streams with masterly hands.

Just as the tower was starting its effective work an accident occurred as a result of which six firemen had a narrow escape with their lives. Lieutenant William McCorkle and a force of his men were hoisting their ladder near the curb. It had reached the sixth floor where it held when the tall tower bumped into it. The ladder was loosed and fell with a crash, upsetting the wagon, and barely missing the laddermen at its base. Had the men been hit they would without doubt have been crushed to death.

Fought Flames From Roofs.

So fierce were the flames that it was with the greatest difficulty that the firemen gained strategic points from which to combat them. They got into the Hathaway Building and carried hose to the roof and from that vantage ground poured tons of water into the boiling cauldron.

There were fully a dozen men on the roof. Half that number stopped at the fourth floor of the same building and shot their hose through the side windows from that height. These men made a grand sight as they stood outlined at that great elevation and fought the daring, writhing, hissing flames. On the Estes Building roof was another heroic band. Their position was more perilous. The flames leaped across from the New England Building and ignited the roof upon which the men stood. They faced the fire that seemed to be licking their faces and poured streams so persistently into it that they drove it back to the structure from which it came.

Then from the black mass of people in the street there rose a mighty cheer that must have been sweet music to the hearts of the men who were on the firing line, mere specks in the sky, so high they were above the applauding multitudes in the street.

No sooner had these salvos died down than Ladderman Stephen King of Company 8 caused the air to split with outbursts from the appreciative on-lookers. King, in the glare of vicious flames that darted around him, climbed the ladder to the fifth floor. He carried a hose over his shoulder to train it through an upper window.

Building a Roaring Furnace.

When he reached the fifth floor the flames shot out the window and wrapped him in a crimson mantle. King pulled his helmet over his face, twisted his leg about the ladder, turned the water from the nozzle upon his enemy and drowned it while shouts of the delighted throng could be heard for blocks.

Within ten minutes after the fire started the whole front of the building was a roaring furnace. The flames reached from the second floor to the roof. On the sixth floor was the publishing office of L. C. Page. In his rooms were inks and other chemicals. A gas explosion that seemed to come from that direction shook the structure, and was followed by crashing glass from about all of the unbroken windows in the front of the building. Immediately following this there was a snow of paper of various kinds that had been shot as though from giant cannons from the windows. Even a number of new books were put into rapid circulation in a way that the publishers would not approve.

The flames that came from the windows of the publishing house were curiously colored, now blue, now green and now fiery red. It was a picturesque show of fireworks, lending a color that to the blaze that caused varied comment.

After an hour's steady work the firemen began to breathe easier. They saw that they had the fire under control. Then for the first time it looked as though it would be safe for a force of fire fighters to enter the burning building itself. The daring feat fell to the lot of Captain Jeremiah H. Gilden, Lieutenant Michael Teehan and Cornelius Murphy. The two former are from Engine No. 7, while Murphy is from Engine No. 39. Through the blinding smoke they made their way into the basement and then groped up the stairways to the third floor.

Wall Crashed Under Them.

The trio had just started to play a stream of water upon the conflagration from the inside when part of a wall crashed to the floor upon which they were standing. All three of the men were knocked down. They were almost buried in the debris. Other members of Engine No. 7 who had heard the noise and realized that their brother firemen had been hurt, if not killed, rushed to their help.

The three bruised and bleeding victims wer carried from the building and medical aid was hurriedly summoned. Gilden was taken to Grace Hospital, Teehan was carried across to the terminal station, where Dr. McGrath gave him temporary relief. Then he was taken to Grace Hospital also. Murphy was removed to the Relief station.

Shortly before 10 o'clock Chief Mullen was satisfied that the fire was so completely in hand that some of the big force of apparatus that had been called out was returned to take sections that had been stripped of protection when the fifth alarm was turned in. Other apparatus was gradually directed from the scene, and when midnight arrived there were but few streams playing upon the blackened walls of the ruins.

But little damage by fire was done to either the Estey or Hathaway buildings. These were flooded by water, however, and suffered considerably in consequence.

The Property Losses.

Occupants of the New England Building who sustained losses were:

Basement—T. F. Rich, wool merchant; Jackson & Co., wool merchants.

First floor—W. A. Blanchard & Co., wool merchants; Hygiene barber shop; Henderson & Co., wool merchants, damaged by water.

Second floor—T. Remick & Co., wool merchants; Eiseman Bros., wool merchants; Ringley, Gardner & Co., wool merchants; Elmer H. King, worsted yarns; Direct Shoe Company, damaged by water.

Third floor—James H. Patton, wool merchant; Best Shoe Company, Boston Rubber Company, Gleason Electric Company, Commonwealth Instrument Company, burned out.

Fourth floor: Wright Bros., wool merchants; H. P. Simonds & Co., wool merchants; Fred P. Call Company. Burned out.

Fifth floor: Barney Vinal Company, wool merchants; Schwarzchild & Sulzberger Company, wool merchants; Purcell & Dooner, wool merchants. Burned out.

Seventh floor: Frank H. Ryder Company, Denals, Estabrook X Co., Charles T. E. Burke. Burned out.

Fleeson a Fire Hero.

One of the heroes of the fire was John W. Fleeson, a Boston Postoffice mechanic, who risked his life to save the valuable United States mail that had been dropped down the long chute in the building. Here is Fleeson's graphic story of his experience:

"I was rushed to the building as soon as we heard it was afire. I responded to the second alarm. The fire was burning on the third floor when I reached the building. I ran through the door. When I got in the water that was being poured in great sheets on the flames poured down upon me. The fire was spreading on the first floor. The flames shot up all around me. I was driven back to the blanket of fire at the doorway.

"I didn't give it up. I tried again. The smoke was getting thicker and thicker. I could hear the crackling of the flames that were eating their way upward on all sides. I crawled on my hands and knees. I heard a crash and when I looked up a chunk of iron struck me on my head. Only my hat saved me from serious injury, I guess. I was hurt a little, but it will be all right.

"I was stunned for a minute. It seemed like an hour to me. I was soaked to the skin. My throat was choked with the smoke. It seemed unbearable. I could hardly breathe. I crawled up to the bottom of the mail chute. I found my key and worked it into the lock. The lock wouldn't open. I tried and tried, but it must have been twisted out of shape by the heat.

"Another piece of wood hit me on the head. My hands were blistered and my hair was burned. I crawled out to the door and was struck again by flying embers. I thanked God when I got out into the air."

Ambulances Kept Busy.

Deputy Chief Peter F. McDonough's automobile collided with the hose wagon of Engine No. 23 at Atlantic avenue and Summer street while on the way to the fire. T. W. Deveney, the chauffeur, was struck by the pole of the wagon and injured about the shoulder. He was treated by a doctor. One of the horses was injured about the legs and removed to a stable.

Three men who were standing alongside a ladder truck on Summer street, directly opposite the Hathaway building, were ordered to move on by a policeman and because they gave him back talk were placed under arrest.

Ambulances from the Relief Station were stationed in Dewey square, and the doctors did meritorious work in caring for injured firemen.

Fire Commissioner Parker was early on the scene and complimented the firemen. Chief Mullen was here, there and everywhere giving orders to the men. He was ably assisted by Deputy Chief Grady and District Chiefs Sennott and McDonough and the captains of the several companies.

During the fire the surface car traffic along Atlantic avenue and the Summer street bridge was sent over other lines. The Atlantic avenue cars were sent through Federal, Franklin and Milk streets to Washington, while the Summer street bridge cars were sent up Washington street to the Broadway extension bridge.

The Elevated train service on the Atlantic avenue branch was also affected and for over two hours no trains were run. The trains were stopped shortly after the fire began and were started again at about 9:30.

PASTOR'S WIFE HAD SERIOUS CASE OF GRIP---CURED BY PE-RU-NA

Pastor Himself Cured of Bad Case of Catarrh. All Other Efforts Failed.

Catarrh and La Grippe.

Rev. Geo. A. E. Troutman, Mt. Washington, Mo., writes: "My wife and I are strong believers in Peruna.

REV. GEORGE A. E. TROUTMAN

I was cured of a bad case of catarrh when nothing else that I tried had any effect. My wife was cured from a severe case of la grippe, and we feel that the least we can do is to gratefully acknowledge the merit of Peruna.

"My wife joins me in sending best wishes for your success."

Throat Trouble.

Rev. H. W. Tate, 920 Lincoln Avenue, Walnut Hills, Cincinnati, Ohio, writes: "For several years I have been troubled with a peculiar spasmodic affection of the throat. It would seize me suddenly and for a few minutes I would be unable to speak audibly, and my breath would be greatly interfered with. I would be obliged to gasp for breath.

"I finally concluded that it was some catarrhal affection which probably excited the spasm. It interfered with my vocation as a preacher, attacking me occasionally in the pulpit.

"I had heard so much about Peruna as a catarrh remedy that I determined to try it. After taking two bottles, my trouble has disappeared. I feel sure that Peruna has greatly benefited me."

Rev. P. E. Swanstrom, Swedish Baptist Pastor, Box 228, Grantsburg, Wis., writes that from the use of Peruna he is perfectly well, entirely cured of chronic diarrhea and catarrh.

Peruna in Tablet Form.

For two years Dr. Hartman and his assistants have incessantly labored to create Peruna in tablet form, and their strenuous labors have just been crowned with success. People who object to liquid medicines can now secure Peruna Tablets, which represent the medicinal ingredients of Peruna. Each tablet is equivalent to one average dose of Peruna.

POLICE APOLOGIZE TO WOMAN OFFICER ARRESTED

School Visitor's Case Is Being Investigated by Commissioner O'Meara.

when friends of mine came in and identified me. Patrolman Sweetland was then sent for, and soon after he came to the station house I was released. The officer apologized.

"My arrest was an outrage and an insult. I have the greatest respect for Commissioner O'Meara of the Boston police department. I have not thought how the patrolman should be punished, because I feel that this is a part of Commissioner O'Meara's work. That is what he is in office for. I am assured that official action will be taken.

Attorney said:

"I have spoken to Commissioner O'Meara in regard to Miss Beck's arrest and I assume that he will take official action. It seems unfortunate to me that this affair should be tried out in the newspapers before official action is taken. Miss Beck was driven to the station house. It was obvious that she was not intoxicated and she was not booked by Lieutenant Allen. She was not detained long. My sister is interested in the work carried on in the Industrial School, and that is how I came to advise Miss Beck in this matter."

The Officer's Story.

Patrolman Sweetland said: "I believed that Miss Beck was under the influence of liquor when I arrested her. I know that it is a humiliation for any person to be arrested, and I have always been careful. I have never done a wrong thing since I have been on the force, more than eight years. This time I suppose I got in bad, for a complaint has been made against me and I suppose that I will be tried.

"A week ago Friday night I was talking with my wife who happened to meet me on Hanover street. She was on her way home, after buying theatre tickets. A woman crossed the street and spoke to me. Her hair was flying, as it was windy, and her eyes were red. Her hands were thrust in her pockets and she wore a fur hat that was tilted off her face. She pointed to a little boy across the street and said that he ought to be home. She said to me: 'What is that boy's name?' and I said 'I don't know who owns the boy.' She replied 'Well, he ought to be home.' Then I saw the boy run down toward Salem street.

"Then the woman shook her finger at me, said she had my number and that she wolud report me. She brushed against me and although she did not stagger I was satisfied that she was under the influence of liquor. Then I put my hand on her and took her to the box. She didn't tell me who she was or what she did. If she had I would not have arrested her if she were drunk or not.

She Wasn't Drunk.

"I didn't go to the station house with Miss Beck. The next thing that happened was that I was called to the station house by Lieutenant Allen. 'This woman isn't drunk,' he said to me, and then I saw that she wasn't. I said, 'All right, lieutenant, if you don't think she is drunk, I'm satisfied.' I apologized. You know what a hard district I've got down there in the North End and what kind of women we usually meet. I did what I believed to me to be my duty, and I feel that I was justified." I never had seen the woman before. I didn't know her, and there was no spite nor personal feeling against her."

Miss Beck is a favorite with all of the children in the North End schools. She has served as social worker in the North End for many years, and has been connected with the North End Industrial School for five years. Among her friends are Mrs. Quincy A. Shaw, president of the North Bennet Street Industrial School; Mrs. Henry L. Higginson, Mrs. James J. Storrow, Mrs. Henry G. Brooks, Mrs. Arthur T. Cabot and Miss Elizabeth Perkins, who are members of the corporation.

CARUSO WILL FIGHT 'BLACK HAND' WITH CANE AND SWORD

"If They Shoot Me I Will Open Fire," Declares Tenor. Under Threat.

NEW YORK, March 5.—Antonio Cincotto and Antonio Mesiani, who were arrested in Brooklyn last Friday night, charged with sending threatening letters to Caruso, demanding $15,000, were arraigned in the Adams Street Court in Brooklyn today, and remanded to the Raymond street jail.

The detectives who took the men to Brooklyn showed Magistrate Tighe the weapons the men carried when arrested. Mesiani, just as he was caught, threw away a double-barrelled shot-gun, the barrels of which had been sawed down to about fourteen inches. It had been concealed under his coat and both barrels were loaded with buckshot. Mesiani also had a .32 calibre revolver, all the chambers being loaded.

Caruso himself says he does not think the men the police have arrested are the right ones. Pacing furiously up and down the pink and white apartments in his hotel, to-day he cried:

Such Stupid Police!

"I laugh at the black hand. Ho, Ho. I am ready for them. I carry always a sword cane and a revolver; I will sing in Brooklyn on Monday. Should they shoot me in the theatre, I will open fire upon them and kill them all. I will shoot them all down like flies.

"The first letter is signed 'C. D. M.' The stupid police do not know what that means. I tell them it means Campagnia De La Mort—the Company of Death. That other signature, 'L. M. N. C. D. M.' it means La Mano Nero Campagina De La Mort—the Black Hand Company of Death. I tell the police what they mean.

"But think you I fear? I do not. I take care of myself. Caruso, he is always armed. I wouldn't give a cent to a man who does not work. To those who deserve, Caruso gives 20,000 francs a year. Caruso, he gives with both hands of his charities; but he gives only the sword and the revolver to the coward and the bandittori.

"Again I say, I laugh—Ho, Ho—to the 'black hand.' They can come and hear me sing in Brooklyn, for I will be there. And Caruso, he shoots to kill.

"These prisoners the police have—I do not think they are the right men. Let them go more.

Reads and Frowns Twice.

"I receive the first letter in the Metropolitan Opera House. I do not read it. I put it in my pocket and forget it until the evening, when I go out upon an appointment; I do not tell what the appointment is; I am too gallant. But it happens I put my hand in my pocket and bring out the letter. I read it. I frown. Corpo di Bacco. I frown again. Then I laugh—ho! ho!—to show me myself that I fear not."

WORLD TOUR AT $1,619,843.

Navy Department Shows Cost of Battleships' Trip.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., March 5.—The Navy Department has figured out the cost of sending the Atlantic fleet around the world. Compared with the normal cost of maintenance of the fleet during the years when it was on its usual duty, the total cost of the voyage was $1,619,843.32. Of this amount, coal, oil and engineering supplies cost $1,263,319. All other extra supplies, $221,773. The cost of passage through the Suez Canal was $134,751.32.

20,000 TAKE IN BIG AUTO EXHIBIT ON OPENING NIGHT

Mechanics Building Brilliantl Decorated for Association's Eighth Annual.

TWENTY thousand New Englander jammed into Mechanics Buildin last night at the opening of th eighth annual display of the Boston Automobile Association. "Everybody" wa there, the automobile people said, includ ing people who drive automobiles, thos who own automobiles, those who hope t own automobiles, and folks who merely lik to look at automobiles. There has neve been another such show since the passin of the horse began.

Autos for Any Purse.

The show closes one week from las night. The general effect of the decora tions is "Springtime." There are flowe gardens, apple orchards and budding tree with all their promise of contemporar good roads and automobile delights.

There are cars in the big show to fi any purse. So amazing is the display o cars that appeal to the man who is merel well-to-do that it was said last night b experts that the number of cars in Ne England will have increased in anothe year by fully 50 per cent.

Down the street, in the former home o the Museum of Fine Arts, was opened th "Independent" auto show. Here was a attractive display, and here again the at tendance was said to be well up in th thousands.

Brilliant Lighting Effect.

Teel's military band played a prominen part in the opening of the museum show which in the way of excellence left littl to be desired. The decorations are pleas ing. Every exhibit found a happy setting The managers said there was every rea son to be proud of the beginning. On of the features was the lighting effect beginning with the flaming flambeau which attracted attention to the opening.

The Sunday American tells all about th exhibitions to-day in two Automobile Sec tions. Whether you are among those wh already own an auto, or are still in th larger class of those who mean to ow one, you will want to study these auto mobile sections.

CITY FORGETS ATTUCKS, HERO OF THE MASSACRE

Thousands Pass Spot Where He Fell, None Stopping to Recall Event.

SOMEHOW State street didn't seem to be paying much attention yesterday to Crispus Attucks. In the course of the day some fifty thousand people more or less, rushed across the spot where, one hundred and forty years ago last night, Attucks shed the first blood of the American Revolution. So far as outward appearances suggest inward memories, or patriotic thought, or high resolve, or all that kind of thing, there was nothing happening. The spot is directly under the window of Tom Lawson.

When the whistle blew at high noon and the weekly half-holiday arrived the high and low in State street, bankers, brokers, attorneys, office boys and pompadoured young women in short skirts and high heels rushed pell-mell for the Town House—that is to say the State House—marry, no, the Old State House Gaw! how the time flieth to scramble for seats in tunnel trains and go to Winchester, Malden and the regions that lie beyond.

Only one inquirer bothered the street yesterday with notions about the rough fellows who pelted and clubbed and insulted His Majesty's soldiery down that way on the March night in 1770 when "the foundation of American independence was laid."

Stranger Is Startled.

The inquirer was a school teacher from East Saginaw, Mich. She was "seeing historical Boston" without a guide, but with a guide book. She turned, sort of natural like, to Young America. An office boy was hustling down the street, in front of Bailey's candy shop, whistling "Rings on her fingers and bells on her toes."

"Where was it around here," she asked the boy, "that Crispus Attucks fell?"

"Who?' asked the boy, eyeing her suspiciously.

"Attucks, Crispus Attucks," said the teacher, "where was it he fell?"

"I dunno,' answered the boy, still apprehensive. "This is my first time out of the office this morning and I didn't see no accident."

The girl from Michigan almost fainted. She appealed to Dan Driscoll, the Station 2 copper, who looks after women and children and the aged at the Congress street crossing, and Dan, who knows everything, pointed across the way to the tablet on the Union building:

OPPOSITE THIS SPOT WAS SHED
THE FIRST BLOOD OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.
March 5, 1770.

"Queer town, this Boston," the East Saginaw girl said to a young man who glanced at the tablet with her. "I don't understand it. In any of the small towns of the country, blessed with ground as sacred as this, business would be suspended to-day and the people would assemble to hear an oration, and a song or two, and music by the band. Here—well, just look at them hurry! What's the excitement? Where's the fire? Why the rush?"

Patriotic Event Forgotten.

State street certainly did seem a long ways off from King street. Brokers and their customers appeared to be making the most of the week's shortest day. Up and down the Street the men in ticker rooms watched Amalgamated and North Butte and Lake, and discussed the "dominant tone of the market" and the "trend of the price movement" and "government regulation of corporations" and the "visible supply of copper," and at noon made a quick getaway.

JOHN BOYLE O'REILLY'S TRIBUTE TO ATTUCKS.

AND honor to Crispus Attucks, who was leader and voice that day,—
The first to defy, and the first to die, with Maverick, Carr, and Gray.
Call it riot or revolution, his hand first clenched at the crown;
His feet were the first in perilous place to pull the King's flag down;
His breast was the first one rent apart that liberty's stream might flow;
For our freedom now and forever, his head was the first laid low.

Ernest Jobling, who stands all day at the receiving window of the State Street Trust Company, where he can almost see the strange circle of cobble stones with which the city designates the very spot where Attucks's body was picked up, might have had his attention called to the anniversary if it hadn't been for an all-fired rush of business. On the half-holiday one doesn't get time in a big trust company to be thinking of dead patriots.

Walk up and down King street as one would (State street, that is to say) and nowhere did one hear a single condemnation of the Stamp Act. Nobody was damning the Board of Commissioners sent over by His Majesty for the "relief and encouragement of commerce." Governor Bernard seemed to have been forgotten. The bitterness aroused by his dismissal of Tom Folger from the public service because Folger wouldn't "vote right" in the Province House of Commons, seems to have passed away entirely.

"Perhaps," thought the young man who was sent down to see what the Street was doing about it, "perhaps there will be a big night to-night. The real anniversary after all will not be here until 9 p. m.

"There was a layer of ice on the ground, a slight fall of snow during the day, and a young moon in the evening."

He went back again at night after Inspectors Harris and Robinson had locked the bank district up for over Sunday and left for Blue Hill avenue and Allston. He dropped into Mark Crehan's, not far from where the Bronze Head used to be.

Attucks Had Been There.

"Bill" White was leaning over the bar listening to a man from Albany street. Across the way one could see the windows of the room in the Town House where John Adams and Josiah Quincy, Jr., successfully defended the eight soldiers under Captain Thomas Preston, who were charged with the murder of Attucks, Maverick Gray, Caldwell and Pat Carr.

"The British government has got to come to it some day," the man from Albany street was saying, "and why not now?"

"Aha!" one thought, "King street has not forgotten, then!" "Bill" White was nodding assent.

"The long night of oppression is almost over," the man from Albany street went on, "and the time approaches when one may write the epitaph of Robert Emmet."

Mark Crehan, who knows history like a book, had gone home to Dorchester. A young man in the public house who acted as if he ought to know things, said, in answer to a question about Crispus Attucks, that he thought he knew the said Attucks by sight and was of the opinion that a party of that description had been in earlier in the evening and had then said that he would quite likely be back. In the meantime, what would one have to drink?

And so, praying that the confession may not be the cause of scandal on this Sabbath morning, but sore and afflicted at heart over the ungratefulness of this Republic, one ordered something with a loaf of sugar and a teeny weeney bit of lemon in it, and drank to the memory of Samuel Gray, of the ropewalk hard by; Samuel Maverick, unfortunate but blessed youth; James Caldwell, Crispus Attucks and Paddy Carr, and may their souls rest in peace.

$60,000 FUND RAISED.

Missionary Exhibition Here Next Year Is Assured.

The $60,000 guarantee fund for the proposed missionary exposition to be held in Boston in April of next year has been subscribed. The raising of the fund for preliminary expenses and the incorporation of the company now makes the event "The World in Boston" an assured fact.

Offices have been open in the Ford building, and the new manager, Rev. A. M. Gardner of the London Missionary Society will soon arrive to take charge. For two years the workers in forty-four missionary organizations hacv been forming plans for this big enterprise.

This exposition is the first of its kind to be held in America, and will be a systematic display of the nature of missionary work carried on in different sections of the world.

Mr. Gardued, the manager, will be assisted by Secretary Diffendorfer of the Young People's Missionary Movement.

SEEKS BROTHER 14 YEARS.

Fitchburg Man Abandons Search; Asks Receiver for Estate.

FITCHBURG, March 5.—Erwin A. Bates of Upton has petitioned the Probate Court for the appointment of a receiver for the estate of his brother, John L. Bates, who disapeared fro mthis city fourteen years ago and has not since been heard from. John L. Bates was a peddler, and is said to have left considerable property. In 1895 he was an inmate of the Worcester Insane Asylum. In 1896 he was released and came to this city and soon afterward disapeared. Thayer & Thayer of Worcester are counsel for the petitioner, who was the absentee's guardian, and who says that he has $1,600 belonging to the absentee in his possession.

Certain Proof Will Be Made That Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets Cure Stomach Trouble.

A Trial Package Sent Free.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are made to give to the system through the digestive tract and the stomach the necessary chemicals not only to digest food, but to enrich the fluids of the body so that it may no longer suffer from dyspepsia or other stomach trouble.

We will send you a quantity of these tablets free, so that their power to cure may be proven to you.

Thousands upon thousands of people are using these tablets for the aid and cure of every known stomach disease. Know what you put into your stomach, and use discretion in doing so.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets contain fruit and vegetable essences, the pure concentrated tincture of Hydrastis, Golden Seal, which tone up and strengthen the mucous lining of the stomach ,and increase the flow of gastric and other digestive juices; Lactose (extracted from milk); Nux, to strengthen the nerves controlling the action of the stomach and to cure nervous dyspepsia; pure aseptic Pepsin of the highest digestive power and approved by the United States Pharmacopoeia.

One of the ablest professors of the University of Michigan recently stated that this Pepsin was the only aseptic pepsin he had found that was absolutely pure—free from all animal impurities; Bismuth, to absorb gases and prevent fermentation. They are deliciously flavored with concentrated Jamaica Ginger—in itself a well known stomach tonic.

Liquid medicines lose their strength the longer they are kept, through evaporation, fermentation and chemical changes, hence Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are recognized as the only true and logical manner of preserving the ingredients given above in their fullest strength.

If you really doubt the power of these tablets, take this advertisement to a druggist and ask his opinion of the formula.

It is due your stomach to give it the ingredients necessary to stop its trouble. It costs nothing to try. You know what you are taking, and the fame of these tablets prove their value. All druggists sell them. Price 50 cents. Send us your name and address and we will send you a trial package by mail free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Building, Marshall, Mich.

'ALDRICH OLIGARCHY, FEARING WEST, BARS TWO NEW STATES'

—JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES.

"An Amazing Illustration of the Injustice and Arrogance of 'Privilege' When Arizona and New Mexico Can Be Kept Out of Union—The Tariff Revision Explains Why 'Interests' Want No More Senators."

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES,

Editorial Correspondent of the Boston American.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—The Senate—the Republican Senate—still delays in voting to Arizona and to New Mexico the full and separate Statehood they have sought so long, and to which they have indicated so ample a claim.

Partisanship and sectional selfishness stand in the way of justice and the Constitution.

When a Territory of the Union applies for admission to the rights of Statehood it needs only to prove the requisite population, resources and decency of its citizenship. If to these it be deemed prudent to add the record and promise of growth there would be no objection anywhere—certainly not in Arizona or New Mexico.

It appears to be an amazing illustration of injustice and of arrogance when a small oligarchy of "interest" or "privilege" deliberately bars the entrance of two worthy States into the Federal Union.

The Aldrich oligarchy rules the Senate. It is a New England oligarchy in the main, and it represents interests that for a score of years have fattened upon "privilege," and clipped their regular and ample coupons from the conditions made by a high tariff.

The Aldrich tariff under which we live is a New England tariff. New England is in the saddle in the Senate and riding prosperously. And New England fears anything in politics or in legislation which comes from the free and virile West.

What New England Has Seen.

New England has seen La Follette, and Beveridge, and Cummins, and Bristow, and Dolliver—free men of the people and bold thinkers on public lines. They have broadened this tariff issue bravely in their own party, and they represent the popular idea of a downward revision in the customs duties of the country.

The West has no enthusiasm for a high tariff because the West does not need a high tariff. A heavy tariff on wheat and corn and potatoes might enthuse the West, which has hung to the high protective idea for generations out of loyalty to the Republican party of the war. The major spirit of the entire West is for "revision" now. And this is the backbone of the insurgent cause, which has flourished so mightily in the Sixty-first Congress.

This, too, explains the milk in the obstinate cocoanuts of the Republican oligarchy toward those splendid young Territories of the West.

The Aldrich hierarchy does not care to set up again its Baal of protection before any more idol-smashing statesman of this free-thinking West. Dolliver and Cummins riddled it with holes in the tariff debate of last Summer. They came pretty near, too, to riddling it with votes.

So that, at last, it is the "Privileged Oligarchy" of New England which for these purely selfish reasons stands in the way of the Territories which ask to be States.

Arizona and New Mexico will doubtless remember this when they come into the Union and into Congress, as a part of the Union.

It is Aldrich as much as Cannon who is destroying the Republican party. The Republican party has grown progressive and popular under Taft and Roosevelt. It is Aldrich as well as Cannon who is holding it back.

Must Get Rid of Aldrich.

The President may not think so, but his friends think that he needs to get rid of Aldrich fully as much as he needs to get rid of Cannon.

The protest against the Aldrich spirit is bringing the Western Senators up to the point of attacking the Administration all along the line. They did it yesterday sharply and unhesitatingly in the debate on the postal savings bank.

The only thing that will hold the Western free thinkers in line and save the Postal Bank bill, is the Farmers' Union, which asks for the postal savings bank.

The Farmers' Union is powerful in the West and in the Northwest. It has sent its request, which is almost an ultimatum, to Congressmen asking for this and the other measures which I enumerated in the American on Tuesday. Up to yesterday, one hundred and seventy-five members of Congress and the Senate had formally notified the National Bureau of the union of their concurrence with the agricultural wish in these matters. The replies are still rolling in.

If the postal savings bank is saved or established, it will be due in the last analysis to the attitude of these three million farmers.

It will be well to bear this significant and important fact in mind.

FREE FLESH BUILDER

Any Man or Woman Can Now Be Plump and Well Develcp d

50-CENT PACKAGE FREE

Just because you are thin and underweight, do not think you have to stay in that condition.

Thanks to a new discovery, you can be plump, symmetrical, well developed and vigorous with the bones covered with good solid flesh, the hollow places filled out and the cheeks and face made plump, full and attractive.

And the beauty of it is, it will not cost you a penny to see whether this treatment will do all this for you or not, as a full-sized 50-cent package will be sent you by mail without charge if you simply write for it. (See coupon below.)

There is no strenuous exercising required, no drastic diet necessary. All you have to do is to take, four times a day, a little tablet of Sargol, the new flesh-building principle, then weigh yourself once a week to note the increase as the pounds pile up.

This new treatment increases the red corpuscles in the blood, strengthens the nerves and puts the digestive tract into such shape that your food is assimilated and turned into good, solid, healthy flesh instead of passing through the system undigested and unassimilated. It is a thoroughly scientific principle, this Sargol, and builds up the thin, weak and debilitated without any nauseous dosing. In many conditions, it is better than cod liver oil and certainly is much pleasanter to take.

Simply cut out the coupon in this notice and send it with your name and address and 10 cents to pay distribution expenses to the Sargol Company, 221—R, Herald Building, Binghamton, N. Y., and you will receive by prompt mail a regular 50-cent package without charge and without incurring any obligations.

COUPON.

This certificate and 10 cents to help defray distribution expenses entitles the holder to one 50-cent package of Sargol, the home treatment which makes thin folks plump and attractive.

GOOD FOR TEN DAYS.

THREE CONTESTS FOR DEFAULTER'S PLACE

Framingham Elects Treasurer to Succeed Lombard Tomorrow.

In none of the 180 Massachusetts towns holding their annual town meeting to-morrow will the outcome be watched with more general interest than in Framingham, where a successor will be chosen to Town Treasurer Lombard, whose quarter-million dollar shortage recently startled the entire State. There is a three-cornered fight for the office between Thomas S. Hastings, Republican; Bernard F. Merriam, nomination papers, and Joseph S. Mundy, Democrat. For the three Selectmen to be elected there are six candidates—Herbert W. Damon, Democrat and Independent; Edward S. Hemingway, Independent; Roger H. O'Brien, Republican and Democrat; Robert S. Blace and E. E. Spaulding, Republicans, and William H. Walsh, Democrat. Frank E. Hemingway is opposing Philip W. Sullivan, Democrat, for Town Clerk and there is a hot fight over the license issue.

The Civic League candidates in Winthrop are opposed by those of the Good Government Association, both organizations standing for reform. Three selectmen will be chosen from these six candidates: James S. Carr, Elmer E. Dawson, C. W. Foster, Civic League; D. J. Keenan, William Sanby and John B. Tewksbury, G. G. A. Carr, Dawson and Keenan are the present board.

Contests to Spare.

Both Charles T. Clark and Frank W. Tucker want to be tree warden. Richard J. Granger, William W. Shaw and Albert H. Southwick seek the one place on the board of health.

Two constables will be chosen from six candidates, James M. Brennan, F. M. Dowling, Charles O. Ford, Albert F. Pearl, Joshua C. Small and J. T. Swift. George F. Mitchell and Augustus C. Swift are contesting for park commissioner and Leslie Tyler and A. E. Wright both want to be water commissioner.

There will be no lack of excitement in Revere. Hugh M. McKay is opposed for re-election as Selectman-at-large by E. T. Cunningham and Roscoe Walsworth, and there are three candidates in each of the four precincts for the one Selectman to be elected. The candidates are: Precinct 1 (Beachmont), F. J. Bargy, Warden L. Green and Walter T. Bates; Precinct 2, Louis Bopp, Frank H. Crosby and William Daley; Precinct 3, Richard P. Barry, Philip K. Myer, Jr., and Frank Shaffer; Precinct 4, Ernest Acker, Herman Smick and Cornelius S. Green.

Retires After Eighteen Years.

Dedham, shire town of Norfolk County, has several notable contests. William F. Whitman and Thomas P. Murray are running for town treasurer as successor to Edwin A. Brooks, who retires after eighteen years' service. Three Selectmen will be chosen from Lester A. Newcomb, Richard A. Mendeville, John E. Fisher, Edmund H. Bowler and John Wardle, Jr. Joseph H. Soliday and George G. Darling are candidates for moderator, and Frederic Grant, a Tufts Dental College student, and J. W. H. Keough for park commissioner.

Wakefield will elect five selectmen from these eight candidates: J. Fred Parker, Cornelius Donovan, Andrew G. Anderson, John J. Foley, Albert G. Goodwin, John F. Mahoney, George E. Walker and Ernest Mortimer. John M. Cate, Dr. Richard G. Eaton and David Taggart are in a three cornered fight for the vacancy on the Board of Health.

Natick last night had a rally for the candidates of the Citizens' ticket, marking the close of an unusually strenuous campaign. William R. Bigelow, Harry M. Ferguson and Charles F. Pfeiffer, present selectmen and unanimously nominated by the municipal reform party, are being opposed by John B. Moyse, Timothy F. Sullivan and Ernest S. Williams, candidates of the Citizens' ticket.

OPEN MISSION TONIGHT.

Plan Overflow Meeting at Immaculate Conception Church.

The annual retreat for women will begin in the Church of the Immaculate Conception to-night at eight o'clock. Services in the upper church will be given by the Rev. William J. Conway, S. J., and the retreat in the lower church by the Rev. Thomas Harlin, S. J. The retreat will close on next Sunday afternoon with the papal blessing and benediction of the blessed sacrament.

The annual novena, which began in the church last Friday night, will close in the church on next Saturday evening, the feast of the canonization of S.S. Xavier and Ignatius, the two great patrons of the Society of Jesus.

The retreat for the men of this church will begin on Passion Sunday, March 13. Because of the large number of men expected to attend the services in the upper church, a double service has been planned.

MLLE. BERNARD, WHO IS FINED $50 FOR CONTEMPT OF COURT.

PRETTY GIRL SNUBS INJUNCTION; PAYS

Throws Out Lynn Lawyer Who Comes to Serve Papers; Satisfied at Cost.

IT was worth every penny of the $50, says Mlle. Sophie Bernard of Lynn, to have pushed Gus Tolman out of the store. A man can be polite, even when he comes to serve the horrid injunction papers.

Judge King imposed the $50 fine, sitting in court at Salem, and he said, the judge did that if Sophie Bernard were not a woman—well!

But Sophie is a woman, and a very pretty woman, and—well! She didn't go to jail for contempt of court.

Mlle. Bernard was a member of the millinery firm of Reon & Bernard. The firm was in bankruptcy. She was charged with selling the wares of a bankrupt firm. William A. Kelley, attorney, was the receiver. After Mr. Kelley had conducted a sale for the benefit of creditors Miss Bernard made a sale or two of new stock. She thought she had Mr. Kelley's consent.

Augustus B. Tolman, Esq., attorney for some of the creditors, got out an injunction to put a stop to this kind of thing and called in person to serve it.

"And," says Attorney Tolman, "the lady grabbed me by the collar and hurried me out, as it were."

Tolman came back with Deputy Sheriff Brackett, who has a nice way with him, and just to show the difference, Mlle. Sophie came forward with her politest smile and reached out both hands to take the injunction papers from that nice M. Brackett.

"It was the way of the Tolman man," Mlle. Sophie said last night, "just the horrible way of command. Me, I cannot stand the grand manner of the avocat, so I chase him from the place. For Mr. Brackett, who have the nice way with him, I take it, the injunction papers every day."

However, it's all over now, and the fine has been paid, and Mlle. Reon has retired from the firm, the second injunction has been dissolved and better days are dawning for the millinery establishment of Mlle. Sophie.

CELEBRATE AFTER 50 YEARS

Mr. and Mrs. Amos Russell Observe Golden Wedding.

Two hundred guests went to the home of Frank H. Russell in No. 317 School street, East Watertown, last night, to help him celebrate the golden wedding of his parents, Amos F. Russell and Mrs. Russell, who was Miss Mary E. Marston, of Wareham, fifty years ago.

The marriage ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. R. A. Keyes in the Arlington street Universalist Church. Two sons were at last night's festivities, Frank H. and Frederick A. Russell. Mr. Russell, Sr., is a fruit and produce merchant in the Faneuil Hall district. His fellow business men sent a purse filled with gold to him.

To Talk College Standards.

Clarence F. Birdseye of New York city will discuss college standards and John Alden Adams of Tufts College will speak at the meeting of the Twentieth Century Club next Saturday afternoon.

STAGE LIFE DEFENDED BY MARY MANNERING

She Differs With Complaints Made by German Actresses at a Convention.

NEW YORK, March 5.—Mary Mannering does not agree with the mutinous actresses of the German stage that the theatrical profession is overcrowded.

According to a speaker before the Parliament of Actresses, convened in Berlin this week to discuss the grievances of theatrical life, every girl who is disappointed in love now goes upon the stage instead of seeking solace in a nunnery in accordance with early Victorian tradition.

It was the opinion of another delegate that owing to the long hours, poor pay and persecution by managers, "society ought to enshrine with a halo of glory any actress who remains virtuous under present conditions."

"It is my opinion," said Miss Mannering this afternoon, in her dressing room at the Comedy Theatre, "that the American manager is far too much occupied with his work to persecute any woman with his attentions, but I believe other conditions prevail abroad. People have not the same respect for the theatre that prevails here.

"But I realize that where theatrical people are not treated with respect they have themselves to blame for the situation.

"Here, in America, we have all sorts in the profession, just as in any other. There are virtuous women on the stage, splendid women, and some who are not. The same is true of society. Morals are individual, not typical. No one has to be good. She has only to be ready to meet the bill if she isn't, and she generally pays it.

"It is absurd to say the profession is overcrowded. Like all others, there is plenty of room at the top. Perhaps it is overcrowded at the bottom. It has to be for the 'survival of the fittest' to prevail.

"From whatever motive a woman goes on the stage, no matter what adventitious aid she may have in the beginning, she won't last unless she has a natural aptitude for the profession. I don't mean that she must necessarily have talent. She needn't have great beauty. Do you know what are the rarest things? The most important things on the stage are breeding and charm. If a woman has those qualities, even if she can't act, the public will like her.

"Competition is necessary to progress in the theatrical profession. The moment you are satisfied with yourself, the moment you stand still, you go back. It sounds Irish, doesn't it? But it's true."

SINGLE WITH TWO WIVES.

Buffalo Man Finds Marriages Are Both Illegal.

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 5.—Twice through the ceremony of marriage, yet not once married legally, is the experience of George Thomas Hollis of this city. This was revealed when attempts were made to punish him for bigamy because he married Estelle Gunther of Middletown when he had a wife in Buffalo. The Buffalo Mrs. Hollis admitted she had married Hollis while a husband of hers was living in an insane asylum in St. Louis.

NEGLECT CHARGED AGAINST OFFICIALS

Stoneham Investigators Accuse Town Officers, Police and Fire Departments.

The report of the Investigating Committee of fifteen members, appointed by the citizens of Stoneham, which was made public yesterday, severely scores fire department members for laxity of conduct and discipline and the use of intoxicants in the station. The police department is negligent, according to the report, in the enforcement of the laws, especially in regard to gambling establishments which are frequented by some of the town's best citizens and the existence of kitchen barrooms in a no-license town.

The committee also recommend that the Board of Public Works be abolished as unnecessary. The members of the Board of Health are scored for lack of harmony and laxity in the enforcement of their own orders. The report further states that the tax collector is between $30,000 and $40,000 behind in his collections.

"Clubrooms exist where alleged gambling has been maintained under the various Boards of Selectmen without interference on the part of the police," says the report. "But in recent years mere toleration of these establishments has given way to the active interference with the prosecution of their proprietors by at least one member of the Board of Selectmen.

"The financial review for the past ten years shows that the valuation has decreased $40,000. The amount of money raised by taxation has increased $2,000 a year and despite this fact the net debt has increased $19,000.

DEFAULTING TELLER FREE ON $2,000 BAIL

Judge Fallon Says Cullen's Salary Was Enough to Live Upon.

John H. Cullen, former teller in the Union Institution for Savings, who is charged with a $1,500 shortage in his accounts, was released on $2,000 bail yesterday. Miss Elizabeth Ginty, of No. 90 Mt. Pleasant avenue, Roxbury, and Mrs. Mary Carroll of No. 124 Neponset avenue, gave the bond.

Judge Joseph D. Fallon said last night that Cullen ought to have been able to get along, even with a wife and six children, on his salary of $2,000 a year without stealing. This is what Judge Fallon said:

"I believed Mr. Cullen's salary was sufficient to support himself and family. In view of recent disclosures the natural inference is that Cullen went outside his natural circle of acquaintances and associated with younger men, single men who have no one to maintain but themselves. It is probable that in trying to keep up his end with such associates Cullen lived beyond his income, with the natural result. In connection with Cullen's alleged peculations I have said nothing in any way derogatory to the Bank Officers' Association."

$7,000,000 Tobacco Merger.

PENSACOLA, Fla., March 5.—A merger of all the Florida Sumatra tobacco companies was effected to-day, when a corporation with $7,000,000 capital stock was formed to take over the absorbed plants. The headquarters of the company will be in New York.

TIMILTY LONESOME; TO RUN FOR SENATE

Two Months of Private Life Revive His Appetite for a Public Job.

Two months of private life have convinced former Alderman Jim Timilty that he can't stand more than a year of it. He will be a candidate for the Senate next Fall, his friends say, and he will incidentally back Senator John J. Butler for Congress in the Eleventh district.

The story leaked out last night. The Butler-for-Congress part of it gave the first intimation that the Fitzgerald forces in the Eleventh are not to be united on former Senator Thomas H. Dowd. Andrew J. Peters, the present Congressman from the district, is said to be still thinking it over.

Timilty and Butler both live in Ward 18. Butler has had to fight for each of his three senatorial nominations. Timilty is said to figure that if Ward 18 can hold the Senate chair for three years it can hold longer.

He will not have the nomination without a battle. Timothy J. Murphy, ex-Representatives Tom Fay and Dan Carley of Ward 18, and ex-Representative Florrie Driscoll and John J. McCarthy of Ward 19, are looking for the place.

Insane Over Radium.

NEW YORK, March 5.—Charles D. Thomas, a Spanish War veteran, and one of the first men to receive medical treatment from radium, was to-day declared mentally incompetent by a sheriff's jury. The report was filed in the Supreme Court.

One of the delusions from which Thomas is suffering is that a tube of radium has been stuck in his throat and cannot be removed. He goes about with is head on one side.

FAILURE TO TRAP CARD SHARPS PUT UP SQUARELY TO SUPT. WATTS

Swindlers Allowed to Operate Boldly, Says Boylston Street Doctor, Who Carried Information of the Bunco Game Directly to Police Headquarters, and Then?

went to New York and to Providence later. Each time he came back to Boston with quite a bit less money than he had taken away.

Visited by a Dentist.

"My friend told me all of this, and I picked out a particularly promising advertisement and answered it. In response to the advertisement a Dr. George Whittemore, a dentist in the Pelham, at Bolyston and Tremont street, came to see me.

He at once attempted to tell me of a friend of his who was dealer in a big club, the management of which had treated him shabbily. It was a New York establishment. This man had come to him (Whittemore) with a proposition which, of course, was a chance, but he said that if ever I took interest in a game of cards this former dealer might help me beat that bunch.

"I told him that I might be interested and that he should proceed with his scheme. He then told me more about the scheme and said that if he could get a friend to go with him (Whittemore) over there with a few thousands, or if I would go I'd meet the dealer, who would put us wise to the game and we would be able to make a 'clean up.'

"Then I told him I wasn't posted on those things and would like to know more about it before I proceeded. Whittemore said that he would send for his friend who would come over here with his outfit and show me all about the game. He asked me if I was a Mason. I said 'No.' 'Well, if you were,' he said, 'I could soon show you the thing is on the 'square.'"

Notified the Police.

"He made an appointment with me to come over to his office in the Pelham a day or two later. He said he would have the dealer there then. Then I went to Watts at Police Headquarters. I put the whole game up to him and asked him what could be done.

"Watts said nothing could be done until a crime had been comitted. Then he told me that he had had Whittemore on this same kind of a deal and that they were not able to convict him. Of course we talked more. He told me that they were a pretty slippery crowd and had arranged things so that they couldn't be touched.

"Then I told him I had an appointment at Whittemore's office at 10 the following day. 'All right,' he said, 'go and see what you can do.'

"I went. Sure enough there was the dealer with his faro lay-out in Dr. Whittemore's office. I forgot the chap's name. He was supposed to be the disgruntled New York dealer who had come to show me how the scheme could be worked and how no slip-up could take place.

"Whittemore and I were to go over to New York the next afternoon with $2,000 each to 'clean up' the faro sharps there.

"Can't Help," Says Watts.

"Then I went back to Watts. I told him what had taken place. He said: 'Well, what are you going to do?' 'I'm not going to New York,' I said, 'but I guess I have gone so far that there's got to be a showdown. Isn't there something that can be done?'

"'No,' he said, 'I don't see that there's anything we can do.'

"'Can't we do something?' I said. 'I won't go over to New York, but can't you send an officer over with me to Whittemore's office and scare him?'

"'Well, yes,' said Watts, 'you can do that.'

"I told Watts I knew an officer at Lagrange street and that he would be a good man and that I felt sure Captain Cain would let him go with me. I got the man all right and we went to Whittemore's office the next day. I remember the policeman's name.

"I got my friend who had been first duped by Whittemore to go to Whittemore's office at the proper time the next morning. Then the policeman and I went there, too. There we found the doctor. He was very much excited and, of course, was very desirous of getting this friend out of the way before I was to come.

Affair Ends in Smoke.

"When Whittemore saw me he rushed to me and said he couldn't go over, as he had important business. Would I go next day? He actually tried to shove me out of the office, so important was that business. Then the policeman in full uniform stepped up and Whittemore asked him what he wanted. He told the policeman to get out, that he knew his business. Then Whittemore ran into Darius Wilson's stock brokerage office.

"The three of us then left. I went to Watts. I told him the latest development. He said: 'You can't do anything with Whittemore. No crime has been committed. If you insist on pressing this and have an arrest made this friend of yours might be dragged in, too. Whittemore might say he was a party to the game himself.'

"This ended this thing. I watched the papers. I saw other advertisements. I went to Watts with the paper containing one of these advertisements. This was the end of it and the police forgot the whole thing in remarkably quick time. I've seen these advertisements in papers fifty times since."

COLEMAN AT HOME, TELLS BANK SECRETS ONLY TO HIS FAMILY

George W. Coleman insists that he was not a victim of the bunco faro gang, and he has told his parents so over and over again. The young man has begun to feel keenly the disgrace he has brought upon his family as well as the punishment that he faces. It was said yesterday that only his superb physical health keeps him from collapse.

Most of the time Coleman spends in the home of his parents at No. 156 Magazine street, Cambridge. Sometimes he takes a walk with one of his brothers. He does not try to attract attention nor does he shun it. The Colemans live in a two and a half story home. It is well furnished. Mrs. Walter G. Coleman, the young man's mother, is a sweet, motherly woman, who can not bring herself to believe that her boy has done what is charged against him.

Never Out of Mind.

A reporter talked with her yesterday. She does not like to discuss the case, and yet does not desire to give offense to callers. She sat in the front parlor. A piano stood there, with some music on it that apparently had been used recently. Mrs. Coleman smiled as she glanced toward the piano.

"My son Wesley is a musician," she said, with a note of approval in her voice. "He sings in the choir."

But however much she did not like to talk about her son who has brought so much misery into his home, it was apparent that she could not keep him out of her mind long.

"Poor boy—poor boy," she said. "Now, he does not look like a boy who would do what they say he did, does he? You have seen him and you know that he is a good boy at heart.

"One thing has pleased me—no one has said an unkind word against him. They have all been very nice."

What Coleman has told his parents and others has not yet been revealed. But it is known that he declares he was not alone in the bank defalcation. Just how far he has implicated any other person is not known outside of his confidantes.

Bank Officials Blamed.

It also became known yesterday that Coleman's friends blame the bank officials for allowing the boy to go so far in his thefts without having been caught. They believe that if men connected with the bank had done their duty that the trouble would never have occurred, or at least a great deal of it.

John J. Cronin is still one of Coleman's lawyers. He insists that Coleman was never a victim of the faro combination.

"I have gone into that faro matter with Coleman very carefully," said Cronin. "He says they never got any of his money. This fact will come out in time, too."

Priest Will Lecture.

Under the auspices of the St. Vincent de Paul Society of the Church of the Immaculate Conception the Rev. George De Butter will deliver an address this evening on "Religious Persecution in France."

Mrs. J. Russell Reed of Commonwealth avenue, yesterday afternoon gave a bridge party at the Hotel Somerset. One hundred invited guests were in attendance.

THE PASSING OF ARTIFICIAL TEETH

Dr. King's "Restoration" Method does away with the old, telltale false plate.

If you have a few teeth left you may have the lost ones all restored successfully.

THOMAS JEFFERSON KING, D. D. S.

Originator of Dr. King's Restoration Method for the natural restoration of teeth—originator of the King Safe System of Painless dentistry, and inventor of the "Natural Gum" Set of Teeth, etc., etc. All rights reserved.

The lost teeth of a man or woman can now be restored by the science of dentistry in such a manner that it is impossible, under ordinary circumstances, to detect the restored teeth from the original or natural ones. The Restoration Method is not one of artificial plates, crowns or bridges—that undesirable artificiality is done away with—and there is no noticeable evidence of the dentist's work in your mouth. Your restored teeth seem to grow out of your gums just as do your natural teeth. It is a wonderful improvement over the old method of replacing lost teeth with false ones. Dr. King does his Restoration work at a consistently low price. Before having any teeth extracted, see Dr. King about naturally and painlessly restoring your teeth. It Pays.

NO PAIN OPERATING

Painless dentistry in the beginning was not taken seriously; every dental fakir in the country claimed to be a painless dentist, and since they knew nothing of painless dentistry, of course, maltreated their patients and made this great science a joke, a thing to be laughed at and ridiculed. In Boston when I first advertised my system of painless dentistry I had at least twenty-five imitating dental fakirs to contend with. One by one they dropped out of existence, because they could not make good their false claims, until to-day I stand alone as the one painless dentist in this city, and in fact, in Eastern America, who practices painless dentistry as a science and who really performs all operations without pain.

NATURAL GUMS

Dr. King's latest invention, the "NATURAL GUM," is acknowledged by the dental profession to be a wonderful improvement over the old artificial gum. It has always been easy to recognize artificial teeth in the mouth, but now, by using Dr. King's "Natural Gum," a set of teeth can be made by his method, and only by his method, that will absolutely defy detection. This Natural Gum Set is for people who cannot afford the Restoration Method and who MUST have a plate.

Other Departments of Dentistry. Full set teeth $5 and up with the "Natural Gums," gold crowns $5, bridge work $5, painless, pure gold filling $1 up, other fillings 50c, painless extraction free when sets are ordered. All work guaranteed.

DOROTHY LAWSON BACK.

Returns From Six Months' Trip in Europe.

Miss Dorothy Lawson has returned from a six months' trip abroad. Miss Lawson sailed on the Carmania in September, and during her absence has travelled and visited friends in England, Holland, Switzerland, Germany, France, Spain and Italy. She was in Paris at the time of the flood. Early in February she met Mr. and Mrs. James F. Lord, the latter a sister (Miss Marion Lawson), at Naples. Miss Dorothy Lawson sailed February 18 from the latter port on the new North German Lloyd steamship Berlin. Mr. and Mrs. Lord, who are on a trip around the world, are now in India, having arrived at Bombay a day or two ago.

SOCIETY IN GREEK DANCE.

Portray Spring's Coming, But Don't Forget Their Sandals.

ST. LOUIS, March 5.—The classic Greek dance emerged in St. Louis from the semi obscurity of the artists' studios and dancing teachers' private classes, and disported at the artists' guild.

Many St. Louis society women and a few St. Louis men privately have acquired the art of interpreting themes of various kinds by means of the classic dance. To-night they pitched their courage to the sticking point, donned draperies and sandals and danced an allegory of "the Coming of Spring."

They did not dance exactly barefoot (they wore sandals) and the reasons they give for refusing to do so are as many as the feet involved.

Some say their feet aren't pretty enough, others dislike the danger of splinters, some fear the chance of taking cold even in portraying the approach of Spring.

SPENT NOTHING ON ME SAYS MRS. TAYLOR

One Time Friend of Bank Looter Declares She Didn't Know of Crime.

Mrs. Margaret Taylor, one of the friends of George W. Coleman, who was with him a great deal when he was spending money that he had taken from the bank, has not been at her home in Cambridge for several days. It is known that John J. Cronin, Coleman's lawyer, and she have had a talk since she returned, following her disappearance when the bank closed.

If anyone believed that she had some of Coleman's money, that idea has been dissipated. She had had very little to do with the bank bookkeeper for six months or more before the crash. The furniture in her flat is her own and dates back to her married life. Her own family is comfortably off, and they will look after her interests in any investigation that might in any way involve her.

"I have known Mr. Coleman from childhood," she told a friend. "He never spent $400 on me in his life. We were engaged for a time and then I found out some things and the engagement terminated. I have earned my own living as a milliner up to the time of the trouble, and I hope to do so in the future."

The young women with whom Mrs. Taylor associates have not seen her for a few days. Her friends say that she had no inkling about the real state of affairs.

Mrs. Taylor has told her friends that she does not know the men with whom Coleman associated with the exception of Wilson W. Lockhart, who has been arrested. Lockhart has been a chum of Coleman all their lives. Lockhart, it is said, was a sort of man Friday to Coleman and accepted his prodigality and good times without looking "a gift horse" in the mouth.

Mrs. Taylor and her friends are anxious to have denied the story that was reported that Coleman had called on her since his release from arrest. Mrs. Taylor told a friend:

"He did not call on me and is not likely to do so. He did not want to see me and I did not want to see him. That is the size of the matter."

WINS IN LOVE AND LAW.

Holyoke Relatives Fail to Prevent Wedding of Millionaire.

HOLYOKE, March 5.—Cupid, by means of matrimony, has succeeded in keeping for an octogenarian millionaire in San Francisco his fortune, estimated at $13,000,000, and has outwitted his relatives in this city, who sought to have him declared incompetent to manage his millions and prevent his marrying at the age of eighty-three.

Azro A. Coburn, a wealthy manufacturer of this city and a nephew of the San Francisco millionaire, and another nephew, living in that city, began legal action last Fall for the purpose of having the aged man declared incompetent, but the first round of what threatened to be a long legal battle was decided in favor of the defendant, and his marriage to his housekeeper, Miss S. S. Upton, who is twenty years his junior, appears to have put an end to litigation along this line.

Mr. and Mrs. Azro A. Coburn left this city for San Francisco seven weeks ago, and was there when their uncle was married Wednesday night.

BILL FOR COOK HONORS.

New York Faces Suit for Address and Keys.

NEW YORK, March 5.—The beautiful illuminated address and keys presented to Dr. Frederick A. Cook, the Brooklyn, traveler, by the Board of Aldermen as a token of the city's freedom, have not been paid for, and the municipality to-day faces a suit for the sum of $340. Since Dr. Cook left the country it appears that no Alderman has desired to revive the Cook controversy by introducing a bill to pay the designers of the address and keys.

HOW RICH BROOKLINE REAL ESTATE MAN WAS HIT FOR $60,000 BY THE BRACE GAME

John A. Gale, a wealthy Brookline real estate man and former president of a Boston trust company, was swindled out of $60,000 in a marvelous series of operations by the Boston "Bunco Syndicate."

This discovery, made last night, brought the total known losses of victims up to $369,100, and was the most startling of a long list of new sensational developments of the investigation of the National City Bank of Cambridge failure.

Following it in importance came the information that George W. Coleman, the Cambridge bank bookkeeper, has offered to tell all he knows in return for a lessened sentence, in case he is convicted.

Echo of Southbridge Wreck.

At the same time, the investigating officials were told that John A. Hall, treasurer of the wrecked Southbridge Savings Bank, had lost part of the $423,000 he took from that bank to members of the Bunco Syndicate. Hall has already confessed that he lost large sums at poker in Boston.

With the Federal, State and County officials co-operating, and Federal and county Grand Juries to sit to-morrow, it was said last night that seven or eight new arrests might soon be expected. These were the most important developments in a day and night replete with incident in the Cambridge Bank-Bunco Syndicate case.

John A. Gale lives in Babcock street, Brookline, and has offices in the Old South Building. He is very wealthy. He refuses to admit the loss of $60,000, as do those who have been credited earlier with having been swindled. He does admit that agents of the Bunco Syndicate approached him at the Hotel Somerset.

A man he had known for some time "steered" Mr. Gale to the game. He said a friend had a business proposition and Gale met the so-called friend at the Somerset, one of the most fashionable of the Back Bay Hotels. There was much dickering, but finally Gale consented to go to New York. He was directed to one of the best hotels and later driven to a place where he was to see the man purporting to be a dealer in a faro bank who had been cheated by his employer and was going to "fix" the game for a number of players.

It was a superbly appointed place. The stakes were high. No bets of less than $1,000 were accepted. Everybody was in evening dress and wine flowed freely. It appeared to be more like a club than a gambling house.

Gale was to win $60,000 but as a matter of fact he lost $20,000, all he had agreed to put into the game. When he returned to the hotel, the man who had "steered" him to the place quarreled, declaring it was Gale's fault that there had been no "killing." Gale was accused of blundering and losing not only his own $20,000 but a large sum belonging to others.

In Goes $40,000 More.

After many conferences Gale agreed to try again. It took some time to learn the rules laid down for his guidance. But when he was considered proficient he drew $40,000 from his bank and returned to New York with two companions—both members of the gang.

When Gale got to the place, he found another number on the door, but while he was inside the new number was taken off and the original one replaced.

Gale played the game according to the rules, but this time there was another "mistake." He lost the entire $40,000. He left in disgust and within an hour everything identifying the place had disappeared. The furnishings were changed. The men in evening dress who had been introduced as bank officials and brokers disappeared in ordinary habiliment.

Mr. Gale, the victim, does not now remember the names of those who accompanied him.

Another big loss was discovered last night. The victim was the president of a Boston trust company.

About a year ago, "Big Bill" Keliher hurried into the bank and asked for the president. He had twenty-five $1,000 bills in his hand when he was ushered into the private office.

"I want to put this money into some securities that I can convert into cash at any time," said Keliher. "I may want the money quickly, but I want it safe until I do."

After the conference Keliher decided to deposit the money and not buy securities. A week later he appeared with twenty-five more $1,000 bills and added them to his deposit.

Knowing Keliher well, and naturally surprised at his remarkable deposits, the trust company president became interested.

"Where are you getting the cash?" he asked. "It seems to be coming easy."

"A cinch," said "Big Bill."

President Swallows Bait.

"But where are you getting it?" the president persisted.

"No information to give out," said Keliher. "I don't see you letting anybody in on your things. I guess we can 'clean up' this thing all alone."

This increased the president's curiosity. He gave "Big Bill" a tip on the market. Keliher waited two weeks for his next move. Then he appeared at the bank with seven $1,000 bills.

"Made this on your stock tip," he remarked. "It's not very good pickings. I guess I'll stick to my own game."

"Let me in on it?" the banker urged. "I gave you a stock tip."

Then Keliher explained the game. The banker went to New York. The trip cost him $12,000. For that price he learned that faro is not played for the benefit of the patrons.

F. S. Cleghorn, a dealer in plumbing supplies, who lives at the Hotel Lenox, was another victim discovered last night. It cost him $4,000. The game was the same.

An exporter named Adamson, who lives at the Hotel Westminster, Back Bay, was also approached, but he refused to be victimized.

Read what an Iowa man said when he woke up one morning and found he had a new face:

"By George, I never saw anything like it. There I've been for three years trying to get rid of pimples and blackheads, and guess I used everything under the sun. I used your Calcium Wafers for just seven days. This morning every blessed pimple is gone and I can't find a blackhead. I could write you a volume of thanks, I am so grateful to you."

You can depend upon this treatment being a never-failing cure.

Just send us your name and address in full, today, and we will send you a trial package of Stuart's Calcium Wafers, free, to test. After you have tried the sample and been convinced that all we say is true, you will go to your nearest druggist and get a 50c. box and be cured of your facial trouble. They are in tablet form, and no trouble whatever to take. You go about your work as usual, and there you are—cured and happy.

Send us your name and address today and we will at once send you by mail a sample package free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 175 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

BEAUTIFUL HOME WHERE WALSH ENTERTAINED HIS VICTIMS NOW DESERTED

Brains of the Syndicate Disappears; His Pretty Wife, Hostess at Charming Dinners, Gone Also, Leaving Only the Maid to Receive Callers, Who Now are Mostly Detectives.

MARTIN J. WALSH, regarded as the brains of the Boston Bunco [illegible] Boston [illegible] and others of New [illegible] and out of an estimated $1,000,000, is missing from his splendid [illegible] in the Back Bay. This little, but luxuriously furnished place [illegible] centre of intense interest for the police. It is a snuggery of [illegible]

[illegible] No. [illegible] Huntington avenue [illegible] Harrington avenue, where for two years Walsh and his beautiful wife lived and entertained at little dinner parties something like those given by the spider to the fly.

Wife a Charming Hostess at Dinners.

Mrs. Walsh is a handsome brunette [illegible] previous to [illegible] just before [illegible]

[illegible] the [illegible] wealthiness was not [illegible] others were prepared by Martin [illegible] when Martin had [illegible] of an appeal to [illegible]

[illegible] been brought in [illegible] there was [illegible] reckless humor that prestiges ventures such as those that were in Walsh's line.

No Word of "Business."

At the table where Mrs. Walsh smiled a cheerful welcome to the friends of her husband nothing was ever mentioned about "business in New York" or elsewhere. [illegible]

[illegible] He always gave his fish plenty of time to bite. And when he looked him over at his home and [illegible]

Walsh knew many of the prominent police officials and frequently drank with one of them at public places.

COLEMAN OFFERS TO TELL WHOLE STORY

District Attorney Pelletier will resume his [illegible] inquiry this week, this time [illegible] of Suffolk County [illegible]

[illegible]

Mr. [illegible] and Mr. Pelletier are [illegible] George Robinson, of [illegible]

Coleman to Tell All.

Coleman [illegible] bookkeeper went [illegible] District Attorney Pelletier yesterday for [illegible] conference. Neither would talk afterwards, but it looked as if Mr. Pelletier was not thoroughly satisfied with what Coleman told him. Later though, it was said that Coleman had agreed to tell all he knew in return for such immunity as he can get.

When the attention of Charles [illegible] Wesley, special assistant Attorney General, was called last night to the Crocker statement, he said:

"The check scheme is the cleverest [illegible] has ever been called to my attention in connection with a bank."

Lockhardt, the youth whom Coleman paid $20 a week as substitute bookkeeper at the bank when Coleman himself [illegible] but $12, is still in Charles street jail, unable to raise the $30,000 bail in which he has been held on a charge of misapplying $3,000 of the bank's funds. The case against him and Coleman will be laid before the Federal Grand Jury on Tuesday.

MOURN LIEUT. MURPHY.

Genial Police Officer Dead After Long Service.

There wasn't the usual amount of small talk about Police Headquarters last night. The boys talked in lower tones than usual. There was no laughter. Nobody thought of sitting in the chair that the genial Lieut. Tim Murphy had occupied for six years.

Lieutenant Murphy had been twenty-eight years a policeman when, on November 23 [illegible], he was retired on a pension. He was sixty-two years old. He didn't want to quit, but when his friends [illegible] with the doctors in saying that there was no other way Tim bowed to the inevitable. He died yesterday at his home in Bailey street, Dorchester.

The older men in the Police Department said last night that it was a mighty good thing for Boston that "Tim" Murphy had left a son and namesake behind him in the department. They expressed the wish that there were more of them. Tim, Jr., is on duty down at the North End station where his father began police work October 31, 1881.

RECITAL BY GIRL PRODIGY.

Adelaide Merrill, Only 12, Surprises Lynn Critics.

Just twelve years old, Adelaide Marion Merrill, a Lynn school girl, will give her first public concert on the piano on March 24.

She has performed since a mere babe, unable to span an octave, and now, determined to become another Madame Chaminade, she will give the concert to secure funds for a new concert grand piano. She has outgrown the commonplace upright type. Her parents are Charles and Mrs. Merrill of No. 12 Williams avenue. Competent critics say the girl is a prodigy.

Masked Men Try to Rob North Reading Grocer and Sister.

NORTH READING, March 5.—Not since the killing of two policemen by yeggmen in [illegible] two years ago has [illegible] of Massachusetts been so stirred by attempted crime as to-night when two masked men stepped out from the shadow of the First Baptist Church and commanded H. Leslie Upton, the village grocer, to stand and deliver.

[illegible] was his sister and bookkeeper, Miss Carrie Upton.

The men in the road were masked. One of them was short and stout. The other was of slender build. [illegible] was hatless, jumped into the highway and grabbed the bridle of the Upton horse.

Warned of Death.

The stout man remained in the gutter. He pointed [illegible] and said [illegible]

[illegible] Within that space of time, too, Upton lashed his horse again and again. He lost control of the animal, which [illegible] the younger of the bandits to the [illegible] and ran over him, and for fully [illegible] had almost as exciting a time with the runaway horse as he had had with the would be robbers.

Important to All Women Readers of This Paper

Thousands upon thousands of women have kidney or bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

You may suffer a great deal with pain in the back, bearing-down feelings, headache and loss of ambition.

Poor health makes you nervous, irritable and may be despondent; it makes any one so.

But thousands of irritable, nervous, tired and broken-down women have restored their health and strength by the use of Swamp-Root, the great Kidney, Liver and Bladder Remedy.

Swamp-Root brings new life and activity to the kidneys, the cause of such troubles.

Many send for a sample bottle to see what Swamp-Root, the great Kidney, Liver and Bladder Remedy, will do for them. Every reader of this paper, who has not already tried it, may address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and receive sample bottle free by mail. You can purchase the regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles at all drug stores.

POSTAL SAVINGS BILL FIRST VICTORY FOR TAFT

Measure Gets Through Senate After President Fights Four Months.

LODGE-CRANE VOTE "YEA"

Act Passed by Practically Party Vote With Important Amendment.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—[illegible] the Sixty-[illegible] Congress [illegible] first [illegible] Taft [illegible] upon Congress [illegible]. It has [illegible] work and [illegible]

[illegible] postal [illegible] was passed and sent to the House of Representatives by a vote of 50 [illegible] party vote.

Prior to [illegible] vote there had been a day of debate and of [illegible].

[illegible] of any kind the vote [illegible] to limit the authority of the President to invest [illegible] in case of war and striking out the words "or any other emergency," was taken and the [illegible] defeated by a vote of 40 to 18. Those who supported the [illegible] proposition were Beveridge, [illegible] Clapp, Clark of Arkansas, Chamberlain, [illegible] ber, Owen, Shiveley, Stone and Taliaferro.

Of these eighteen, six—Chamberlain, Clark, Owen, Shiveley, Stone and Taliaferro—are Democrats.

To Purchase Securities.

[illegible] of the [illegible] proposition was seen the [illegible] vote was announced and Mr. [illegible] an amendment that [illegible] should be invested only [illegible] bearing not less than 2 [illegible]. This [illegible] the $700,000,000 [illegible] bonds from [illegible] for the [illegible].

Mr. Borah's amendment [illegible] by Mr. [illegible] Mr. Borah [illegible] was [illegible] with the result that his amendment [illegible] of the [illegible] cess of the measure [illegible] but [illegible] speeches.

The [illegible] the Borah proposal was [illegible] carried 46 to 21.

A number of other amendments were offered chiefly from Democrats, that were [illegible] as fast as presented without the formality of a vote. Senator [illegible] submitted an amendment [illegible] companies doing a banking business on the same [illegible] as national state [illegible] banks, in the matter of receiving postal deposits. It was vigorously opposed by Mr. Heyburn but was accepted by the leaders on a viva voce vote.

The last important amendment to be defeated was that of Mr. Owen, [illegible]

Stone Predicts Changes.

Senator [illegible] took the [illegible] final [illegible] of a speech he referred to the influence exerted by the President in pushing this bill through, and asked if there was any Senator so credulous as to believe that the Borah amendment would be found in the measure when it came out of conference. That amendment, he said, was particularly obnoxious to Republican leaders and the President, and would never be permitted to stay in the bill when it became a law.

On the final vote one Democrat, Mr. Chamberlain of Oregon, supported the Republicans and [illegible] voted against the [illegible]. The final vote on the passage of the bill stood as follows:

Yeas: Beveridge, Borah, Bourne, Bradley, Brandegee, Brown, Bulkeley, Burkett, Burnham, Burrows, Burton, Carter, Chamberlain, [illegible], Clark of Wyoming, Crane, Crawford, [illegible], Cummins, Depew, Dick, Dillingham, Dixon, Dolliver, DuPont, Flint, Frye, Gallinger, Gamble, Guggenheim, Heyburn, Jones, Kean, La Follette, Lodge, McCumber, Nixon, Oliver, Page, Perkins, Piles, Root, Scott, Smoot, Stephenson, Sutherland, Warner, Warren and Wetmore. Total—50.

Nays: Bailey, Bankhead, Clark of Arkansas, Davis, Foster, Gore, Hughes, Johnson, McEnery, Money, Overman, Owen, Paynter, Purcell, Rayner, Shiveley, Simmons, Smith of Maryland, Smith of South Carolina, Stone, Taliaferro and Taylor. Total—22.

All Senators not mentioned were paired.

PINERO TO VISIT NEW YORK

British Playwright to See Ethel Barrymore in His Play.

NEW YORK, March 5.—Word is received at the Empire Theatre that Sir Arthur Wing Pinero, the British playwright, has decided to visit America this Spring to see Ethel Barrymore in his play, "Mid-Channel." The message came from Charles Frohman, who is now in Paris watching the performance of "Chantecler."

TOBACCO TRUST WINS BY A VOTE OF SIX TO TWO

Decision of Supreme Court Is "Doped" Out Like a Horse Race

ON PAST PERFORMANCES

"Tip" Given That Victory Is Certain; Stock Selling Higher Than Ever.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—The suit brought by the Government to dissolve the Tobacco Trust has al[illegible] decided in favor of the [illegible], it was reported here to-night. The [illegible] is six to two [illegible] declared, [illegible] Justice Moody of Massachusetts. The finding of the court [illegible] known through [illegible] from the bench.

[illegible] rise in the price of [illegible] stocks in the past few days was the [illegible] as to what [illegible] expected from the Supreme Court. This rise is traced to buying by the tobacco men themselves. The men in the tobacco business [illegible] good business men and they never make a move unless they have pretty sound information upon which to base it.

A Tip to Buyers.

For the past week the tip from the Tobacco Trust's agents has been to buy the stock. "We are sure to win" they have said. "But if we lose a re-organization plan is all ready. By this plan every stockholder will get stock of the independent companies and even better dividends than now."

The Supreme Court did not "leak" then. How did the tobacco men obtain their information?

They reached their conclusion just as a man "dopes" a horse race. It was a problem of past performances. The Trust's lawyers with ex-Congressman Burke Cockran at their head made an exhaustive study of the past decisions of every man on the bench that could have a bearing on this case.

[illegible] Justice Moody [illegible] the lawyers [illegible].

Judging By the Past.

[illegible]

When these lawyers had analyzed all of these decisions they were morally [illegible] of the result to be announced from the start.

The decisions of six [illegible] court were [illegible] points raised in the tobacco case [illegible] would take it [illegible] would decide in favor of the tobacco people in this case. Two of the men [illegible] it appeared would be [illegible] the Trust.

It is believed that Justice Harlan is one of the two against the Trust. His decisions in the past foreshadow that conclusion.

CHANDLER NOT CANDIDATE.

Former Secretary Urges Radical Candidate for Governor.

CONCORD, N. H., March 5.—William E. Chandler, former Secretary of the Navy and [illegible] United States Senator, [illegible] to-day an extremely difficult problem for the Republicans of New Hampshire.

While in to-day's brief statement the Grand Old Man of the dominant party apparently announces that he is not a candidate for the nomination, there is nothing in his seven line statement in the Monitor that would stand in the way of his accepting a unanimous call.

To my Republican Friends in New Hampshire,

It seems to me that I ought now to tell you that I think we ought to nominate for Governor a radical but rational progressive, other than myself. He should be a man who has never taken the money or free passes of Mr. Tuttle and will not take any from Mr. Mellen. Gratefully,

WILLIAM E. CHANDLER.

UNSAFE TO ROB RICH.

Newport Police Again Recover Cottage Colony Loot.

NEWPORT, March 5.—Once more the Newport police department, to-day, proved the old theory held here that it is unsafe to rob a member of the society cottage colony. Loot taken from "Wild Acre," the cottage of Albert H. Olmstead on Ocean avenue, was found in the quarters of the [illegible] coast artillery. It consisted of silverware and a Japanese jewelled sword.

There is not a case on record here where a millionaire's cottage has been robbed and the goods not found.

LUSITANIA OUTWITS BIG GERMAN LINER

Breaks Precedent and Crowds President Lincoln Out of a Chance.

NEW YORK, March 5.—In a race with the Hamburg-American liner President Lincoln [illegible] steerage passengers [illegible] to her pier before the [illegible] boarded her. [illegible] town to board [illegible] did not discharge her passengers until the customs men had inspected her and so did not violate the law.

[illegible] that the President Lincoln carried 2,956 [illegible]. The Lusitania had 1,486. All told there were 3,263 passengers on the President Lincoln, the largest number ever carried on any ship.

Captain Charles was afraid that if he waited for the customs men they would board the President Lincoln and his passengers would be held up. So he took a chance.

Barges were waiting when the Lusitania docked, and in quick time the steerage passengers were transferred to Ellis Island. They filled up the available room there so that there was no space on the island for the Lincoln's passengers. Her steerage passengers may have to stay on board until Monday.

DISPUTE ALLD'S BANKBOOK.

Story of $100,000 Deposit Target in Bribery Investigation.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 5.—Senator Allds own statement that during the last ten years he has deposited about $100,000 in various banks throughout the state will be chief point of attack when James W. Osborne, Conger's counsel, begins the cross examination of Allds, Tuesday. Mr. Osborne will attempt to prove that during the period Allds has served in the Legislature he has had little or no law practice and that he has seldom appeared personally in court. If Mr. Osborne is unable to prove false Allds's statement that he is worth only $25,000 there is little doubt of the result when the final vote of the Senate is taken.

HUGE SOFT COAL TRUST.

Eighty-Four Mines With Output of 8,000,000 Tons Involved.

CINCINNATI, March 5.—The formation of the largest bituminous coal combination in the United States including eighty-four mines in the New River, West Virginia district and [illegible] total output of 8,000,000 tons of soft coal annually, was reported in this city to-day. All the mines in the district are to have one selling agency and are [illegible] with the Guggenheimers, with principal offices in Washington. Thirty independent mining companies are to go in the deal.

BAR ASIATIC COOKS.

San Francisco Union Puts Orientals on Unfair List.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 5.—Following the advice of the Labor Council the cooks' union has adopted a resolution declaring that all restaurants employing Orientals are unfair to organized labor. Union cooks working with Asiatics will not be ordered to walk out at once, but will be allowed to wear the union button. Employers will have a reasonable time to engage white help.

"Little General" Says Goodbye to Gomez After Gay Time at Cuban Capital.

HAVANA, March 5.—Boston's [illegible] Mayor wound up [illegible] to the Cuban capital in a blaze of glory.

When the P. & O. mail steamer weighed anchor to-night and pointed her nose to [illegible] New York the [illegible] stood on the upper deck and waved many adieus to the hospitable people with whom he has made merry for the past three days.

A special audience with President Gomez [illegible] "Boston," said the messenger who announced the presence of Boston's mayor to the swarthy chief executive of Cuba. Fitz in an immaculate pair of white flannel trousers bowed and smiled. "Tell him we've heard of him down here and we're glad to meet him," said the President to his interpreter. John F. smiled again upon learning that his fame had spread beyond the confines of his own country.

"Tell the President that I see a great future for this young Republic. It is capable of a great development. Its beautiful harbor and surroundings serve as a great attraction to visitors. I have thoroughly enjoyed my visit here, and I look forward to coming again," rattled off "the Little General" in true campaign style.

Played "Sweet Adeline."

From the time when his transport dropped anchor in sight of the hulk of the ill-fated Maine, the Cubans managed to make it interesting for the mayor. Immediately upon [illegible] he was surrounded by a band of hotel runners, each anxious to secure his patronage. The Saville won out because "Dick" Field, deputy mayor had already cabled for accommodations there for his chief and Mrs. Fitzgerald.

The Saville boasts English speaking waiters, and one of these familiar with the political history of Boston tipped off the orchestra to give the Boston guests a reminder of home, so that when Mr. and Mrs. Fitzgerald marched in to supper, they were treated to the strains of "Sweet Adeline," during the fish course. "I thought I left that behind in Boston, but I guess I can't shake it," said John F., as he listened to the familiar tune.

A Trip Across the Harbor.

Accompanied by his wife, the mayor made the rounds of the fashionable cafes, where all the aristocratic Cubans gather after the [illegible] to [illegible] their black coffee [illegible] and [illegible] their elaborate and costly toilettes.

Friday the mayor and his wife took a trip across the [illegible] to the old Cabanas fortress, where General Weyler incarcerated Cuban patriots. They were driven out to the Vedado or boulevard along the ocean [illegible] with the palatial homes of the city's wealthiest residents.

"I feel right at home here," said the mayor to his guide as their vehicle wended through the [illegible] streets [illegible] of Boston.

A visit to the [illegible] grounds of the Cuban League and to the old Spanish Cathedral occupied the remainder of the time of Boston's Mayor during his visit here.

"I have seen and heard so little of politics since the start of my vacation that I really believe that I have forgotten all about the game. "I am taking some very pleasant memories and a new Panama hat, which I picked up here at a bargain, back to Boston, and I can truthfully say that I never enjoyed any vacation better," said the Mayor upon his departure.

Mayor Fitzgerald is due in New York Tuesday morning and will be back in his home city late Tuesday evening.

JUDGE HARRIS MAY OPPOSE BUCHANAN

Talk by Democrats of Nominating Superior Court Judge for Congress.

BROCKTON, March 5.—William R. Buchanan of this city was nominated by the Republicans [illegible] Congressional District [illegible] for the unexpired term of the late Congressman Lovering [illegible] Charles S. Groves [illegible] started for Washington [illegible].

They know that [illegible] former Governor Douglas's secretary and [illegible] Douglas defeat [illegible] Republicans of his [illegible] and Secretary Groves have gone to ask for help of the Republican congressional campaign committee to elect Buchanan.

[illegible] to the effect that Judge Harris [illegible] Buchanan. It was even said that this was the sentiment behind the announcement of Charles S. Hamlin, that he must decline the nomination of the Democratic convention. Hamlin had been thinking [illegible] over since Tuesday. It is well known that Eugene N. Foss thinks well of Judge Harris. It is also well known that certain gentlemen of prominence in the Republican machine had rather see Robert O. Harris, Democratic, at Washington, than William R. Buchanan, Republican.

Buchanan was nominated on the [illegible] ballot. He got 74 votes of the total of 137 cast. Elmer L. Curran of Hingham received 8 votes, Frank G. Wheatley of Abington 17, and Judge Robert O. Harris of East Bridgewater 38.

TWO GO OVER NIAGARA.

Fight for Life in Boat in Swift Current.

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., March 5.—Struggling against the raging torrent two unknown men went to their death in the rapids of the Canadian channel of the upper Niagara river this afternoon. Their wrecked boat is at the foot of the Horse Shoe Falls, and a couple of broken oar blades are floating in the turbid water above the icebridge.

William Hill, an employe of the State reservation, saw [illegible] American [illegible] above the head of the [illegible] struggled against the [illegible] boat struck the [illegible] and they disappeared. The boat [illegible] over the boiling waters two or three times and then it, too, disappeared.

ALEXANDRA ON YACHT

New Report Says Empress Is on Coast of France

PARIS, March 5.—Empress [illegible] of Russia, worn by the rigors of the Russian climate, is said to-day to [illegible] the Russian Imperial yacht Standart [illegible] the harbor at Villefranche [illegible]. The prefect of the Department of Alpes Maritimes is reported as having [illegible] official visit to the empress [illegible] refuses to comment on the affair. The Standart, to-day's dispatches say, is closely guarded.

The report is at variance with dispatches earlier in the week, which said that the empress was in the royal palace at Tsarskoe-Selo, where she was suffering from a serious relapse in her nervous disorder.

TERRIFIC INDICTMENT OF THE WHOLE BOSTON POLICE FORCE; CITY IS CALLED 'RUM SOAKED'

Carl Hovey in the Metropolitan Magazine Declares O'Meara's System Is Archaic; That Police Have No Control Over Liquor Business and Dens of Vice Are Rampant in Theatre District.

"Let O'Meara Look Over 'Hotels' on Eliot and Nearby Streets Which Cater to Criminals, and See How Professional Criminals Are Elbow to Elbow with Innocent Young Girl Beginners."

F[illegible] Boston [illegible] have [illegible] of the [illegible] O'Meara [illegible] conditions which [illegible]

[illegible] newspapers have [illegible] gang of swindlers [illegible] with national record [illegible] city in the [illegible] working [illegible] building in Pemberton square where O'Meara has the [illegible] archaic system. The gang has been known to everybody in the barrooms, saloons, dives and hotels, including such hotels as the Adams House and Clark's, and all up and down Washington street. They were known individually. Their "business" was known. Every cabbie and taxi driver was "wise" as they marched boldly up and down, in and out, with this or that "sucker" [illegible].

Everybody knew what was going on. Everybody except the plain clothes policemen who make O'Meara's trusted staff. They alone could not see—or were they "seen"?

Then came the great explosion over the looting of the Cambridge National City Bank. Quick following were other scandals. Men connected with other institutions had fallen victims. Enough has been shown to prove to even the most reluctant citizen that there is something rotten in Boston.

"I am not interested," was all that O'Meara had to say when newspaper reporters asked him what he proposed to do about it. "That is mere routine. See Superintendent Pierce."

SEVERE INDICTMENT BY A NOTED WRITER.

Wholly eliminating personalities, forgetting that O'Meara is chief of the System and that Governor Draper refuses to budge a bit, judging the Boston police system absolutely [illegible] could the [illegible] of the [illegible] fortnight about this gang of swindlers and the way their work was boldly done in daylight be duplicated elsewhere?

[illegible] additional and convincing corroboration of all [illegible] Metropolitan Magazine [illegible] Carl Hovey [illegible] It might move anybody save an O'Meara [illegible].

Nothing [illegible] published [illegible] Mr. Hovey [illegible] more masters. He tells the people of the United States startling facts about Boston.

The Metropolitan Magazine is published [illegible] Melville E. Stone [illegible] general manager of the Associated Press which furnishes news to papers in every city in the world. Trained by his father to give the public unbiased facts, to understate rather than exaggerate, Mr. Stone's policy has been one of conservatism.

Sent to Several Cities.

[illegible] sent Mr. Hovey out to make a study of the everlasting police problem in several cities—a comparative study.

"Go to Cleveland, Toledo, Philadelphia, Chicago and New York," he instructed Hovey, "and conclude by making a comparison of them with Boston. I understand Boston has the most American police force."

Mr. Hovey came to Boston and spent several weeks here. Then he went back to Mr. Stone.

"Boston's police are the worst in the country," he reported. "It is impossible to hold them up as models."

Mr. Stone was astounded.

"Very well, go back, make an exhaustive study and tell the people the truth. If the public has been deceived, let the facts be known."

Mr. Hovey came back to Boston. Fearing that he might unwittingly give the police less than their due, he went straight to O'Meara and talked with him for hours. Inspector Pierce, son of Superintendent Pierce, a personal friend of Mr. Hovey, personally escorted him around. It is a reasonable assumption that under these circumstances Mr. Hovey got a good look at the [illegible] of the System [illegible] to [illegible] O'Meara and Inspector Pierce.

Bad Conditions Exposed.

Then he went back to New York and [illegible] of what he saw and found [illegible] written. Not in the blackest days of New York nor in the mighty piles of [illegible] into the light by the Lexow Committee were [illegible] conditions shown.

The Sunday American to-day presents portions of Mr. Hovey's article and suggests that every citizen of Boston may [illegible] a copy of the magazine and read it [illegible] especially the comparison he draws between Boston methods and the modern methods in Cleveland and Toledo.

Here are some extracts from the Metropolitan article:

In New York and Chicago there is always the desire for police reform; in Philadelphia, even, the police are forced to take the trouble to "jolly" the respectables. It is cleverly done, but in virtuous Boston the police are solid with the town. Citizens told me there is really no police issue here. If you are looking for the ideal police force, they almost said, it is here. The report of the Commissioner to His Excellency the Governor contains pages headed "The Boston Police in Comparison" not unfavorable to Boston.

Scores Old Sleepy Boston.

Only one newspaper [illegible] the [illegible] shocking [illegible] the picture looked all too bright. And it assuredly is. By the time I had finished looking into things [illegible] sorts.

There are several reasons why Boston [illegible] The [illegible] legislation [illegible] civility and helpfulness [illegible] Those who [illegible] sible Bostonians go to their homes in the suburbs before 6 o'clock and have no more idea than my cat what goes on during their absence from [illegible].

[illegible] Boston 1915 [illegible] civic organizations [illegible] are all absorbed in a distant plan, which is to raise at a future date the whole city, police department and all, to a higher plane.

Police News Censorship

Another reason is Commissioner Stephen O'Meara. To have a "high class" citizen at the head of the police department is a kind of guarantee. And Mr. O'Meara is a confirmed police crank devoted to his work, [illegible] burning the [illegible] at night in Pemberton square and disinterested. He formerly owned and EDITED THE BOSTON JOURNAL. HIS FORMER NEWSPAPER FRIENDS ARE WITH HIM AND REPORTERS ARE NOT FREE, AS THEY ARE IN NEW YORK, TO WRITE WHAT THEY WANT ABOUT THE POLICE.

AND THERE IS ALSO A PRACTICAL NEWS CENSORSHIP—FOR THE GOOD OF THE SERVICE, AND BASED APPARENTLY ON THE POLICE IDEA THAT PUBLICATION OF REPORTS OF CRIME IS A WARNING TO THE UNSUSPECTING THIEVES THAT THE POLICE ARE AFTER THEM. THE PAPERS ARE MORE IN THE DARK AS TO THE ACTUAL AMOUNT OF CRIME THAN THEY ARE, FOR INSTANCE, IN NEW YORK.

Thus Boston people are led along the path of [illegible].

"Boston Is Rum Soaked."

Boston is rum soaked. The police arrest between forty and fifty thousand persons for drunkenness every year. As almost half of them come from outside towns with the fixed idea to go as far as they like, the police have not an easy task. But easy or not, Boston has the right to expect better police work. A drunken man in the street, sometimes the joke of the crowd, with even a policeman joining in the guying, is a common sight there; this is not the case in New York or in any other metropolitan city.

It shows that the Boston police use little control over [illegible] to make them run their places [illegible] orderly and temperate [illegible]. But there is nothing new in this. Boston is used to it, used to drinking without gaiety, sordid rum-soaking and profitable pushing the sale of booze. The new thing is the cosmopolitanizing of the amusement section of the city for the benefit of that same liquor trade; they have branched out in the saloon business to take in the

"Discipline of the Force Bad," Says Noted Writer

Carl Hovey Declares That There IS Graft, Too, in O'Meara's Model, Spotless Autocracy.

'Boston Police Worst in Country'

"THE attitude of the police toward their work is archaic. * * * The police do not SERVE the city, but RULE it according to outworn and inhumane customs. * * * Petty arrests are a sign of bad, uncivilized police work. * * * Boston's police are the worst in the country. * * * There is a practical news censorship, based on the idea that PUBLICITY is a warning to criminals. * * * Boston is rum-soaked. * * * The Licensing Board is bad—the charges of favoritism seem to be well founded. * * * The discipline of the police force is not good, but bad. * * * The discipline is "soft"; it means clubbing cases, and there are many. * * * Not organized graft but personal graft.

—Carl Hovey in the Metropolitan Magazine.

women and girls, so as to extend the social evil, and whoop up the "gay" life.

It means ever so many thousands in the pockets of the big liquor men, the nightly business in fake continental "gardens," imitation New York resorts like the Rome and Piscopo at the North End, and vice forcing hotels.

These electric sign affairs, creaming over with profitable trade, are nearly all new within a few years. To understand the danger and seriousness of the development, you need to remember that they correspond to no natural social need.

Boston is domestic and provincial, without real cosmopolitan feeling or cosmopolitan slums, the people do not know how to take these things as they do in New York, the young girls and youths who mix with prostitutes and cadets [illegible] makers they [illegible] them over there, frantically imagine they are seeing life, and their parents at home have neither the imagination nor knowledge to warn them.

The police, who are their natural protectors, stand aside. Every evening a whole section, about the size of the loop district in Chicago, and corresponding to it except that Chicago's amusement district is kept clean, a section of stores, theatres, cheap lodging houses, brothels, Chinatown, nickel shows, thieves' hang-outs, the palm garden kind of thing, free and easy "cafes" and [illegible] Hungarian resorts [illegible] HEART OF BOSTON IS SEEMINGLY GIVEN OVER, WITH RESTRICTION OF NO THOROUGH KIND, to the crowd which pours into it, overflowing the narrow sidewalks into the crooked streets.

Sedentary License Board.

Fifteen years ago the Lexow period ended for the Boston police. A blast of reform temper obliged them to stop blackmailing the social evil, which, incidentally, became scattered all over the city. Some years afterward, one of the police commissioners—they had then a board of three, appointed by the Governor—set out on a crusade to make the saloonkeepers respect the conditions of their licenses. This time the liquor interest got "sore." When the reform agitation subsided, Boston had a new police, under a single commissioner, and the liquor licensing power had been taken out of the department.

It was given to a "licensing board" appointed by the Governor, and under the new arrangement the liquor men are well off.

IT SEEMS TO BE NOBODY'S BUSINESS TO SEE THAT THEY LIVE UP TO THEIR LICENSES. THE POLICE DO NOT TAKE IT UPON THEMSELVES, AND THE BOARD — THREE GENTLEMEN, SEDENTARY, IN AN OFFICE — CAN'T.

The act itself says (Section 15), that if the Police Commissioner "is of the opinion" that license provisions are being violated he shall report to the board, etc. The Watch and Ward, as Mr. Chase told me, could not find the way to raise such an opinion in the commissioner's mind; in fact, made to feel rather cheap—"you should learn to prepare your cases better."

The police say that the North End resorts are for "sailors"—and it goes! They must be sailors de luxe, with the taxi habit, from what I saw.

The White Light District.

Commissioner O'Meara spent hours in patiently explaining to me the details of his work; no one could fail to see that it was absolutely interesting work to him. He wished to build up a model organization of men to do police work which should be unimpeachably legal, with a spirit that was due. He feels that he has his wish. He is willing to let the morale of the force be compared with that of the commissioned officers of the regular army.

* * * * * *

One night in Boston will show any interested citizen the truth of this; let him remain in town after the business day is over and see the transformation of the principal business streets which also include the amusement section.

Let him first go a block or two south of Boylston and look over the "hotels" on Eliot and the neighboring streets which cater to thieves and [illegible] and are filled with them every evening; "hotels" without a kitchen, where a call for food would be a joke, without a single sleeping room, but with boxed-off "private dining rooms," or perhaps two or three bare halls upstairs for the Sunday trade.

Thieves Work Theatre Crowds.

THE THIEVES WORK IN THE THEATRE-GOING CROWDS, BOTH ON THE STREETS AND AT THE NORTH AND SOUTH STATIONS; EVERY EVENING REPORTS ARE RECEIVED AT HEADQUARTERS OF THE LOSS OF MONEY AND JEWELRY. LET HIM SEE HOW THE WOMEN TAKE POSSESSION OF WASHINGTON AND TREMONT STREETS, THE PROFESSIONALS AND THE YOUNG GIRL BEGINNERS ELBOW TO ELBOW.

According to the figures of the Watch and Ward Society, "close to five thousand professional night walkers are on the Boston streets. Let him visit a few of the Bohemian resorts—there are about twenty-five—where these women and girls bring up and get an idea of the real character of the business of these places.

NOTE.—The Watch and Ward Society claims that 200 disorderly houses, with 1,000 "professional" inmates, reap the harvest made in these cafes. O'Meara says this is not true and claims these houses are "not over twenty-five in number."

"White Slave Markets."

"White slave markets" is the name the Watch and Ward gives them, and it is the correct one.

Police Commissioner O'Meara says himself, in his report, "The number of girls from twelve to seventeen years of age roaming the streets at night, far from their homes, and learning the lessons of prostitution, has increased in the past few years with startling rapidity."

NEVERTHELESS, THE POLICE DEPARTMENT DOES NOTHING TO PUT OUT OF BUSINESS THE LAW-BREAKING RESORTS, WHICH ARE CLEARLY AT THE BOTTOM OF THE TROUBLE.

Officials Fight Decency.

THE LICENSING BOARD DOES NOTHING EITHER. THERE ARE THREE MEMBERS: EZRA BAKER, A MILLIONAIRE BANKER; SAMUEL HUDSON, LAWYER AND FRED EMERY, PRACTICAL POLITICIAN. CHARGES OF FAVORITISM ARE FREQUENTLY HEARD AGAINST THIS BOARD WHICH, WHETHER TRUE OR NOT, SEEM TO BE BORNE OUT BY THEIR INACTION IN CERTAIN CASES. IN FACT, THE SPIRIT OF THE POLICE AND THIS BOARD IS A FATAL COMBINATION FOR BOSTON.

"The licensing Board," said Mr. J. Frank Chase, secretary of the Watch and Ward Society, to me, "went out of the way to attack us until we made up our mind that they are wholly against the decent and in favor of the rotten."

This is strong language, but no stronger than that used by the police commissioner on the subject of "spotter" evidence when he said that "the evidence of a man who, for pay, would enter these houses and join in their orgies would not be worth the time it would take to present it to a scornful jury." "Join in their orgies" is a rhetorical flourish, nothing of the sort being necessary, and a police head ought to know that "spotter evidence" has been the foundation of police reform in every large city.

SEVERAL THINGS LEAD ME TO THE CONCLUSION THAT THE DISCIPLINE OF THE BOSTON POLICE IS NOT GOOD, BUT BAD.

I have quoted Mr. O'Meara's favorable comparison of his men with the officers of the regular army. But to know that only thirty-six policemen out of a force of about fifteen hundred were tried in one year means nothing unless you are assured that the sergeants and other superior officers strictly report every offence committed.

Sees Rules Violated.

Five patrolmen were tried for neglect to pull boxes, four for absence without leave—DOES THIS TOTAL OF NINE REPRESENT ALL, OR EVEN AN APPRECIABLE FRACTION, OF THE POLICEMEN WHO FAILED TO STAY ON THEIR POSTS IN ONE YEAR?

From what residents of the outlying districts told me it is more than probable that one capable "spotter" could find twenty cases to report in a single night.

WITHOUT EVEN LOOKING FOR IT, I SAW WITHIN ONE HOUR FOUR INFRACTIONS OF RULE 12 OF THE BOOK OF RULES FORBIDDING CONVERSATION BETWEEN POLICEMEN ON DUTY EXCEPT ON POLICE BUSINESS. IN ONE CASE IT WAS A GROUP OF TWO PATROLMEN AND A SERGEANT, AND IN ALL FOUR IT WAS "KIDDING" OR CHANCE TALK VERY EVIDENTLY. THE DISCIPLINE IS "SOFT." BOSTON NEEDS CAPTAIN PIPER FOR ABOUT TWO DAYS; ASK CHICAGO.

Lax discipline means clubbing cases; there are many. Last Summer a young Swedish sailor was killed by a blow from a policeman's club. Gustaf Bergstadt was his name, and he came ashore from his steamer for a frolic in the North End. He and his friends began drinking, and a thief, who had attached himself to the party, took Bergstadt's money.

There was a fight. A policeman ran up, shouting something to Bergstadt in a language the latter could not understand. The sailor pitched into the "cop," who then struck him a blow on the head with his club. He died in the City Hospital. Bergstadt's parents, who are well-to-do bourgeois in Karlsberg, have [illegible] the Swedish Government to undertake an investigation. THE BOSTON JUDGE, WHO SAT AT THE INQUIRY INTO THE SAILOR'S DEATH, DECIDED THAT THE POLICEMAN HAD "ACTED IN A REASONABLE MANNER." No doubt the policeman hit harder than he meant, but the Swedish population of New England, deeply aroused by the treatment of the case, find it difficult to accept the kindly view.

NOTE—Policeman William Kelley, who killed Bergstadt, is still a member of the force in high favor. O'Meara backed him in the entire police inquiry. Mayor Gaynor in New York has caused the dismissal of twenty policemen since Jan. 1 for offences infinitely less serious.

Lame Newsboy Club Victim.

Two months ago a lame newsboy, who had been clubbed in the same precinct, was awarded by the Municipal Court damages of $150 from the policeman who did the clubbing. The evidence showed that the officer had interfered in a "scrap" between this newsboy and another, and, apparently losing control of himself, HAD STRUCK THE CRIPPLE UPON HIS MAIMED HIP WITH A CLUB ABOUT AS HEAVY AS AN IRON BAR.

Of course, the police said the youth had fallen down on a step—all victims of police clubbing fall and grievously hurt themselves on convenient steps.

OTHER CASES MIGHT BE TOLD IN DETAIL, WHICH CONVINCED ME THAT BOSTON IS A CLUBBER'S TOWN.

NOTE—This policeman is still in active service. O'Meara sent his secretary, Leo Rogers, as an attorney, to defend him and in a civil action. More than that, Rogers, a city employe, will fight the case without fee to the policeman on appeal.

When a clergyman protested to Commissioner O'Meara on this subject, asking him to require the hospitals to report to him all the cases of personal injury inflicted by policemen, he replied, that "it is the duty of the policeman to report the facts fully, and at once," and that he couldn't require the hospitals to do so.

THUS IT IS CLEARLY THE POLICEMAN'S BUSINESS TO REPORT ON HIMSELF AND ALL HUMAN BEINGS AND POLICEMEN DO IT!

Carnival of Robbers.

"Ah, but they recover an enormous amount of property every year"—is one of the unanswerable remarks admiring Bostonians make concerning their police. It is unanswerable. Also it proves nothing. For this reason: That the police report tells us the amount of property reported stolen in the city, but does not tell us the amount recovered that was stolen "in and out of the city," but this time it does not tell us the amount stolen. All we really know is that the police recover some stolen property; what the percentage of recovery is anyone who will may guess.

Edward F. Woods, of Hinckley & Woods, the largest burglary insurance company in Boston, guessed that less than 10 per cent. of the city losses were recovered, adding that a great many robberies were never reported to the police at all. People seemed to feel the hopelessness of reporting their losses to the police, for the recoveries were very small. Another expert called the amount trifling compared with the yearly loss.

FLAT ROBBERIES ARE GROWING MORE AND MORE FREQUENT; THERE ARE NUMEROUS STREET ROBBERIES, SOME OF THEM PLAIN HOLD-UPS IN THE DOWNTOWN DISTRICT; AND THE NUMBER OF "GUNS," "DIPS" AND "YEGGMEN" MAKING THEIR HEADQUARTERS IN THE BOSTON TENDERLOIN SHOWS WHAT THE PROFESSIONALS THINK OF THE "GRAFT" AND "SOFTNESS" OF THE CITY.

BOSTON HAS THIRTY FIRST-GRADE DETECTIVES, CALLED INSPECTORS. OF THESE, SEVENTEEN OR MORE THAN HALF, JOINED THE FORCE BEFORE THE END OF THE EIGHTIES, AND THERE IS LITTLE YOUNG BLOOD IN THE REST OF THE LIST. LIKE THE SYSTEM AS A WHOLE, THIS BUREAU IS BEHIND THE TIMES.

"Pay Or Be Pulled."

Boston is old and proud and blind. When ex-President Eliot said not long ago, "the worst of our municipal evils is the coupling of our police with the worst vices, saloons, gambling-houses and brothels," Commissioner O'Meara immediately sent out word to the papers, "Not Boston."

IN OTHER CITIES NO DOUBT THE EVILS EXISTED TO WHICH EX-PRESIDENT ELIOT REFERRED, BUT NOT IN BOSTON. IT WAS THE I-AM-HOLIER-THAN-THOU FEELING DRAMATIZED,—BOSTON WITH ITS CLUBBING, WITH ITS HEART UNCLEANLY RESIGNED TO THE NIGHTLY USE OF SOCIAL OUTCASTS AND OUTCASTS IN THE MAKING, AND WITH ITS POLICE GRAFT.

YES, GRAFT; NOT ORGANIZED, BUT PERSONAL. DOES ANYONE SUPPOSE THAT OVER TWO HUNDRED DISORDERLY HOUSES AND ALL THE VICIOUS AND ILLEGAL RESORTS THAT ARE PRACTICALLY IN THE SAME BUSINESS COULD GO ON UNDER THE POLICE BAN AND RAKE IN THE MONEY, AND NOT DIVIDE WITH THE POLICE?

Theoretically, there is war, and the social evil is in a state of siege. But practically, is it not a siege of pay or be "pulled"?

An honest commissioner and an honest superintendent have turned the business over to a force, which assuredly is not all honest, to act when and where and how it is thought best. A pretty situation, out of which Boston gets nothing for her good. The pastor of a church [illegible] made fruitless appeals to the police to close a house of twenty years' standing. Then he went to the Watch and Ward, a little society which does not receive two millions a year from the taxpayers, and the society closed it in ten days. Nobody was tried for neglect of duty. [illegible] to the Van Wyck administration in New York, but then there were some police trials.

Signs of Waking—a Little.

THERE ARE SOME SIGNS THAT BOSTON IS WAKING UP—A LITTLE. Last Fall a meeting in Tremont Temple, and now the formation of a new movement to raise funds, hire detectives and fasten the crime of inefficiency on the police, reveal some feeling.

Dr. O. P. Gifford of Brookline, who came from a Chicago church two years ago and has had some experience in police matters, is one of the organizers of this new feeling. I asked him how he, a suburban minister, came to take it up. He said that his work in connection with a home for outcast women had forced him to see the appalling inefficiency of the Boston police system. "They come pouring in on us in such numbers," said Dr. Gifford, "that it is like trying to bale out the Charles River. WE MUST HAVE A POLICE DEPARTMENT THAT WILL NOT PLAY AT BLINDMAN'S BUFF WITH THE SOCIAL EVIL. THE SITUATION IS TERRIBLE."

And referring to one of Mr. O'Meara's statements, namely, "If infamous resorts can be stopped only by exposing the young men of the police force to debauchery they will never be stopped while I am commissioner," Dr. Gifford said: "If it is to be a choice between a clean police force and a clean city, let us have the clean city."

Police Work Archaic.

BUT, IN FACT, BOSTON GETS NEITHER. AND NOBODY IN THE DEPARTMENT IS BOUND TO CARE. THE STATE GIVES BOSTON HER POLICE AND LICENSING BOARD. BOSTON MERELY PAYS FOR IT ALL. IT IS A FAR FROM FINE EXAMPLE OF THE VIRTUE OF A METROPOLITAN TOTAL SYSTEM—IN TRUTH A VIVID ARGUMENT IN FAVOR OF HOME RULE.

Some talk of great things that are to happen at the next State election, and liquor men who are running decently say bitterly that the others [illegible] that Boston will go 'no license' if the hog work isn't stopped. Think that may be wild, or not so wild.

ONE THING IS CLEAR—THAT BOSTON WILL NOT CHANGE ANYTHING UNTIL FIRST SHE WAKES UP TO THE FACT THAT THE ATTITUDE OF HER POLICE TOWARD THEIR WORK IS ARCHAIC, THAT HER POLICE DO NOT SERVE THE CITY, BUT RULE IT ACCORDING TO OUTWORN AND INHUMAN CUSTOMS, THAT THE ROLLING UP OF AN ENORMOUS AND DISPROPORTIONATE TOTAL OF ARRESTS, MOSTLY PETTY, IS A SIGN OF BAD, UNCIVILIZED POLICE WORK. Boston, the humane and benevolent and thoughtful, is not so at home.

And now, Mr. Citizen of Boston, having read this terrific indictment against YOUR Police Commissioner and police force, HOW do YOU feel about it?

Study the question over this glorious Sunday morning. It is the most perilous problem that NOW confronts Boston.

What are YOU going to do about it?

SUPERFLUOUS HAIR REMOVERS

The New York World, in Commenting Upon Unscrupulous Manufacturers of Them, Says:

"The fakes put on the market in the last ten years have numbered their victims by the hundreds of thousands. Empty promises have been made by scores of promoters in the wild scramble to get the money. The marvel is that woman has not become so thoroughly disgusted as to reject all treatments for good.

"But her hope for a remedy was not in vain and the credit of coming to her assistance fell to an American. Only a few years ago the now well-known De Miracle treatment was brought forth and it proved to be a revelation in modern science. A representative of the New York World investigated the discovery and the methods by which it was introduced to the public. He found exhaustive tests have shown it to be the [illegible] practical, expeditious and safe way in which to destroy the growth of hair. Those who put it before the public knew the fallacy and dishonesty of publishing extravagant claims. They did not resort to any catch schemes, such as making a prospective customer a special offer of personal interest. * * * They started in to win the confidence of those interested, and in this way they have been eminently successful. * * * What is more to the point, it has been indorsed by prominent physicians, representative medical journals and leading magazines devoted to woman's cause. There is too much at stake to risk such indorsements if they are not true to the letter. Only the result of repeated chemical experiments and a thorough knowledge of the origin of all hair growth could stand against the investigation of such authorities." The De Miracle Chemical Company is open and above board in every detail. The indorsements are not just claimed. A little probing on the part of the paper disclosed the fact that they are published and sent broadcast, with the identity and address of the writer or publication added. This is the stumbling block of all so-called remedies. A reputable member of the medical profession or a publication in good standing could never afford to be identified with anything that savors of a fake, and the voluntary praise given through these channels is not to be bought with money. It is given on the strength of conviction.

When so great and reliable a publication as the New York World publishes such facts as the above in reference to hair removers it should be sufficient to convince any one that De Miracle is the only absolutely safe, reliable and trustworthy hair remover ever offered the public. De Miracle is sold by Houghton & Dutton.

The complete article of the New York World and editorials of many other well known publications, with our Booklet containing testimonials, will be mailed free in plain sealed envelope on request. Address De Miracle Chemical Co., Dept. 63, Park av. and 129th st., New York. Write for it to-day.

HOMES OF RICH HAVE RIVAL IN RECORD SIX-MASTER

All the Comforts of Expensive Hotel Found on the New Schooner Wyoming.

MASTER'S QUARTERS FINE

Drawing Room and Telephone on Boat in the Coal Carrying Trade.

"I'D like to have the renting of this," said the real estate man, as he looked around him. "Let me see, I think I would describe it this way:

"TO LET—On Boston's sea front, swept on all sides by ocean breezes, an apartment of six rooms and bath. Rooms large and airy. Hot and cold water, open plumbing, steam heat, and all modern improvements, including janitor's service. Telephone connection. Rent, oh, about sixty dollars a month."

"That's very nice," said Captain Angus McLeod of the six-masted schooner Wyoming," but the tenant would have to be proof against seasickness and be willing to move about the world. Besides I don't think the present tenant could be induced to vacate."

The model apartment in question is built in the after-part of the six-masted schooner Wyoming, the largest sailing vessel in American waters and at present tied up at South Boston discharging a cargo of six thousand tons of coal.

Summer Problem Gone.

Captain McLeod is the tenant, and for Mrs. McLeod the summer cottage question is one of no moment at all. She simply moves into her flat on the Wyoming when [illegible] weather comes and enjoys sea air for three months.

The Wyoming was launched a couple of months ago at Bath, Me. She is 330 feet long, fifty feet wide and it is thirty feet from her deck to her keel, considerably more than the height of an ordinary dwelling house. In building the Wyoming the owners, Percy & Small, of Bath, took particular care to make the skipper comfortable and built for him these wonderful quarters.

Luxury is expected on ocean liners, but on a coasting schooner carrying coal such things would hardly be imagined.

"You can't beat the Wyoming," Captain McLeod declared. He led the way down a flight of wide stairs into a front hall about twelve feet square with several doors opening from it. [illegible] a hat rack, a rug with welcome on it and an umbrella stand, so much [illegible] you think of shore.

"Come into the drawing room," said the skipper, unlocking a door to the left. He disclosed a long apartment with a big centre table, on which was a student's reading lamp. On one side was a book case, across the room was a piano and several big leather chairs gave an impression of solid comfort.

There was a rug on the floor and several pictures on the walls. On either side were doors leading into large and well equipped staterooms with berths as wide as beds. "We can take several guests, if necessary," explained the skipper. "But come let me show you my bathroom. You can't beat it in the Hotel Touraine." Sure enough there was a big bathroom with a comfortable tub and in one corner a glass case containing bottles labeled like an apothecary's. "That is my medicine chest," he explained.

On the wall of the living room was a telephone, connecting the cook's galley and the forecastle.

DROPS DEAD AT SHOOT.

Charles F. Jordan of Portland Collapses at Gun Club.

Charles F. Jordan, a prominent Portland, Me., dry goods merchant, and a member of the Portland Gun Club, dropped dead from apoplexy yesterday while participating in a rifle shoot match at the range of the Paleface Gun Club, Wellington.

Jordan had just shot his first string of fifteen targets, when he said, "I feel faint," and toppled into the arms of Gilbert Wheeler, a friend from Belfast, Me. Dr. Edward F. Gleason of St. Botolph street, this city, who was shooting at the time, attended Jordan.

CHANGE IN AERO PLANS.

FITCHBURG, March 5.—On account of changes in the gas plant here, the aero clubs will be unable to use the Fitchburg station this year. The balloons, Boston, Massachusetts and Springfield are now at Springfield waiting for the opening of the season. The Aero Club of New England is to employ a caretaker and rigger of balloons to give his time to this work. He will be located in Springfield, commencing April 15.

GIRL CHOSEN BY HIGH SCHOOL TO MAKE LYNN GIFT

PEARL BELONGA.

PEARL E. BELONGA, one of the prettiest Lynn High School girl seniors, has been chosen to present the class gift for the members of the graduating class of the English High School next June. Her election has proved one of the most popular choices the class has made in its selection of officials for graduation honors.

Since she was a little girl, Miss Belonga has shown considerable ability as a reader. During her last year in the grammar school she took a course of elocution, and next fall she proposes to enter a Boston school to perfect herself for dramatic readings. She is an officer in the girls' battalion, having been chosen from a cadet to that position.

Dyed-in-the-Wool G. O. P. Leader Breaks Traces When Job Is in Danger.

Another Republican leader has bolted his party's caucus. Leaders of the Grand Old Party are wondering when it's going to stop. Last Fall it was Senator John E. White of the Cape. Why don't you make Rubber Soles to go with your Heels?

So we do. Here they are: Wear them and you won't have to pay tribute to Rubber Shoe Trust.

O'SULLIVAN'S

Live Rubber Soles and Heels

Are Invisible, Safe, Light, Durable and Effectively Protect You Against Climatic Changes.

You can dismiss the rubber overshoe question absolutely.

Why, people who wear them couldn't be induced to go without—they're such comfort—always your silent partner. With them, cold, damp, slippery spots have no terrors for you.

You know Rubbers and Overshoes wear out quickly at the heels—then are useless; they sweat the feet, rot the leather and add to the weight you've got to lift at each step.

Live Rubber Soles and Heels will do all that you expect of Rubbers or Overshoes—inexpensively—they are the demand of reason and they fill the requirement.

Made for Men's and Women's Shoes, light or heavy. First-class shoe dealers will supply you. $1.50 for the soles, 50c for the heels; combination $1.75. If your dealer can't supply you, send his name to the makers.

THEATRES ASSAILED IN 20TH CENTURY CLUB REPORT

Unusual and Exhaustive Review Calls for Reform in Boston.

THE Drama Committee of the Twentieth Century Club has submitted its report on the theatrical and amusement situation in Boston.

The committee delved into Boston amusements for ten weeks between November 28 and [illegible] as the result of a strong [illegible] Twentieth Century Club that [illegible]. The [illegible] they particl[illegible].

The report is the most exhaustive ever [illegible] subject in the history of amusements in the United States. Nothing [illegible] it has ever before been attempted in [illegible]. It covers a wide field. It [illegible] the Boston audience, studies the [illegible] criticizes the form of [illegible] criticizes the theatres for [illegible] nature of the amusements they offer [illegible] the moving picture houses and scolds the newspapers, in passing, for their theatrical reports.

Spend $273,000 a Week.

Occasionally a solid fact jumps out of the report to grip one's attention, as, for instance, that Boston spends about $273,000 every week to be entertained, or that the playhouses have a weekly capacity of 618,248, which will in another year be [illegible] to 750,248.

The committee which investigated the [illegible] audiences [illegible] and newspaper [illegible] Frank Chouteau Brown, chairman; Miss [illegible] A. Clarke, Miss [illegible] Robert M. Price, [illegible] and William F. [illegible] was Edward H. Chandler.

Several places of amusement in Boston are declared to be inadequately equipped with fire exits, with the result that lives are [illegible] imperilled. Sunday night concerts are condemned.

Legislation is urged for better fire protection; higher moral requirements are advocated.

The committee does not hesitate to advise the theatrical managers as to the kind of plays they should offer. The report says:

Should Establish Clientele.

"It is notable that the theatre managers, exclusive of those giving burlesque and vaudeville, make no attempt to establish a permanent clientele—a fundamental need [illegible] conduct of any other business. It [illegible] what prompted the Shuberts [illegible] opening their new [illegible] with two weeks of Shakespeare by Sothern and Marlowe to [illegible] for [illegible] second attraction anything so different as 'The Midnight Sons.'

"The Majestic Theatre, located a block or two away, changed the same day from 'The Beauty Spot' to 'The Melting Pot.' As both theatres are under the same management it would seem much more logical [illegible] 'The Melting Pot' [illegible] 'The Midnight Sons' in the Majestic."

It comments in like manner upon the judgment used in booking plays at the Hollis, Park, Colonial, Tremont and Boston Theatres, which are owned by the syndicate.

Referring to the seating capacity of the theatre, the report says:

"Existing moving picture houses now seat 402,448 persons weekly. By the end of another year this class of amusement [illegible] will accommodate 510,128 [illegible] exclusive of Sunday performances and of other small picture shows that will spring up."

Theatre Is Degenerating.

"The overwhelming predominance of cheap and less desirable forms of entertainment is noted. Yet these [illegible] evidently appeal more and more strongly to [illegible] first-class theatres is of a strikingly vulgar character, approaching burlesque or vaudeville, indicates that the theatre has so degenerated that it is not [illegible] exercising an [illegible] tremendous and widespread influence in lowering public standards of morality and decreasing the average of efficiency of the individual citizen."

Speaking of vaudeville of the better class houses the report says that it is [illegible] because the managers have learned that [illegible] plays [illegible] vaudeville acts are insufferably [illegible] the audiences too good-natured and too easily satisfied.

The statement is made that the concerts at the Boston Opera House are the only high-class undertakings in the entire Sunday concert field.

Pays Respects to Critics.

The committee now turns its attention to the newspapers and declare that they do not make a proper attempt to inform their reader of the kind of show given at various houses. "No emphasis is placed on the fact that burlesque performances are in any way different from [illegible] comedies or farces reviewed in the [illegible] the playhouses.

"The report goes on to say that [illegible] critics who disprove of a play [illegible] their sentiments in a mist of words so that the ordinary reader cannot tell whether he will obtain his money's worth [illegible] performance or not. [illegible] in the case of 'The Girl from R[illegible]' all the newspapers [illegible] what was the character of that play.

"It is the opinion of the committee that several houses are not sufficiently supplied with exits and fire escapes.

"Perhaps it will need a catastrophe to bring these matters before the public with sufficient force to cause effective action to be taken," says the report. "If such a thing does happen [illegible] responsibility will be [illegible] the licensing authority alone—the Mayor of the city of Boston.

"In a comparatively brief time there has [illegible] of dancers appearing [illegible] and less amount of convention [illegible] apparel, and the fact that the most [illegible] dressed among them have been those [illegible] to the most intelligent and [illegible] audiences does not alter the physical [illegible] of the case.

"The present law is said to be totally inefficient in providing proper control over theatrical representations, and a letter from Commissioner O'Meara is quoted to the effect that nothing can be done."

CONSUMER BLAMED FOR HIGH PRICE OF LIVING

Mrs. Richards of Tech in a Lecture Says Envy Is a Factor Also.

"THE high price of meat and the other necessaries of life is due to the fact that the ordinary person wants the things that his neighbor has. Instead of buying things that would have made him more of a man and less of an animal he [illegible] which he would not have thought of getting but for the fact that he saw [illegible] them. This tends to [illegible] the price of everything in demand."

This is the explanation of Mrs. Ellen H. Richards of the faculty of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, for the high cost of living. She made this statement yesterday before the Women's Educational and Industrial Union in a lecture on "Euthenics; Must the Cost of Living Increase?"

Duty of Higher Education.

"The duty of the higher education," she said, "is to put knowledge into the hands of the people. The [illegible] home-economics teacher is of little value to a decadent race.

"Money is that which we exchange for things we value or desire. We value things for many reasons. The strength or intensity of our desire sets the price in the money or effort which we are willing to pay.

"At an auction sale [illegible] the most money for a [illegible] chair is the one who wants [illegible] without an overcoat [illegible] the chair. Another [illegible] would not give [illegible] chair but does want [illegible] the other man would [illegible].

"Why does one man want [illegible] another a book? Not [illegible] drink or wear it. [illegible] warm. Because [illegible] something which [illegible] something ideal [illegible] sentiment of history or tradition which makes him proud of his race, happy at the thought of the glory [illegible] deeds and brave men.

Law of Supply and Demand.

"The value of the things we eat to keep us alive—in distinction from those we fancy—of the things we buy to keep us warm, depends upon their abundance. If there is enough and to spare for all, as is the case with wheat flour, then its value is low, it is cheap.

"When the potato [illegible] crop, there is not enough to go around. Then the value rises. More people want the same potato and bid for it, like the man in the auction room, not because they need the potato, but because it means to them good food. There are several other things just as good as food, and often cheaper, which they might buy instead of the potato if they would learn food values.

"A house in D street is just as warm and comfortable as one in S street, but the house on the latter street represents certain values of associates and neighbors for which a man is willing to pay.

"The danger is that men and women do not know why they value one thing above another, and so they wish or desire the wrong thing without good reason."

COUPONS GOOD AS CASH.

Opportunity to Get Bargains Is Seized by Furniture Buyers.

An army of furniture buyers has taken [illegible] of the offer of the [illegible] Furniture company to cash $5.50 coupons for buyers of special bargains offered for $12. The offer of the house has drawn to its store on Eliot street hundreds of economical shoppers who appreciate high class goods at low prices. The company in fact, is getting a remarkable patronage which indicates that the public is much impressed. The manager of the company said:

"Every person is requested to select the articles desired amounting to $12 or over, give the salesman the $5.50 cash advertising check and the balance in cash. Or the person can pay the bill and cash in the check.

"Furthermore, if our price on any article is not [illegible] one can obtain elsewhere we will forfeit the $5.50. But only one check will be cashed for any one person. That is a point upon which we must be very strict. We make this rule to give to the greatest possible number of persons the advantages that patrons will reap from our offer."

Millionaire Sued for Divorce.

COLUMBUS, Ind., March 5.—Arnold Perry, son of James M. Perry, a millionaire [illegible] who died recently leaving his [illegible] estate to his son, is sued for divorce and $50,000 alimony by Margaret Perry, who alleges that thirty-seven years ago the defendant, after three years of married life and after squandering $10,000 of her money, all she had, deserted her and [illegible] and has not since contributed to their support.

CAMBRIDGE POLICE CALLED 'DRUNKS' AND LAZY

Favoritism Demoralizes Force, Says Circular Aimed at Mayor Brooks.

CAMBRIDGE politics exploded yesterday when a bombshell was thrown into the Mayor Brooks camp by Chairman Irving L. [illegible] of the Non-partisan ward and city committee.

A red-hot circular that sizzles and [illegible] the police force of Cambridge and put Mayor Brooks on the griddle was issued [illegible] Cambridge [illegible] last night with [illegible]. The Brooks faction is stunned. [illegible] is Tuesday, March 15. A paragraph in the circular reads:

> The police of Cambridge are ridden with politics and [illegible] Drunkenness and incapacity are rife among the members of the force. [illegible] well-intentioned there is [illegible] to [illegible]. For the drunken and slothful there is [illegible] their offenses.

The above paragraph has set [illegible] Cambridge [illegible]. Never [illegible] the history of Cambridge, which is noted for its close elections, has such a torrent of abuse been poured out upon the blue helmets.

Easy Field for Crooks.

The circular goes on to state that the Cambridge patrolman shows no respect to his superior officers, and that the whole police force is demoralized. It states that as Cambridge is so near Boston, and as crooks flood in by the hundreds, personal property [illegible] is not safe in the college city beyond the Charles.

The circular charges Mayor Brooks with [illegible] Edward W. [illegible] a former [illegible] who [illegible] Mayor Brooks [illegible] was [illegible] of [illegible] at a salary of $2,500. [illegible] Dowd, [illegible] for the Boston Elevated [illegible] was made [illegible] out of buildings at a salary of $2,400 under the Brooks mayoralty. Cambridge [illegible] for [illegible] with five years' experience as [illegible] according to the scathing circular.

Voters Await Reply.

"The Superintendents' Padrone System" is the title given by the [illegible] circular to the alleged farming out of work by Bridge Commissioner Francis J. Smith.

Cambridge is up in arms. Politics is politics and every knock is a boost, but what the Brooks people will do setting up fights until election and getting out [illegible] replies to the hot ones put over by the rival faction who issued the circular is the question Cambridge voters were speculating on last night.

Brockton Catholic Club Ball.

BROCKTON, March 5.—The annual ball of the Twentieth Century Catholic Club of Brockton will take place on April 11 in Canton Hall. Miss [illegible] M. Kelly has been chosen head of the committee of arrangements. An Old Folks concert will be held by the club in May. Mrs. V. R. Donovan has charge of the program. All the participants are to appear in old time costume.

Deer Bark? Surely; Farmer Has Proof

Legislators to Make Trip West to Look into the Latest "Mystery" in Nature.

Can deer bark?

Western Massachusetts farmers declare that they can and do. Further than that they do it with their teeth, say the farmers who have complained to the Legislature about it. They want an open season on deer so that the barking annoyance will be stopped.

It's the greatest mystery that has ever hit the State House. The eleven members of the Committee on Fisheries and Game have to solve it.

When the farmers appeared before the committee, Senator Joseph P. Lomasney suspected some kind of a nature-fakir game. Joe was put on the committee because of his [illegible] knowledge of the [illegible] the species known as [illegible].

He refused [illegible] "barking" story. The farmers [illegible] suggested that [illegible] committee [illegible] visit West in Massachusetts [illegible] against the deer [illegible] prove. The committee agreed to make the trip and the Legislature gave its approval.

[illegible] from Western Massachusetts last night said that the farmers was [illegible] against the deer [illegible] the teeth marks [illegible] on Berkshire County trees.

BRIDE RECOVERING FROM RAZOR THRUST

Mrs. Horne of Lynn Undecided About Testifying Against Her Boy Husband.

Mrs. Mary Horne, the seventeen-year-old bride who was slashed by her boy husband, Thomas Horne, is undecided about testifying against her husband. She is recovering from her wounds at the Lynn Hospital, where she was taken following the attack Thursday night.

The doctors say she will be able to go to court Wednesday, when her husband must face the charge of attempting to kill her with a razor following a quarrel.

The young [illegible] in a secret wedding in January [illegible]. They have a little [illegible]. It was when Mrs. Horne went to her husband's [illegible] to her own home [illegible] that she [illegible] he quarreled with her and drew a razor.

She was cut on the neck and about the hands. Only the appearance of neighbors and the father of the young man prevented the irate husband from inflicting probably a fatal wound. She warded off his later thrusts by means of a baby's blanket which she had carried to wrap around her child.

Young Horne has entered a plea of not guilty and in default of $2,000 bonds is in Salem jail. He will be brought into the Lynn court Wednesday.

$90,000 FOR BRIDGEPORT.

Eighteen Foot Channel Approved for Its Harbor.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—General Marshall and the engineer board of review for river and harbors has approved the recommendation of Lieut. Colonel Henry Taylor for improvements to the harbor of Bridgeport, Conn. The project contemplates an eighteen-foot channel in the Pequonnock river and a twelve-foot channel in Yellow Mill Creek. The estimated cost is $90,000.

BARS SOCIALIST MEETING.

Berlin Police Chief Issues Warning Orders.

BERLIN, March 5.—President Jagow of the Berlin police has forbidden the Socialists to hold an open air meeting that had been planned for tomorrow. The manifesto [illegible] of the Socialists [illegible] invited all who believe in an equal, secret, direct and universal ballot to take a walk on Sunday toward Treptow park, a suburban assembly [illegible] as a protest against the existing three-class property voting system, and the proposed amendments to the franchise [illegible]. President Jagow subsequently announced that such a walk would be contrary to the spirit of the law.

ARCHBISHOP TO SPEAK.

The Catholic Union of Cambridge will hold its sixteenth anniversary banquet at the Dunster Cafe on the evening of March 17. Archbishop O'Connell, Mayor Brooks, the pastors of ten Catholic parishes of Cambridge and the three Somerville parishes will be guests. Edward J. Brandon, city clerk of Cambridge, will be toastmaster.

SKIN-TORTURES YIELD TO EASY TREATMENT

"In 1907 my face broke out in a mass of itching sores which finally affected my eyesight. I tried several highly recommended salves that cost one dollar an ounce, but to no avail. A friend of mine urged me to try Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment as he was sure of good results from his own experience. I used the Cuticura Ointment for about six weeks, after washing thoroughly with the Cuticura Soap. My face is in perfect health now which I owe to the Cuticura Remedies. I shall always stand by them as one of the greatest blessings to the suffering thousands. Arthur D. Gridley, 532 Dean St., Brooklyn, N. Y., Apr. 9, 1909."

"In the middle of the night of March 30th I woke up with a burning itch in my two hands and I felt as if I could pull them apart. In the morning the itching had got to my chest and during that day it spread all over my body. I was red and raw from the top of my head to the soles of my feet and I was in continual agony from the itching. I could neither lie down nor sit up. I happened to see about Cuticura Remedies and I thought I would give them a trial. I took a good bath with the Cuticura Soap and used the Cuticura Ointment. I put it on from my head down to my feet and then went to bed. On the first of April I felt like a new man. The itching was almost gone. I continued with the Cuticura Soap and Ointment and during that day the itching completely left me. Frank Gridley, 325 E. 43rd St., New York City, Apr. 27, '09."

Mary Meyer's POLITICAL SECRETS

City Democracy Lost an Able Leader in the Death of Patrick Maguire.

By MARY T. MEYER.

Sixth of a series of articles written specially for the Sunday American, another of which will be published next Sunday.)

[illegible] 1910, [illegible] Mary T. Meyer

ON November 28, 1896, Hon. Patrick Maguire died. Maguire's death was a great blow to the Democratic [illegible], coming as it did at a most crucial time. For thirty years he was a leader, and for the past ten years the chief leader in the Democratic City Committee. Occupying this position in the dominant political party, his influence, not only in party politics but through them on the [illegible] municipal government, was probably greater than that of any other citizen except our Mayor.

During my association with the State and city committees I never knew the occasion when he failed to exert his influence for the party's welfare. He was a politician in the best sense of the word, fond of the excitement of a political contest, level headed in his political judgment, loyal to his associates and never afraid of his enemies. Mr. Maguire was one of the best friends I ever had, and I shall never cease to regret his untimely death.

Lack of Leadership Hindered State Work.

The Democratic State Committee, as a power, was practically disposed of, all due to the lack of leadership. The idea of reprimanding delegates to a convention for something they did one or more years previous became the policy of the committee. To use a majority in a convention to vent a personal feeling against an individual delegate is to help disrupt the party. And it was such actions that caused all the trouble, and bear in mind they were done in the name of the party. I saw the difference between a good organization and one whose existence was continued by those in control for no other reason than to vote condemnation on men that disagreed with them.

Well, I begin now as executive clerk of the City Committee, the duties of which I had performed for years, but now in addition to the duties I had the title; that is, I don't mean at present writing. John H. Lee was president in 1897. John Lee as president of the committee wasn't bothersome. John Lee didn't give much time to the committee; he was very busily engaged as reporter of the stock market in Brighton and incidentally picking up some worms for the boys. John had an office in Music Hall, too.

There wasn't much doing in 1897, although it was a mayoralty year; the Republicans had seven members of the Board of Aldermen that year, and they played politics all year; they began by holding up the confirmation of Health Commissioner George F. Babbitt. Everything the Republicans did was done by a strict party vote. Even John Lee couldn't dislodge them by his scriptural quotations. There was too much interest in the State fight. Wolcott won by about 90,000 votes and carried Boston by 5,963.

Martin Lomasney and "Board of Strategy."

The city fight was a dirty campaign. Josiah Quincy was nominated for a second term by the Democrats. Edwin U. Curtis was nominated by the Republicans and Thomas Riley by the Silver Democrats, so-called. Riley had nearly as many stump orators as he got votes. The present Congressman from the Tenth district was one of the party emancipators of that campaign, a strong Riley talker. Quincy was re-elected, defeating Curtis by 4,079 and Riley got just 2,921 votes—and his orators made more noise than those of the [illegible] candidates.

The board was evenly divided—six Democrats, six Republicans.

The year 1898 brought Martin Lomasney to the front very strong. It was in that year that he began to play the kind of politics that has made him famous. [illegible] if it wasn't for the [illegible] supporting of [illegible] the leaders of the organization, at the [illegible] [illegible] of individuals whose personal interest was at stake and if Josiah Quincy had his way, Martin would have been disposed of long ago.

The present Mayor was a candidate for re-election to Congress. Lomasney and a few others put in an independent in the person of James A. Gallivan, present Street Commissioner. Fitz carried the fight to the city departments. Those who were not out openly for Fitz for Congress were dismissed from the city's service.

Martin, who is always suspicious of any gathering of men interested in politics that he doesn't all together, got very suspicious of a few men who used to meet about every day in Room No. 8 of the Quincy House and take lunch together, and he (Martin) called them the "Board of Strategy." The men whom Martin called the "Board of Strategy" were James Donovan, John F. Fitzgerald, John A. Keliher, Judge Corbett, John Dreyan, Patrick J. Kennedy and John H. Doro[illegible] of Ward 20, late assessor. Some said that Malachi Jennings was one of that [illegible] famous board.

Ward 8 for Gallivan and Against Fitz.

John F. Fitzgerald was elected to Congress for the third time. Lomasney carried his ward for Gallivan by about 500 votes—Fitzgerald, 748; Gallivan, 1,246.

The State election resulted in another whelming defeat for the Democrats as had become the custom. Wolcott defeated Alexander B. Bruce of Lawrence by over 80,000 votes. This was the year that George Fred Williams's crowd, by the adoption of a resolution in the convention, threw John W. Corcoran out as national committeeman, something without precedent in the history of the Democratic party.

Well, the city campaign was now on. Lomasney was out against the organization. It was an off year; the campaign was for Street Commissioner, Aldermen, School Committee and for the first and only time the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, all were to be nominated in convention.

The Board of Aldermen and the Board of Estimate and Apportionment and Street Commissioner were nominated at the same convention, and what a riot! I remember it very well; it was held Thanksgiving eve in the old [illegible] on Boylston street.

Word had come to Lomasney from his gum shoe men that the convention was going to nominate his bitterest enemy in Ward 8 for Alderman, Michael W. Brick, as a rebuke to his (Lomasney's) treachery. And, dear reader, bear in mind all this was done for John F. Fitzgerald.

Lomasney gathered together all elements of the convention that were opposed to the [illegible] of strategy.

"Regulars" Carry Day Against "Volunteers."

And a battle royal was the result. One charged another delegate with murder, and what Fitzgerald was charged with by Lomasney [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] equaled by even the Finance Commission.

Well, the organization carried the convention. Salem D. Charles was nominated for Street Commissioner. John H. Sullivan and Lawrence Minot were nominated for the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, and the entire city committee slate for Aldermen was nominated, including Michael W. Brick. Lomasney got a few fellows to take out independent papers for Aldermen and [illegible] that was tried to defeat the [illegible] candidates.

The regular ticket won, John H. Sullivan [illegible] Lawrence Minot won the places on the new Board of Apportionment. Salem D. Charles defeated George H. Innes for Street Commissioner and seven Democrats won the board, all being the regular [illegible] including Brick. The [illegible] interviews with the leaders were printed the next day. Read what John F. Fitzgerald said the next day about his present political follow Martin Lomasney:

"[illegible] betrayed in Ward 8. I do not think the city democracy will tolerate [illegible] longer in its ranks men who, while professing to stand for Democratic principles and Democratic candidates, deliberately violate the principle of the party and openly betray the candidates."—Boston Globe, December 14, 1898.

Lomasney kept the pot of sedition boi[illegible]

Martin Lomasney and "Board of Strategy"; How Ward 8 Got Into the Limelight.

[illegible] soon as he [illegible] [illegible] young statesman who thought he was not getting the consideration his [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] himself [illegible] [illegible] Martin [illegible] [illegible] pictures [illegible] [illegible] young [illegible] cases too much for him. If it should happen to be a Councilman, Martin would say

"If you were down in my ward a man of your ability and popularity [illegible] [illegible] the Board of Aldermen." If it happened to be a Representative, of course Martin would invariably say "You ought to be in the Senate." If it happened to be a city employe, Martin would always say his pay, considering the [illegible] was [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] that even clever quite [illegible] [illegible] existed in 1899.

Josiah Quincy would [illegible] [illegible] the city committee [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] of their minds pretty well [illegible] who should be the candidate, and they were [illegible] long much worrying either [illegible] [illegible] felt that the man they had [illegible] [illegible] big enough to command the [illegible] of every honest and fair minded Democrat in the city.

But the Filipino element [illegible] [illegible] very strong. Early in the [illegible] [illegible] fight started, it was pretty well [illegible] stood who the candidates were [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] had picked as their candidate the Hon. John R. Murphy, who at that time was water commissioner and an exceptionally able man. The regular organization had chosen as their candidate the Hon. Patrick A. Collins. This was a memorable campaign. It was the first time that we had any trouble with the filing of nomination papers.

FEW DOSES END BLADDER MISERY AND MAKE THE KIDNEYS ACT FINE.

Usually sufferers from backache, bladder trouble or out-of-order kidneys, feel relieved after several doses of Pape's Diuretic.

Misery in the back, sides, or loins, sick headache, inflamed or swollen eyelids, nervousness, rheumatism and darting pains, heart palpitations, dizziness, sleeplessness, listless, worn-out feeling, and other symptoms of inactive, sluggish kidneys simply vanish.

Uncontrollable urination (especially at night) smarting, discolored water and all Bladder misery ends.

Feeling miserable and worried is needless because this unusual preparation goes at once to the out-of-order Kidneys and Bladder, distributing its cleansing, healing and vitalizing influence directly upon the organs and glands affected, and completes the cure before you realize it.

The moment you suspect any Kidney or Urinary derangement, or feel rheumatic pains, begin taking this harmless medicine, with the knowledge that there is no other remedy, at any price, made anywhere else in the world, which will effect so thorough and prompt a cure as a fifty-cent treatment of Pape's Diuretic, which any druggist can supply.

Your physician, pharmacist, banker or any mercantile agency will tell you that Pape, Thompson & Pape, of Cincinnati, is a large and responsible medicine concern, thoroughly worthy of your confidence.

Only curative results can come from taking Pape's Diuretic, and a few days' treatment will make any one feel fine.

Accept only Pape's Diuretic—fifty-cent treatment—from any drug store—anywhere in the world.

BOY BURNED IN EXPLOSION.

Part of Waltham Shaken by Crash of Gasoline.

An explosion shook the neighborhood for a half mile around No. 30 Bacon street, Waltham, last night, when a [illegible] of gasoline in the barn owned by R[illegible] Smiley and his brother Kenneth exploded.

The Smiley boys, twenty-four and nineteen years old, were making repairs on a motor boat. The gasoline leaked from the tank, oozed onto the floor, vaporized and came into contact with a kerosene lamp.

Reuels was severely burned about the face and hands. Dr. Wood and Dr. Fuller spent an hour cutting his charred clothing from him and dressing his wounds. The property loss is $200.

The next exhibition of simultaneous chess playing in the rooms of the Boston Chess Club, No. 241 Tremont street, will be given on Wednesday, March 9. Charles S. Jacobs will play [illegible] all comers. Mr. Jacobs acquired his reputation in the western part of the country, where he held several championships. He is a newspaper man by profession and is connected with a Boston paper.

ARCHBISHOP AT BANQUET.

Knights of Columbus Include Mayor on Speakers' List.

At the annual banquet of the State Council, Knights of Columbus, to be held at Hotel Brunswick on the evening of Patriots' Day, the chief speakers will be Archbishop O'Connell, Mayor Fitzgerald and Supreme Knight James A. Flaherty of Philadelphia. The committee of arrangements is headed by State Deputy William J. O'Brien. Louis Watson is the secretary.

FATAL ATTACK IS SEEN IN A DREAM

Attorney's Vision May Clear Mysterious Death Case at East Douglas.

EAST DOUGLAS, [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] told in a strange dream which Potter's counsel, Attorney M. F. Flaherty, had a week before his client died.

Flaherty to-day made the startling statement that a week ago Sunday, several days before Potter received the injuries that led to his death, he dreamed he saw a mysterious stranger jumping on Potter as he lay in bed.

He says he also dreamed that Potter has six ribs broken as a result of the attack. [illegible]

[illegible]

Flaherty's story [illegible] [illegible] with the statement of relatives that a strange man was seen in the Potter yard on the night of the alleged attack, has led to a [illegible] [illegible] manner in which death was caused.

"[illegible] this weird nightmare," said Flaherty. "I was somewhat nervous as a result of the day's work. It was some time before I got to sleep.

"Some time during the night I dreamed I was in Potter's house. I saw a man [illegible] his features are indelibly stamped in my memory [illegible] [illegible] again."

NOTED SPIRIT FRAUD AT HER OLD TRICKS

"Little Bright Eyes" Turns Up Again in New York to Fleece Easymarks.

NEW YORK, March 5.—Mrs. M. E. Williams, who sometimes is [illegible] and sometimes [illegible], but always ready to produce the spirits of the dear departed at one dollar per head, is once more operating in New York city. Dear "Little Bright Eyes" gargles and old "Mr. [illegible]" rumbles and groans from the inside of the materializing cabinet just [illegible] old thirty odd years ago when Mrs. M. E. Williams was in her prime as the cleverest spirit [illegible]

Mrs. M. E. Williams has been arrested so often that she really does not remember how many times the law has called upon her. She has been exposed so often that the wonder is that she still manages to find credulous customers, but in spite of all these things Mrs. Williams is still doing [illegible] in the same old way. At present she ekes out an existence at No. 30? West One Hundred and Thirty-seventh street. It is not a fashionable neighborhood and Mrs. Williams [illegible] to get people of wealth and fashion [illegible]

Thirty years ago Mrs. M. E. Williams arrived in New York from [illegible] John Anderson, a wholesale [illegible] was her first wealthy dupe. He gave her a beautiful home at No. 2?2 West Forty-sixth street, where she flourished exceedingly. Four years later Mrs. Williams, seeking new worlds, opened [illegible] in Paris. LIBERALISM DEAD IF ASQUITH BREAKS PROMISE

Irish Fear Premier W[illegible] [illegible] Feath[illegible] Pledge [illegible] [illegible] rolls.

CAN'T DODGE QUESTION

Re[illegible] of [illegible] [illegible] for Ireland Would Wreck the British Cabinet.

Special [illegible]

DUBLIN, [illegible] the speech of the [illegible] Premier Asquith [illegible] was [illegible]

As [illegible] in [illegible] the [illegible] cat[illegible] He [illegible] government was [illegible] statesman [illegible] and his [illegible] of the [illegible]

The speech [illegible] the [illegible] it was cheered in the hearts and minds of the millions who read it next day in the [illegible]'s newspapers. It [illegible] for Asquith and the Liberals, for [illegible] gained the Irish vote of [illegible] towns and cities, outside London, that vote is [illegible]

How About Asquith?

The Albert Hall declaration having saved the day for Mr. Asquith, is he now going to repudiate or stand by his words? If he takes the former course, it will mean [illegible] knell of liberalism in Britain for a q[illegible] of a century. Not only that, it will mean the smashing into fragments, never to be rejoined or repaired, the great political [illegible] which Gladstone fired by his [illegible] the progress [illegible]

W[illegible] [illegible] Gladstone [illegible] watchword [illegible] That is the watchword of the [illegible] 'Keep moving.' The Liberal party has [illegible] ever on the march, making progress for the masses of the people."

It is [illegible] Asquith's power [illegible] or [illegible] the future of the [illegible] which has come [illegible] Gladstone [illegible] water or stre[illegible] of the world [illegible] from his [illegible] Albert Hall declaration [illegible] tion. [illegible] when he [illegible] on [illegible] his words [illegible] of [illegible] bank of fog to hide [illegible] Prudery's glare is turned [illegible] him [illegible] ple [illegible] as the searchlight on a battleship.

[illegible] with Mr. Asquith. There are three [illegible] in [illegible] who [illegible] to [illegible] the great [illegible] Augustine Birrell, the Irish Secretary, and [illegible] Winston Churchill, Mr. Asquith's [illegible] colleagues, who will [illegible] of the Albert Hall [illegible] repudiate[illegible] listed to get out of the [illegible] the whole ministry [illegible] collapse like a house of cards.

Stand Near the People.

B[illegible], George and Churchill are in touch with the people. They, more than others of their party, are in full accord with the [illegible] of the hour. This spirit is a [illegible] demand for reform all along the line, reform for Wales, reform for Scotland, reform for England herself, and these three leaders know better than others of the cabinet that reform for Ireland [illegible] the way to reform for all the rest.

If Asquith has to deal with this group of determined men within his cabinet, he has another to deal with here in Ireland, who is equally determined. John Redmond will know no such word as compromise as his lexicon and all Ireland will back him in his ignorance of the term.

The other evening representative men from all parts of Ireland came to Aberdeen Hall, in the Gresham Hotel, to honor Mr. Redmond with a public banquet. The toastmaster was the Lord Mayor of Dublin. In proposing the health of Mr. Redmond the Lord Mayor paid the Irish leader a handsome tribute, every other sentence of which was heartily applauded. The Lord Mayor said:

"None of the duties that have fallen to my lot as Lord Mayor of Dublin have given me so much pleasure as the duty of presiding at this festive board this evening to pay a tribute of honor and respect to the leader to whom Ireland owes a deep debt of gratitude, and who, as a result of the general election, [illegible] has received a vote of confidence from the overwhelming mass of the Irish people. [illegible] a few weeks ago Mr. Redmond visited his own constituents for a renewal of the [illegible] Waterford bestowed on him eighteen years ago. He received [illegible] [illegible] his constituents [illegible] by [illegible] Waterford [illegible] as [illegible] in honor of the chairman of the Irish party.

All Honor Redmond.

"Not one dissentient voice was raised, and I think you will agree with me that it was a tribute of which Mr. Redmond may well [illegible] and a tribute of affection and [illegible] a falls to the lot of few men after [illegible] lengthened service. To-night representatives from all parts of Ireland are assembled here to honor Mr. Redmond, to thank him for his past services to Ireland, and to wish him Godspeed and good [illegible] work that lies before him."

The speech of Redmond in reply to the toast was a manly and above board exposition of his national policy and that of the party which he leads. He dealt calmly but plainly with the Asquith declaration for Home Rule as it affected the elections.

"I do not venture," said Mr. Redmond—"it would be presumption on my part to venture—to suggest any plan to the Government. But I say plainly that if Mr. Asquith is not in a position to say that he has such guarantees as are necessary to enable him to pass the Veto bill through the House of Lords this year, and if, in spite of that he intends, to use his own phrase, to retain office in spite of that, and proposes to pass the budget into law, and then to adjourn—I do not care for how long or how short—to adjourn the consideration of the question of the veto of the House of Lords, that is a policy that Ireland cannot, and will not, uphold."

Anna Gould Is Now a Subject of the Kaiser

Was First an American, Then Acquired French Citizenship as Countess and Lastly Becomes a German.

Special Cable to Boston American.

PARIS, March 5.—Madame Anna Gould has assumed her new title of "Duchesse de Talleyrand et de Sagan." Moreover, she has ceased to be a citizen of either France or the United States Republics and has become a subject of the German Kaiser.

As the wife of Count Boni de Castellane she acquired a French citizenship; as the wife of the new Duke de Talleyrand she shares his allegiance to the German Emperor and becomes a German subject for property reasons. The estates of the late Duke are at Sagan in Northern Germany, and in spite of the mountains of debt piled on them they are extremely valuable. They are now under the guardianship of the Kaiser and are bringing in a revenue of $90,000 yearly, which is applied to the upkeep of the estate, interest on debts and other legal charges.

In order to keep his [illegible] as a feoff of the Kaiser the present Duke will have to follow the example of his late father and become a German subject. This is indispensable as the Kaiser cannot con[illegible] to act as guardian of a French citizen. It is understood that the new Duke and Duchess have already taken preliminary steps and probably in time will desert France for Germany where they have been ad[illegible] they will be received at court and enter the best society.

Mme. Anna Gould's six-month-old son, Helie de Sagan, also becomes a German subject, while her three boys by Count Boni de Castellane remain French.

With both the Kaiser as guardian of the Duke and George Gould as guardian of the Duchess the house of Talleyrand Sagan is well protected against its creditors and itself.

New Yorker Stricken on Honeymoon Now Out of Danger.

Special Cable to Boston American.

PARIS, March 5.—Scores of telegrams have poured in the Hotel Elysee Palace since the American announced the serious illness of William Scott of New York, who was stricken down with appendicitis while in Paris on his honeymoon. Not until yesterday were his physicians able to pronounce him out of danger. Mr. Scott is now improving rapidly and recovery is certain. He will probably be sent to the South of France as soon as he is able to travel, but his plans are uncertain.

As to the critics, they are all at war with each other.

Alfred Capus says: "Chantecler is a [illegible] not pronounce until after [illegible] two hundred [illegible] declares, "It is a fable in four acts and verses."

Trying to Save the Students.

All Paris is talking of [illegible] young evangelist, Miss Gertrude Davidson of California. In spite of her extreme youth, she [illegible] degree of M. A. Permit me to say that it is quite a novel profession for a young lady to exercise in Paris that of bringing the heathen into the fold.

Just at present Miss Davidson has taken the Latin Quarter in hand. [illegible] Miss Davidson preach and her discourse left no doubt in my mind as to the spirituality and beauty of her mind. Her pulpit is in the American Students' Hostel in the Boulevard Saint Michael, and her congregation is made up of students from all parts of the world.

Christians, pagans, atheists, Mohammedans and sects are represented at these weekly [illegible] old Latin Quarter, which, though not so black as it is painted, is still wicked [illegible] young [illegible]

Never [illegible] to so [illegible] stage [illegible] The Salon of Women Painters, now being held in the Grand Palais, is only second to that of the Societe Nationale des Beaux Arts, held every spring in this city. I am glad to see so many American women painters ably competing in this exhibition with our own Duchess de Rohan and the Duchess d'Uzes.

American Artists to the Front.

The famous Marquise de Wentworth you all know. Not long ago the "Minister of Fine Arts, M. Dujardin Beaumetz, declared to President Fallieres [illegible] always a guarantee for good work." President Fallieres personally bestowed his praise upon her.

American women artists seem to have a particular penchant for painting portraits. There is a very excellent portrait from the brush of Miss Nelda Wright Robinson of New York to be admired, also one by Mme. Helene de Moreas of Detroit, Mich. The miniatures of Miss Irva [illegible] Kaler who lives in the Boulevard Saint Michel have attracted a great deal of favorable comment from our art critics.

Like the Marquise de Wentworth, Miss Mary Franklin paints many religious subjects. Her two chief exhibits are "A Scene at St. Marks, Venice" and the Cathedral of Autun. I am told that the presence of the Marquise de Wentworth on the jury accounts for the pictures of the American painters being so well hung. They have better places than those of any other foreign painters.

The matrimonial affairs of King Manuel of Portugal are in the hands of two of the most skilful matchmakers in Europe. These are his mother, Queen Amelie, and his friend King Edward of England. The gracious Amelie is already at Biarritz and King Edward will shortly join her for the purpose of arranging a marriage for the youthful King.

Though it is said on excellent authority that he did not favorably impress the young English Princesses, it is still thought that King Edward and Queen Amelie may come to an understanding. But after all, what have the daughters of the King to do with the choice of their husbands?

TO PROTECT BARONETS.

Register in Which Only Real Title Bearers Will Appear.

LONDON, March 5.—Grievances of the British baronets have been frequently aired in recent years and at last something has been done to restore a little tranquility in the bosoms of these not quite noble ones who owe their status of dignity to financial embarrassments.

The commission of inquiry appointed some time ago to inquire into the abuses of the baronetage has suddenly and unexpectedly borne fruit in the shape of a royal proclamation that an official roll is to be prepared and kept in the home office in the care of a special registrar. Only those on the list may use the title.

Apparently there is no provision for a penalty for usurpers of the title, of whom a good many exist, but the bona fide baronets, it may be supposed, will have the right, put on the register at the home office after the bart., which now is all that is accorded them and prevent the fakers from doing so.

'LIBERALS' BUDGET IS DEAD, SAYS STEAD

[illegible] Announce That the Lloyd-George Bill Will Be [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] Conte[illegible] [illegible]

By WILLIAM T. STEAD.

Special Correspondent [illegible] American.

Special Cable [illegible]

LONDON, Ma[illegible] [illegible] have this week [illegible] their place [illegible] Easter [illegible]

Next year's Budget [illegible] [illegible] of [illegible] the next election.

I have long conversations with the leaders of the parties at Westminster and opinions as to the future are most divergent. The Irish Nationalists confidently anticipate that Premier Asquith will de[illegible] [illegible] as the veto resolutions are passed by the Commons and rejected or hung up by the Peers. The King will refuse and the Ministers will resign or dissolve before the Budget is voted. Great financial [illegible] to the Exchequer is estimated [illegible] five [illegible] sterling [illegible] to pay for the Lords' usurpation of the Commons' right of supply.

On the other hand, in the ministerial [illegible] optimist [illegible] that the Peers will concede to the Commons the uncontrolled right over finance and [illegible] until the question of reforming the House of Lords is arranged. On these lines it is hoped the present Parliament will carry on till next year. This depends on a chapter of accidents.

[illegible] feeling [illegible] ranks concerning the ministerial adoption of a proposal to reform the House of Lords. Various rumors are current as to the cause of the adoption. The policy is repudiated by [illegible] Liberals out of [illegible]. A curious story, confidently repeated, attributes this [illegible] Haldane and Grey, former members of the Liberal League. On the other hand a cabinet minister [illegible] that Winston Churchill and Lloyd-George [illegible] that bare and that Lloyd George is now disposed to bark [illegible]

[illegible] that the cabinet is di[illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] expect another general [illegible] Summer. Redmond expresses [illegible] confident that the Nationalists will receive American subsidies, and is much encouraged by a remittance of $6,000 from Patrick Ford, collected by the Irish World. William O'Brien's proposal to start a rival organization at Easter is not regarded seriously. His party consists of himself, the two Healys and half a dozen political clubers. The priests everywhere are against O'Brien, although a diminishing number support Healy. Financial support is given by the Tory landlords to O'Brien's new paper [illegible] him in the Nationalists' eyes.

My interview with Devlin led O'Brien to threaten to prosecute the Daily Chronicle for libel. A favorite method of O'Brien is to slap out a writ against any newspaper or speaker who refers to him adversely. His last libel action against the Freeman's Journal brought him one cent damages on each of six counts, but the action cost the Freeman's Journal $10,000 legal expenses.

I am going over to Ireland to see the situation on the spot and will report the results next week.

AMERICANS ARE WELCOME.

Kaiser Has Not Asked That Number Eligible Be Reduced.

BERLIN, March 5.—The report has been cabled from Germany to the effect that a communication amounting to an expostulation was addressed to the American embassy here by the Kaiser's court marshal's department on the excessive number of American presentations at the recent royal receptions. It was suggested that President Taft was responsible for the number of presentations, which were more than all the other embassies in Berlin together.

The truth is that the President has nothing to do with the presentations. It is true the number of debutants, apart from the customary presentations of embassyites, was larger than ever before. This was due to two facts: first, the number of Americans coming to Berlin is increasing annually, and, second, because in the other countries the debutantes must have been presented to the home courts before they are eligible for presentation here. There is nothing answering to a court in America and therefore there is no artificial restriction on the number of those desirous of being presented here.

That there is no dissatisfaction at the Kaiser's court with the length of the list of presentations is shown by the fact that all presented were invited to one or the other of the regular court balls.

RUSSIA TRIES TWO LAWYERS

ST. PETERSBURG, March 5.—The trial has begun of M. Masnoff and M. Aronson, prominent lawyers who were associated with Ossip Y. Pergament in the defence of Olga Stein, who was accused of embezzlements and forgeries.

Mme. Stein escaped to the United States in 1907, although she subsequently was returned here and sentenced to sixteen months' imprisonment.

Following her conviction her counsel were accused of conniving at her escape from the country. Pergament died before the date set for his trial.

Special Correspondent of the Boston Sunday American.

Special by Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

PARIS, March 5.—Society in Paris, London and Rome is talking of only one thing—that is the amazing rivalry between a beautiful New York girl and a Royal Princess of Great Britain.

The man in the case is the brilliant Duke of Turin, cousin of King Victor Emmanuel of Italy. Last season he was taken to London and entertained by King Edward. The reason for his visit, as the American announced at the time, was his projected marriage with Princess Patricia of Connaught, the niece of King Edward and the prettiest Princess of Europe. Much to the surprise of all who knew the inside history of this matrimonial negotiation, no announcement of a betrothal was made and the Duke of Turin returned abruptly to Paris, where he shut himself up for a week in an apartment in the Hotel Castiglione.

The Dowager Queen Margherita came from Italy to see the Duke in Paris and then went on to the English court; but still, his engagement to the Princess Patricia is unannounced. The story which the English court permitted to get abroad was that King Edward had refused his consent owing to the fact that the Duke of Turin's brother, the Duke of the Abruzzi, was still supposed to be about to marry Miss Katharine Elkins and the King did not want any West Virginia relatives.

American Captivates Duke.

Your correspondent is informed on high authority that the real reason why the [illegible] the Duke of Turin [illegible] to carry it out as he had already followed the example set by his brother, the Duke of Abruzzi, and had fallen in love with an American girl, Miss Arethusa Schuyler Ross of New York. He met Miss Ross the first time in Capri, where she and her mother spend the Winter. On that night Miss Ross appeared in Greek draperies, and it is said to have been a case of love at first sight.

Mrs. Ross brought her daughter to Paris. The Count immediately followed and urged his suit, but the Royal Family of Italy was on his trail. In that family when a royal prince falls in love with an American girl it seems to be the regular thing to send him off into the wilds to explore something. The Duke of Turin was despatched to Equatorial Africa. Recently he crossed Lake Tanganyika, and is now on his way to Fashoda. His exile will not end until June, when he will be allowed to return, as the [illegible] of the Royal House of Savoy hope that by that time he will have forgotten Miss Ross.

Those most violently opposed to the marriage of this Royal Italian Prince with an American girl are the Duchess of Genoa, mother of Dowager Queen Margherita, and the Queen Mother hereself. These ladies are backed up by the Count's own mother, Princess Laetitia Bonaparte.

Rivals Waiting For the Duke.

Meanwhile Miss Ross is on the island of Capri in the Bay of Naples, where the Duke of Turin will land upon his return from Africa.

It is no secret that the Princess Patricia was fascinated by the handsome and gallant Italian Duke, and has not given up the idea of marrying him. A few weeks ago it was stated that she had persuaded her father, the Duke of Connaught, to make an expedition into Africa in order to meet Turin on his way home. The plan seems to have fallen through, but unquestionably the Princess Patricia has won over her Royal uncle to her side, and [illegible] to Africa to meet the Duke she certainly will wait for him in Naples like her American rival.

Lord Rosebery has joined the conspiracy to capture the Royal Italian Duke for the English Princess. Recently he presented his villa near Naples to King Edward though in the name of the British Ambassador to Rome. This Southern paradise for which Lord Rosebery paid $100,000, was formerly the residence of the Bourbon Count of Aquila. It contains a choice collection of pictures, pottery, armory and furniture.

Principal in a Duel.

It is surrounded by a beautiful park and commands an unrivalled view of the Bay of Naples. A special dock is now being constructed which will permit the landing of the Royal yacht "Queen Alexandra," which will carry the Princess Patricia to the Bay of Naples. It is understood that King Edward will present this villa to Patricia as a wedding gift if the Duke of Turin can be persuaded to marry her. It all depends upon whether the young Duke goes first to [illegible] or to Capri.

The Duke of Turin is brave as well as handsome. Some years ago he came to Paris to fight a duel with Prince Henri D'Orleans. He is one of three brothers, the others being the well known Duke of the Abruzzi and the Duke of Aosta. His father was King Amadeus of Spain. Should the Duke of Turin be able to overcome the objections of his royal aunts and great aunt of Savoy and resist the coaxing of the royal house of Great Britain, Miss Ross will marry one of the most powerful Princes in Europe.

WOMEN BUSY IN PARIS.

Promise to Enliven General Elections in May.

PARIS, March 5.—The French suffragettes promise to enliven the general elections in May.

Mlle. Duran, their leader, editor of Les Nouvelles, has issued a plan of campaign. There will be a woman candidate in every constituency in Paris, each belonging to a liberal profession or possessing a degree of some sort.

Mlle. Duran herself will oppose Deputy Paul Escudier, a strong opponent of woman suffrage.

That it will be impossible to vote for these women does not deter them from a campaign intended to call attention to their cause.

LONDON, M[illegible] [illegible] Drexel and the Vi[illegible] [illegible] June as the [illegible] for the wedding. Miss Margaretta Drexel and Viscount Maidstone [illegible] ceremony [illegible] probability will be held just after the Ascot races. Miss Mildred Carter [illegible] Miss Drexel [illegible] chief [illegible] the [illegible] Mills [illegible] of Lord [illegible] will be the [illegible] Lord [illegible] suffering from an incurable affliction and his physicians have given up all hope of his recovery. Maidstone and Mills are officers in the East Kent and West Kent Yeomanry respectively and are boyhood chums.

Early in May Miss Drexel and her mother propose to go to Paris on the all-important quest for a trousseau, but only the wedding gown and a few very elaborate dresses will be purchased there, as Miss Margaretta has a great affection for London, where she has been so petted for the last two years. Like Miss Mildred Carter, Miss Drexel is telling her friends that she never knew one could be so happy. The young couple attend the theatres and opera almost nightly.

Puzzle for Genealogists

English genealogists are now saying that if the Anglo-American alliances keep up at the present pace [illegible] students of genealogical trees will have to trace the line of the British aristocracy back into the antiquity of the United States.

The London season, [illegible] the first court has been held [illegible] not be in full swing for two weeks yet. Because of an exceptionally prosperous year in America a greater number of the socially prominent from those shores [illegible] this year than heretofore [illegible] the Riviera [illegible] [illegible] are [illegible] the Americans now in town are not entertaining and do not intend to until April, when Dorchester House will again be thrown open.

Everyone is glad to welcome back Miss Amory Moore and Mrs. Adair, the former's entertainments at her house in Portland square are always gorgeous. She had the King to dinner twice at Biarritz two seasons ago.

Mrs. Adair, fresh from a long stay in America, is once more settled in Curzon street. She will be one of the hostesses at the Ascot races. She has a charming place near Windsor and is always invited to the royal functions at the castle.

Countess Pappenheim gave a housewarming function on Friday evening at her new house in Mansfield street. It was a most successful and enjoyable affair.

The Granards are not entertaining much because of a recent arrival who, it has been suggested by the Conservatives, should be named "Budgetta."

Mrs. J. J. Astor Goes Skating.

The Sunday Club roller skaters at the Olympic Rink, which was started by Lord Crichton, who is in the Prince of Wales's household, has caused endless amusement. The smart set wanted to keep the club exclusive but found this impossible, so the most exclusives have divided themselves into camps, each set having a private stand of its own while the common people have looked on hungrily.

As usual the Americans proved the best skaters. Mrs. J. J. Astor, who does not miss a Sunday when in town, looks exceedingly well in a plain blue costume with a short pleated skirt. Other American women seen last Sunday were Lady Willoughby De Eresby, Lady Innes-Ker, the Duchess of Roxburghe, Mrs. Spender-Clay and Mildred Carter who came with her fiance, Viscount Acheson. Miss Carter is described as "deliriously happy."

It is known that the King and Queen regard this engagement as a most agreeable topic, for by marriage Miss Mildred will not only become a relative of the Gosfords and Mrs. John Ward, but will be able to figure out a relationship with the Dukes of Manchester and Devonshire and Lord Derby and others. Lord Acheson is making good [illegible] the rubber boom and wears a beaming countenance. No date for the wedding has been fixed as yet.

COPPERS HOLDING STRONG POSITION

Consumption Exceeds Production and Steel Shares' Advance Inspires Confidence.

By E. A. WILKINS.

STATE STREET [illegible]

marke[illegible] above [illegible] strong h[illegible] stocks are in strong hands, [illegible] growing [illegible] outside [illegible]

The stre[illegible] of Amalgamated and Anaconda [illegible] advance this week which has carried the former [illegible] over $8 pe[illegible] noticed [illegible] there has been [illegible] demand for copper [illegible] outside of the newer [illegible] a firmer tone apparent, especially for the so-called [illegible] Ryan issues. The halving of the North Butte dividend had been thoroughly discounted, so that the reduction served to strengthen the price of the stock.

As indicating how closely copper stocks are held, a market order to buy 500 shares of Indiana stock Friday caused a [illegible] point advance. This might happen in many other cases. It has happened frequently in Lake Copper stock, although fluctuations have been more norma[illegible] in this specialty of late. Too wide fluctuations hurt the market by impairing confidence.

The statistical position of copper is improving and for the first time in a long period a reduction in the foreign supplies was reported for the last half of February. It is the general belief that consumption now exceeds the production. The big copper merger is nearing, and the progress of arrangements for consolidation of the various mining companies in Butte tends to increase the buying demand for coppers. The steady advance in Steel shares also inspires confidence.

Coppers at the present time are holding the centre of the stage and sentiment is as friendly to these issues as at any time. There is no diminution in their technical strength, and with continued firmness of the metal there is bound to be a broader and healthier market for them. A steady absorption of non-taxable securities continues and prices of local railway traction and industrial shares particularly strong.

The Boston market was practically given over to North Lake to-day, and the price rose over six points to its record of 25. While President Dow was deciphering a code message the price had risen to its top and after announcement of its contents the price ran off a point or so. The cutting of the Adventure lode at a depth of 1,417 feet is the first real good news that has come from this property. This information was known before President Dow made the announcement, and the wires between this city and Michigan points were very busy. Lake Copper had a sympathetic advance of two points to 80, and Indiana of two points to 39. Moderate [illegible] followed.

There is another side to the advance in North Lake, and it deals with New York. Certain interests in the Metropolitan City did not get a chance in the Lake stocks advance and would not buy after it had risen a considerable percentage. Indiana got away from them, so that North Lake was the opportunity that presented itself. In this they have been successful, and considerable profit has ensued in their purchase of this stock.

MARKET GUIDED BY DISASTERS OF PAST

Prophets See Present Conditions Like Those in Northern Securities Decision; Analyzed by Boersianer.

By BOERSIANER.

CHICAGO, March 5.—Only the very wise and extremely foolish are success[illegible] the science of comparisons was George Meredith's observation [illegible] otherwise, the first must succeed by wisdom, the second by [illegible] Yet everybody indulges in a practice that really is more of an art than a science, and being an art it is so bunglingly handled by the average penman that the result is pernicious. Similes are dangerous in the hands of amateurs, but analogies are positively destructive. In finance nothing can be more plausible than a comparison with certain official periods. Even a literary woodchopper or stableboy may draw a creditable simile. The crudest mind can be arrestingly specious.

These remarks seem timely to a moment when gentlemen who have access to type are reverting to what happened before and after the Northern Securities decision. They find the situation of then "strikingly similar to the position of now." They have discovered that for some weeks prior to that judgment the bourse was in a state of lethargy. A few days before the fa[illegible] ruling was rendered stock quotations had descended to the lowest of [illegible]

On March 14, 1904, Washington sent out the unwelcome news. There was [illegible] with no recovery worthy of mention until May. June—the latter part [illegible] an upward movement was on that gained momentary, week by week. During the progress gold was exported in an unprecedented amount. Cereals were high and cotton was higher. The export trade was diminutive. Business generally was in a lull. The bear party fought the rise desperately for about a year.

This looks like a companion picture to the present and what appears to be the immediate and middle distance future.

Everybody is waiting the decisions in the American Tobacco Company and Standard Oil cases. Foodstuffs are very high. Heavy gold exports are threatened. Foreign trade is heavily diminishing. Professionals are fighting an advance in stocks. There have been and still are reports of a lull in important branches of business.

In the first glance the analogy is quite perfectly established. Judged by the laws and standards of the analogists, the "system" crank and the ticker barker, we are in for a repetition of the history following the Northern Securities decision.

Unfortunately, there are a few lesions of this logic of parallelism. The first leak is the fact that torrential liquidation has occurred, followed by a fair recovery. The second, cotton, one of the most important of export staples, has had a tumble with so small a chance of retrievement that a prominent bull has gone to Liverpool for the purpose of unloading commercially because he could not sell speculatively in the home market.

The third: throughout 1906, brokers were made nervous by the money market, which flurried from time to time. To-day there is ease and plenty. The fourth, there is no lull in business. Trade is good and expanding.

At best, the past in finance—even when in the retrospect it seem to foreshadow repetition—is an instructor, not a guide; its laws are mutable, its retrospects flexible. The dullness of last week was no more foreordained by the dullness that precedes the Northern Securities decision than the boom which subsequently ensued upon that option will duplicate itself next Summer. The market will be governed by the present and future, not by the past. Viewed from the present, the market is satisfactory enough. The Supreme Court hangs over the speculative phase of the situation, but considered from the standpoint of the investor, the outlook presents nothing alarming.

At the worst or the best, according to one's economics, corporations will conform to the law if the court finds they are not in conformity with it. There will be no confiscation of property. Business will be done legally instead of illegally. The men who controlled the properties constituting the Northern Securities Company before the decision controlled the properties after the decision. The earnings found their way to the same pockets. This is not suggesting that an adverse ruling in the tobacco and oil instances would leave security lists undisturbed. Despite so much "discounting" talk, the chances of an eruption were many.

Even so, that sort of thunder is destructive only to insects and leaves the air fresher.

The [illegible] line order of things financial last week was relieved by the announcement of the resignation from the Steel directory of the Rockefeller represe[illegible] This gives the Morgan people full sway in the organization. From [illegible] investor's aspect, this is significant. It signifies that the Morgan [illegible] liberal dividends will prevail henceforth and undisputedly. The [illegible] to a restoration of payments on the common were the Rockefellers [illegible] opposition for a time was so determined that Morgan re[illegible] directors' meetings, and it was not until the secretary had notified [illegible] they were ready to restore the dividend that the promoters of the [illegible] consented to become active on the board.

The advance from 2 to 3 per cent. was opposed by the Standard Oil representative, though Morgan, who had favored 4 per cent., made a concession [illegible] iron and steel industry pro[illegible] throughout 1910 as it [illegible] the junior shares are reasonably certain of going on a 5 per cent [illegible] January 1.

STEEL-COPPER LEAD THE UPWARD MARCH

Curb Excited Over Rubber and Traders View Philadelphia Labor War Without Alarm.

By THOMAS C. SHOTWELL.

NEW YORK, March 5.—Stocks had a strong closing to-day with Steel and the coppers in leadership. A feature that attracted widespread attention was the excitement on the curb in stock of the Intercontinental Rubber Company, which is soon to be transferred to the New York stock exchange. General sentiment was much improved and no apprehension was felt over the strike situation in Philadelphia.

The bank statement showed a loss in surplus reserves and in cash but were not considered important in view of the abundance of money.

As a result of the thorough liquidation of January, the stock market recovered its equilibrium and made some notable advances. The short interest is still quite large and the investment interest has been increased materially. Many corporations report a very large increase in the number of their stockholders. Bankers' loans are at a minimum and public confidence is being restored rapidly.

While nobody really believes that the Supreme Court is allowing its decisions to be known in advance, many important bankers in Wall Street believe that they know how the Court will decide the Tobacco case. Their opinion is that only a minority of the court will attempt to hold the American Tobacco Company guilty.

The Steel Trust gained the largest number of stockholders in January, the number having been increased about 6,000 since the first of the year. The Pennsylvania railroad, the Chesapeake & Ohio, the American Car & Foundry and New York Central are other companies reporting material increases. The increase in Steel stockholders is justified in the eyes of investment bankers because of the growth of business.

The prosperity of the railroads is proved by the declaration of an extra dividend of 6 per cent. by the Lake Shore, making an 18 per cent. distribution for the year 1910 by that company. This will enable New York Central to increase its dividend to 6 per cent. The Pennsylvania is expected to increase its dividend to 7 per cent.

Pennsylvania's annual report, published last week, made a remarkable showing in the growth of business, the increase in tonnage being 67,000,000 over the previous year. The Pennsylvania company is now handling one-fourth of the freight tonnage of all America. It is consuming 72 per cent. of its gross earnings for operation and improvement.

John D. Rockefeller astonished the world by his plans to establish a benevolent trust of gigantic proportions. This was foreshadowed by the retirement of young Rockefeller from the Oil board on January 11, and by his retirement from the Steel board last week. Granting the Rockefellers full credit and praise for their tremendous charity, the fact remains that the Rockefeller Foundation will be the greatest holding company in the history of the world. It will have in its treasury securities of the Oil Trust and other corporations, and it may be that future Legislatures will be embarrassed in their trust-smashing operations by a popular cry against the destruction of the foundation on which the Rockefeller charities are builded.

RED SOX SQUAD OFF FROM CINCINNATI ON WAY TO TRAINING CAMP

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

Training Games for the Red Sox

April 5-6—At Memphis, Tenn.
April 7-8—At Nashville, Tenn.
April 9-10—At Cincinnati.
April 12—At Worcester, Mass.
April 13—At Boston (vs. Harvard).

CINCINNATI, March 5.—Manager Donovan and his first squad of Red Sox spent the day here and to-night continued on to Hot Springs, where for a month the Speed Boys will train for the opening of the championship season.

Donovan [illegible] left New York Friday morning and arrived here this morning. There were only a few [illegible] from the East—Pitchers [illegible], Steele, [illegible] and Thompson and [illegible], Tommy Madden being the only ones [illegible] manager and the newspaper men and the "fans."

When the boys [illegible] aboard the sleeping car to-night to continue on to Hot Springs Harry Niles, "Buff" Eaman, Larry [illegible] and [illegible] joined the [illegible].

[illegible]

Buff Eaman [illegible]

"Gee [illegible]"

It was Donovan [illegible] first squad [illegible] out the [illegible] they begged to be allowed to go to Hot Springs with the [illegible]. Thus Niles came along and [illegible] way from [illegible].

Thoney Back in Game.

It will be good news for [illegible] that "Bullet" Jack Thoney will go to Hot Springs with the Red Sox [illegible] East with the squad. [illegible] back player of [illegible] at the Hotel Havlin [illegible] this afternoon and had a long talk with Manager Donovan.

Thoney, who it will be recalled broke his shoulder blade a few weeks ago, was supposed to be out of baseball for this season.

It was not expected that his injury would allow him to train, but he explained to Donovan that the bone healed rapidly and that his doctor says there is no reason why he [illegible] play ball. He is still weak at present, but both he and Donovan believe that the baths and training at Hot Springs will work wonders with him.

Donovan told him to wait here [illegible] second squad of Red Sox players [illegible] pass through Cincinnati a week from to-day. Thoney lives at Fort Thomas, Ky.

Spent Day in Porktown.

The bunch spent the day in Porktown. Some of them took in a matinee, but most of them loafed around the corridors of the Hotel Havlin, where the Boston club always stays when in Cincinnati. Many of them called at the Cincinnati club's office to pay their respects to President Garry Herrmann. The Reds and Red Sox [illegible] share the ball park at Hot Springs. The Red Sox were first to acquire the park, but Mr. Herrmann made a deal with President Taylor whereby the Reds were let in on the good thing and from now on the two clubs will share the expense of the park's maintenance.

Manager Griffith of the Reds is already at Hot Springs boiling out so that Manager Donovan will have to wait until he gets there before he and Griffith can arrange as to hours for practice. Probably at first each club will use the park at certain hours both morning and afternoon, but as soon as the players have gotten rid of their soreness, the two teams will play regular practice games.

It is expected that the scheme will work out to the advantage of both teams. They will get the best kind of practice and by the end of two weeks the Red Sox pitchers will be ready to shoot [illegible] over so that at least the Reds will get some fine batting practice.

Notes of the Trip.

[illegible] with the Boys [illegible] Manager Donovan [illegible] "You have a great team to follow you, Patsy," said Jim, "and I wish you all kinds of luck."

Cicotte told Niles that he expected to coach the Harvard pitchers, but the Crimson management finally gave the job to Kettrie.

* * *

The boys were [illegible] Jack [illegible] favorite with the team and every one hopes he will round to this season.

As the guest of James [illegible] of Lawrence, Manager Donovan and several war correspondents saw the show places of Cincinnati from an automobile this morning.

"You will have to go some to beat my team in those practice games," said Garry Herrmann, President of the Cincinnati club to Manager Donovan. "We will give you a good run, don't forget that," was Patsy's reply.

TO THE AMATEURS.

AS in former years, the columns of the sporting pages of the American are open to the amateur and semi-professional baseball teams of New England for the printing of scores and challenges. Correspondents are requested to write plainly on one side of the paper only and not to crowd a long communication on a postal card. Scores received of games played three or four days previous will not be printed.

HENRI PIET QUITS IN BOUT WITH GOODMAN

Claims He Was Fouled in First Round and Mill Is Declared "No Contest."

HENRI Piet, French lightweight champion, made his first appearance in Boston last night at the American A. C., and it was [illegible] fights since he left France for this country.

He has seen [illegible] bouts he has had here, getting knocked out in the majority. However last night he didn't wait long enough to see if the much battered Kid Goodman could put him insensible.

Henri didn't waste any time in going to the mat after a short mix-up in the [illegible] had all he wanted for one evening [illegible] crawled through the ropes.

[illegible] Piet [illegible] his manager about [illegible] either stop or get back [illegible] Referee Jerome Moore [illegible] which looked to be [illegible].

Foul Blow Not Seen.

[illegible] didn't know any more [illegible] whether the [illegible] a fake. [illegible] for Piet and he got nearly twice as many votes for him. That was [illegible]. At the [illegible] well, there [illegible] other man.

Semi-Final a Joke.

[illegible] party [illegible] for the first three [illegible] Burke and Jack Lavin made the crowd roar.

Burke is a young Hebrew with a deadly wallop concealed in his right mitt, and he had picked his opponent for an easy mark. He walked up, swung his right, and it [illegible] his man around the ring until Burke was scared nearly out of all fighting sense.

George Alger, the Cambridge whirlwind [illegible] Moore stopped the bout before the end of [illegible].

[illegible] best bout of the evening [illegible] Dennis had so much weight on [illegible] that [illegible] was forced to quit [illegible] round.

Ferris Won't Join Millers.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 5.—"Hobe" Ferris, once one of the game's greatest second basemen, well known in this city, where he makes his home, states that he will not go to Minneapolis, where he has been sent by President Hedges, of the St. Louis Browns, and the chances are that he will retire from baseball rather than play there. He does not like the West, he says, and some of his friends state that in their opinion "Hobe" would like to play here.

FINN RUNNER WINS BIG MARATHON RACE

Pat Dineen of Boston Makes a Good Showing and Nails Second Place.

NEW YORK, March 5.—Straggling through a field of mud, Karl Nieminen, the Finnish champion distance runner, won the Brooklyn marathon from a field of eight at Washington Park this afternoon. The sloppy going was responsible for four of the starters quitting after the first fifteen miles had been traveled. The time of the winner was 3.15.22 3-5.

The race was declared off after Nieminen [illegible] Pat Dineen of Boston was second, three laps behind, while Fernelo Janzerri of Italy was third six laps behind the Finlander.

[illegible]

Finn Was Easy Winner.

[illegible] He was never [illegible] at the fourth [illegible] Yonkers boy [illegible] mile. [illegible] He ran a half mile for [illegible] into the van and [illegible] dash.

The field [illegible] Nieminen left the [illegible] was next to [illegible] Dineen for the first [illegible] and a half [illegible].

BURNS BREAKS RECORD.

Exeter Sprinter Makes New 300 Yard Mark.

EXETER, N. H., March 5.—Fred Burns, Exeter's phenomenal sprinter, who on Saturday captured [illegible] at the B. A. A. [illegible] to-day broke the academy record for 300 yards, doing the distance in 32 seconds flat. This is remarkable time, as the former academy record of 32 4-5 seconds was considered by many to be unbeatable, and it stamps Burns as one of the greatest sprinters in the country to-day. [illegible] Cornell and O'Hara of [illegible] also to lower.

GIANTS WIN OUT.

Timely Rally in Seventh Saves Game From Dallas

DALLAS, Tex., March 5.—[illegible] this afternoon [illegible] just three hits [illegible] New Yorkers [illegible] of 5 to 4. It was a dull game because of errors and listless fielding until the Giants sprung a rally in the seventh [illegible].

A feature was the clever pitching of Edward Kerber, who relieved Drucke and pitched the last four innings.

Middy Fencers Win.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., March 5.—The Midshipmen fencers beat Cornell five bouts to four in [illegible] the match two Spanish fencers [illegible] Cecenio and Costello, the former being the instructor of King Alfonso in the fence, gave highly spirited and interesting exhibitions. They used both sabres and foils, but sabres were their particular weapon, and their speed of foot and arm and quickness of eye and defensive work were of the highest character.

And I will not pay any attention to [illegible] until after the big battle.

Van Loan Says Jeff's Grudge Will Make Big Fight Bitter

By C. E. VAN LOAN.

A GRUDGE fight, when there is a real grudge and not a feeling manufactured by press manipulation, is [illegible] Johnson.

[illegible] Jeffries [illegible] good-natured, happy-go-lucky fellow, probably never carried ill will in his life. But Jeff [illegible]

[illegible] generosity in making terms [illegible] Nevada [illegible] who said he would give [illegible] for a fight between Jeffries and Jack Johnson.

I went out to the alfalfa [illegible] ask Jim [illegible] Johnson's [illegible] blazed up angrily.

"They might as well quit talking about it," said he wrathfully. "I won't fight Johnson in Nevada or anywhere else and I don't care how much money they offer."

"Why?"

"Well, in the first place, I wouldn't give that fellow a chance to make a dollar through me. In the second place, he is as crooked as a corkscrew."

Jeff would not admit that he believed Johnson to be [illegible] up on the subject of the negro [illegible]

[illegible] so bad that they'll have to take him to a [illegible]

[illegible] Jack Munroe and [illegible] were amazed [illegible] Munroe had [illegible] the champion of the world with a [illegible].

It [illegible] always been a matter of pride with Jeff that no man had ever been [illegible] hit him hard enough to drop him to the floor or even send him to one knee. Consequently, the Munroe story made a tremendous sensation. It afterward led up to a battle, but there was no prearrangement so far as Jeff was concerned.

The fact that [illegible] stories about the knockdown [illegible] made Jeff all the sorer. [illegible] that he had not [illegible] in the ring. The [illegible] the ropes and [illegible] slipped on the canvas and came down on one knee. No blow was struck.

[illegible] out from the ringside [illegible] a friend of Munroe's [illegible] the time he had no idea except that such a statement would boost [illegible] the papers.

"[illegible] anything," said [illegible] it was doing me a [illegible]

Jeff Never Forgives.

[illegible] At the time [illegible] timber was [illegible] the Jeffries [illegible] wasn't an available man in [illegible] the promoters pitched on Munroe.

On the night of the fight several of [illegible] at the Gas Kitchen [illegible] always stopped [illegible] San Francisco.

Jeff never [illegible] more vicious wallop than the one [illegible] Munroe staggering to the ropes with his arms dangling and the whole side of his face smashed in.

If Jeffries carries his grudge into the ring with Johnson, it may have perceptible effect on the style of battle. Jeff has never showed Johnson the common courtesy usually allowed one fighter by another in any of their negotiations.

And oh people! what a fight that will be if the white man starts out to make good on that ambulance talk!

NAUGHTON BELIEVES NELSON OUT OF TITLE RACE

Critic Says Dane Has Little Chance of Ever Regaining the Championship.

By W. W. NAUGHTON.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 5.—Did the [illegible] with Al Wolgast mark the passing of Battling Nelson as [illegible] championship candidate?

The sporting public [illegible] to think so [illegible] story of [illegible] favors the assumption.

When a top-notch fighter loses his title [illegible] that he is [illegible] a pretty sure sign he is [illegible] rest and gazing down the sunset trail.

But himself will not have it that the [illegible] Bat [illegible] following the [illegible] dropped by a string of [illegible] champions which stretches far back into the misty past.

In my experience I have found ring men to be a good deal like consumptives. The worse they become physically, the brighter the future [illegible]. In the case of [illegible] fighters it looks [illegible] decrease of vitality means an increase in vanity.

I thought of this [illegible] before the fight, when Nelson [illegible] at my desk and told me with all seriousness in the world that he was one hundred per cent. better than on the eve of any of his former bouts.

Bat "Shy on Condition."

Now that it is all over Bat isn't insisting altogether [illegible] an off day [illegible] with Wolgast [illegible] New Mexico [illegible] words has been [illegible] to term "prestine [illegible]"

[illegible]

In San Francisco Nelson has [illegible] the [illegible] against the Dane's wonderful [illegible]. These fellows as a rule backed away from Nelson and when they were leg weary he closed in on them and beat them down.

In Wolgast, Nelson met a man after his own heart, one who has no nerves as it were, and who is absolutely regardless of consequences. Wolgast did some backing up, but during 50 per cent of the time allotted to the fighting he was close [illegible] Battler, standing away [illegible] Nelson was supposed to [illegible] younger and better [illegible] Battling Nelson.

CHOYNSKI SAYS BAT WILL REGAIN TITLE

Old Fighter Says Nelson Was Trained Too Fine for the Bout.

CHICAGO, March 5.—That Battling Nelson will [illegible] champion again is the prediction [illegible] Joe Choynski, once regarded as one of the world's greatest [illegible] and still looked upon as something of a pugilistic star.

"Permit me the prediction that Nelson will be the lightweight champion again," said Choynski. "Wolgast has a lot of [illegible] in view, and will make a [illegible]. He will give Nelson another fight, perhaps not for six months, but the longer he waits the better [illegible] Nelson's chance to win.

"Personally I [illegible] Nelson [illegible] trained down too fine for this bout, going to an extreme because in his previous fight with Wolgast he took things easy and was not in condition.

"He was too light in training, but he will know better next time and when he steps into the ring with Wolgast again you will see a different man. Despite reports to the contrary, I think Nelson is not physically strong. His shoulders, chest and [illegible]. But he knows how to work down stronger [illegible] and he will do it again."

TROUBLES OF A CHAMPION.

Course of True Love Does Not Run Smoothly with Wolgast.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., March 5.—Ad Wolgast, who now wears the crown emblematic of the lightweight championship of the fighting world, will have it torn from his head if telegraphic reports concerning [illegible] California girl are correct.

HAL CHASE WRITES OF SACRIFICE HITS AND THE "HIT-AND-RUN"

By HAL CHASE

First baseman of the New York American League team and considered by experts to be one of the best natural ball players the game ever produced

> THIS is the third of a series on intricate points in baseball written especially for the American by Hal Chase, the premier first baseman of the country. In preceding articles Chase dwelled upon his own specialty, first-base play, and the art of base running. The next of the series will appear in next Sunday's American, and will deal with coaching and signals, two points that cut more figure in the success of a team than the casual visitor at a ball park has any idea of.

THE winning ability of a baseball club is no better than its practical knowledge of "inside" play. Inside play means any number of things. It applies equally to defense and offense. It embraces the cutting off of opposing runs and the manufacture of runs for your own side. Inside play implies unselfish, conscientious work for the good of the team, not the individual. It means harmony—pulling together in unison.

Inside baseball cannot be confined to any special marked varieties. It must assert itself in every play that happens in a game. It means simply accomplishing best results with smallest hazard. But from the present development of the national pastime two things [illegible] most prominently as examples of [illegible]. These are the sacrifice hit and the hit-and-run.

The hit-and-run is the father of the sacrifice. It was the old Baltimore club that developed the latter to its highest standard. McGraw, Keeler, Jennings and those famous Orioles were skilled bunters, and for a while they worked the play almost exclusively. Other clubs naturally caught on. The hit and run was forgotten for the time. The sacrifice was [illegible] It was worked so persistently [illegible] its usefulness was lost. [illegible] teams of the major [illegible] most excluded it. They prefer the hit-and-run. But in so doing they are putting this play where the sacrifice was a couple of season ago. They are overworking it. The hit-and-run comes [illegible] to the fore. But it should not be killed by being made an unwavering [illegible].

Two Plays Dovetail.

To my mind the hit-and-run dovetails into the sacrifice. The successful team is generally the one that can so cover its designs as to keep the opposition in doubt as to which of the two plays is contemplated in a crisis. A team that pulls nothing but the sacrifice cannot get away from it for long. A team might use the hit-and-run exclusively with good results, but only when every man on the club is a finished batsman and a fine place hitter. The best teams mix these two.

The hit-and-run, on the other hand, is not confined to such emergencies. It may be masked as any ordinary situation. Certainly it should be associated with every attempted steal, unless the runner gets such a start that there is no possible chance of his being headed by the catcher's throw. The hit-and-run cannot be worked by the batsman alone. He must have the co-operation of the runner. The idea is that the runner pull one of the fielders from his natural territory to cover a base for a throw. The hitter then drives the ball through the improvised gap. If the fielder does not cover the [illegible] [illegible] let the ball go [illegible] he is in a [illegible] runner in that case gets the extra [illegible]

With a runner on first on a sacrifice play [illegible] should bunt toward first base if the first baseman is right handed. If the first baseman is left handed and fast, chances should be taken on the third base side. The throw to second is more difficult for [illegible] baseman under such conditions than it would be for a left handed [illegible] [illegible].

Where to Lay Ball Down.

To advance a man from second to third the batsman should always lay the ball down the third base line. It pulls that fielder off the bag and forces him to play for the batter. If the shortstop covers third, or if the pitcher fields the ball [illegible] is a chance to pinch the runner at [illegible] cushion, especially if the pitcher is a [illegible] paw. But under ordinary [illegible] especially if the runner gets [illegible] should he is absolutely safe. The [illegible] lost by the fielder in turning almost completely round to throw to third makes it almost impossible to play for any out [illegible] first base.

When I smell a sacrifice play I always signal the pitcher to take the bunt if to the right of him. I go in for anything to the left or toward my side. The second baseman covers first and the shortstop, second. This leaves our defence in pretty good shape should the batter cross us and attempt to hit it out.

"I've got no time to waste on you, nigger. I've got to catch a train." Then he flung one from the hip which sent Dewey to the mat and the referee counted ten.

That was all Langford caught; the train. [illegible] the 200 Denver sports, and all of them were tickled to death that they had made the [illegible] trip, were they not? Yes, they were not.

Great Feats by "Wizard" Schaefer

By JOHN N. KAMMERER.

Father-in-law of Jake Schaefer

WITH the apparent interest of the sporting, as well as the general public in the condition of Jake Schaefer, who is ill in Denver, a history of his career as a billiardist, I believe, would not come amiss at this time.

Jacob Schaefer, commonly known as the "Wizard," is without doubt the greatest of all experts in billiards. He is a small, wary man, but what he lacks in size is made up in quality. Every inch of this wonderful little man is made up of true, genuine sportsmanship. When he was able to play the game, no one ever had to look for an opponent. He was always ready and willing to meet any one who challenged him and where they met made no difference to him.

When Jake entered the so-called three-ball French carom game for the world's championship in 1870, he was little known and naturally encountered some opposition to his entry. I was a great enthusiast and knew all of the players, among them at that time being Slosson, Daly, Sexton, Garnier, Dion, Carter and Rudolph. Schaefer beat each one of them in turn, and Cooper's Hall was too small to hold the mass of people who desired to witness the last night's play between my protege and Slosson.

Slosson started off like a house afire and before he was done, the score stood 559 to 19 in his favor. It looked discouraging to the friends of the "Wizard" and not being able to stand it longer to see my true friend being beaten in this way, I gathered some of my "pals" together and went to a nearby cafe to await the finish. Of every [illegible] that came in we asked who was playing. Slosson had made a few points and [illegible] when the report reached us that Jake [illegible] the balls on the rail had run a hundred, and still was playing. He ran 285 and missed, and Slosson, it was said, was getting "cold feet" and could not do himself justice. Every one who ever saw the Wizard play knows how he could recover when he got the balls on the rail.

Well, to make a long story short, he soon ran out the game with a 296. Some people holding Slosson tickets went out of the hall with the score of 559 to 19 in their favor, but were greatly surprised when they went to get them cashed the next morning to find that they had lost.

Slosson was the only man who challenged Schaefer for the emblem won on that night. The game was played in McCormick's hall, for 1,000 points. In this contest Jake established a new record, running the game out in three innings, with 5, 690, 305. Slosson's score was 44. This ended the three-ball straight rail, and Schaefer never from that time engaged in a game of that kind until he played McCleary in 1890, when he ran 3,000 points without a miss, which is the greatest performance ever known.

In a recent article Mr. W. H. Catton classed Vignaux with Schaefer. I will try to show that Jake was a much greater player than all of them, either past or present. As Mr. Catton said, new games were invented to beat the "Wizard." But they did not succeed. He studied all the new angles to the proposed games and mastered every point.

Vignaux came to this country in 1883 to compete in the eight-inch balk line game, but Schaefer won the tournament without losing a game.

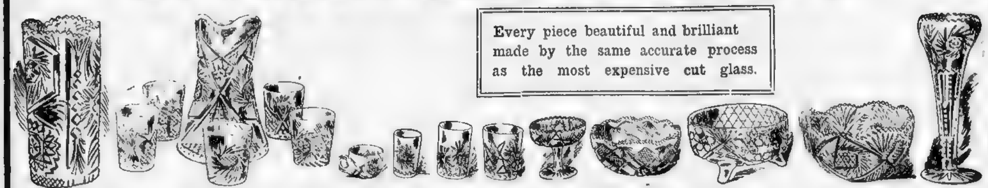
5000 Pieces of An Artistic, Dazzling Array of Rich, Deep Cut Glass

AT PRICES NEXT TO NOTHING!

Every piece beautiful and brilliant made by the same accurate process as the most expensive cut glass.



Cut Glass Vases—Pitchers—Bowls—Glasses—Compotes

Subject to very slight manufacturers' imperfections, a scarcely discoverable little crack or flaw that puts the price down below the price-level of common blown glass.

Naturally, the glass factories could not sell this slightly imperfect glass to retailers by sample. Our expert cut glass buyer and the Bargain Basement manager could only secure the accumulations of cut glass from a dozen different factories by making their selections in person. So in the worst February blizzard known, they went to the glass factories of Honesdale, Carbondale, Corning, Elmira, Hawley in New York and Pennsylvania. When the rotary train plow quit business, they got out into drifts of snow and proceeded by sleigh, but they secured the cut glass! Some factories had large lots, some smaller, but every single piece of it is worth having at six times the price. Take this opportunity Monday to get cut glass of high-priced, artistic shapes, rainbow lights and deep cut patterns.

Six or Eight Pieces of Cut Glass at the Usual Price of One!

LENT ALMOST AS GAY AS THOUGH 'PENANCE' IS UNKNOWN WORD

If Present Procession of Events Continues There Will Be No Appreciable Difference After Easter Terminates Supposed Period of Sackcloth and Ashes Among the Social Set of Boston.

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

If the pace now being set by the fashionables continues throughout the Lenten season there will be practically no appreciable difference when the supposed season of gloom has ended, for never before in the history of the Hub has the penetential season been so gay in realms social.

The opera is said to be the cause of it all, for with so many dinners, box parties and other events in connection with it to occupy their minds, how could they help forgetting that they are deviating from the paths approved by their straight-laced ancestors?

Dances, too, are numerous, though, of course, not the large affairs such as the Assemblies—but house dances, Harvard dances and sub-bud affairs are being given with practically no thought to the time of year and its obligations.

The magic of the opera still holds, and even Monday night, despite the rain, the Lenten exodus of our fashionables to other cities and the repetition of "Madame Butterfly," all there is left of the ultra exclusive set in town donned their best and put in an appearance—making quite as brilliant a sartorial display as on any evening previous.

All the conspicuous members of the smart set were present in their latest most sumptuous and most ravishing Spring frocks, fresh from Paris.

There was certainly a lavish display of gorgeousness, and none of the women attracted more attention than the stately young Countess Moltke handsome, well gowned, distinguished in appearance, she is still very much like the Cornelia Thayer of other day.

Countess a Notable Guest.

Monday night she was among the guests in her father's box and never looked lovelier than in her clinging gown of white satin with tunic drape of white chiffon embroidered with pearls, a pearl necklace and a coronet of pearls in her prettily coiffed blonde hair.

With such an attraction as a real live Countess, needless to say the Thayer box was the centre of interest throughout the evening.

Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer, whose devotion to the Countess and her interesting brunette sister Sally is as great as though they were her own daughters, gave a large dinner in the Countess' honor Monday night at her Fairfield street home, later bringing her guests on to the opera.

Mrs. Thayer was charming in black lace and black satin.

The house fairly scintillated with precious stones Monday night—every imaginable hue and design. It was distinctly a diamond evening.

But it wasn't our smart women who were displaying them, for they, during Lent, have taken to wearing a simple knot of flowers on the corsage or in the hair in preference to their costly gems; and there is a conspicuous absence of the treasures of the jewel casket among the important feminine occupants of the boxes.

Mrs. Francis Peabody, who was chaperoning her youthful, dashing debutante daughter, Amy, and a party of her young friends, wore a modish gown of pale blue satin, trimmed with fine white lace. Miss Peabody was in palest rose pink satin and pearls.

The public, during intermissions, seemed to find immense satisfaction in gazing at the Oliver Ames box, which was well filled and over which Mrs. Ames presided in her usual queenly fashion.

Many Conspicuous Beauties.

Mrs. Ames, who is voted by many the handsomest of the younger matrons in town, wore a wonderful creation of pale gray satin, the decolletege outlined with silver lace, embroidered in pearls.

Another conspicuous beauty was Mrs. Lester Leland. Mrs. Leland's beauty doesn't seem to diminish with the years, and she is immensely clever at producing stunning effects by the infinite variety of her costumes. Her gown that night was of heavy black satin, and diamonds were her jewels.

Of the succession of toilettes in which Mrs. George R. Fearing has appeared, none eclipsed the handsome one of black velvet which she wore Monday night. It was a semi-empire model, the lovely gauze, which formed the upper part of the corsage, embroidered in pearls and Rhine stones.

Mrs. Wallace Goodrich, who entertained a party of friends in the Jordan box, was also in black velvet.

Rosamond Dixey, in deep rose pink satin, was one of the beauties of the evening. Her gowns are always marvels of richness and good taste, and the one worn Monday night was no exception.

Mrs. Charles Hayden was in heliotrope satin, and Miss Fannie Faulkner wore black jetted lace.

Mrs. N. L. Amster was in black velvet, and Miss Mariam Shaw, the piquant little blonde heiress, who was introduced to society last Winter, was in palest pink satin. She was one of a party of interesting young girls including the brunette beauty, Ruth Nickerson, who wore a becoming gown of palest blue satin.

Miss Julia Coolidge, who, in June, will become the bride of Mr. Richards, was in pale blue satin with tunic drape of white lace edged in black velvet.

Mrs. Henry D. Burnham, whose pretty daughter, Nina, will no doubt shortly announce her engagement to the handsomest of the younger Wolcotts, was in pale pink satin and white lace. Miss Burnham was in pale blue satin.

Miss Elinor Quincy, in palest pink satin, Miss Alice Thorndike, in delft blue chiffon, trimmed with narrow bands of delft blue satin; and Miss Nora Thayer, in rose pink satin and white lace, were among the best looking of the younger girls.

Miss Elinor Sohier, in a gown of black satin, was with her fiance, Mr. Shaw.

Barbara Burr Holds Court.

In a beautiful gown of pale pink satin, with a tunic of heavily embroidered silver chiffon, Barbara Burr was much in evidence. She was among the late arrivals, and, during intermission, held court in the foyer.

Though that interesting little French girl, Mlle. Frances Prudon, who came over with her step-mother to make her debut in Boston, is not what one would call pretty, she has a certain piquant charm which has made her a prime favorite with the younger set, and it is doubtful if any of the buds have more admirers.

There is one particularly devoted, and I should not be surprised but if, before mademoiselle sails for her home in France, next week, her engagement will be announced.

It is truly rather hard on our Boston buds that, instead of being content to stay at home, where the prospects for titled husbands are so alluring, a modest little French maid should appear on the scene here and take captive the "catch of the season."

Mlle. Prudon last night wore a most becoming gown of electric blue satin.

Miss Claire Means, who was with her, was decidedly one of the handsomest girls there. Her gown was of rose pink satin, trimmed with silver-spangled tulle.

Mrs. Francis S. Watson, who was with a party of friends, was looking remarkably well, and wore a most fetching frock of pale yellow chiffon, trimmed with narrow bands of yellow satin.

Miss Mary Hunnewell was in rose pink chiffon.

In a gown of nattier blue velvet, Mrs. Bayard Thayer looked superb and set a pace sartorially which it was difficult for most of the women to equal.

Mrs. Wirt Dexter was in black net, and Mrs. John L. Gardner wore white satin, trimmed with white lace.

Mrs. Roger Walcott was in black velvet, as was also Mrs. Robert S. Bradley.

Miss Rosamond Bardley was in pale blue chiffon.

If it weren't for grand opera one wonders what would become of our fashionables, especially the ones who are spending the Lenten season in town.

MRS. HENRY SANFORD MANN, BRIDE OF BOSTON CLUBMAN

MRS. HENRY SANFORD MANN.

BOSTON society is ready to welcome with open arms that interesting young bride, Mrs. Henry Sanford Mann whose marriage to one of our best known clubmen took place a week ago Thursday in New York. Mrs. Mann was Miss Mary Nash Skidmore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Skidmore, No. 39 West Fifty-second street, where the marriage took place. Owing to mourning in the family the wedding was small, only the two families and few of the more intimate friends being present. Mrs. Mann has been a decided success socially and, ever since her debut, has figured conspicuously in the smart doings of the younger set in Gotham. The Manns are now enjoying a honeymoon tour through the South and will said for Europe in the early Spring. When they return to America they will reside in Boston. As the bride has innumerable friends here, she will take her place quite naturally among them and many events are being planned in her honor.

For almost every smart function which takes place is in some way connected with the opera.

If there is a dance [illegible] guests [illegible] entertained at the [illegible] to that [illegible] the opera [illegible] the [illegible] appears at the close of the opera.

Even on Wednesday evening, when there were so [illegible] the dance which Colonel W[illegible] D. Sohier gave at the Tuileries in honor of Miss Dorothy Draper, there was a large and fashionably gowned [illegible] Madame [illegible] and a [illegible] the young [illegible] set was in evidence.

Quite the loveliest of [illegible] Mary Jos[illegible] [illegible] Paris gown [illegible] Pearls were [illegible]

In striking contrast to Miss A[illegible] delicate beauty was the vivacious, dark eyed gypsy-like Olive Thorndike, in a [illegible] gown of deep pink satin [illegible] gold embroidery and a wide [illegible] circling her dark hair.

Both girls are beautiful [illegible] task to choose between them.

Still another girl to attract much admiring attention was Miss Rosamond Dixey who was in palest pink brocaded satin.

But the handsomest gown worn by any young girl there was that donned for the occasion by Miss Eloise [illegible] who was the guest of Mrs. Frederick Converse. It was of the filmiest white chiffon a glitter with gold spangles and gold sequins.

Mrs. Converse was in black velvet, the decolletege outlined in [illegible]

Mrs. James A. Garland, who also entertained a large box party, was in black velvet trimmed with white [illegible]

Miss Julia Coolidge, who is to be numbered among the brides of June, was in a most becoming creation of pale blue satin draped with heavy white lace edged with black velvet. Pink roses were worn on the bodice and in her hair.

Occupying the Bart box was a jolly party of young people, including Miss Nora Thayer, Dorothy Ball and Patrick Grant, son of Judge Grant. Miss Thayer wore white satin and pearls, and Miss Ball was in white chiffon.

Mrs. M. M. Amster was in black velvet, Miss Fanny Faulkner in [illegible] yellow satin trimmed with silver, and Mrs. Francis Peabody in pale blue satin and pearls.

Mrs. John E. Thayer, who entertained at dinner and later brought her guests on to the opera, was in white satin and diamonds.

Among her guests was Mrs. J. Randolph Coolidge, Jr., in pale gray satin, and Miss Harriott Curtis in black.

Mrs. Wirt Dexter was in black satin trimmed with jet, and her daughter, Mrs. Stanley McCormick, was in pale blue satin with trimmings of bands of Persian embroidery.

Mrs. Henry D. Chapin was in black velvet with one pale pink rose in the bodice.

Miss Elizabeth Brooks was in pale blue satin and Mrs. Eugene Thayer, Jr., in black velvet.

Mrs. "Jack" Gardner was in black velvet and white lace; Mrs. John L. Morison, in black jetted lace; Miss Sophie Wells in black velvet; Miss A[illegible] Stackpole in pale blue satin and Mrs. John Ware Dennes [illegible]

Mrs. [illegible] Sargent, who occupied the George Gardner box, was distinguished in black chiffon spangled with silver, over a foundation of white satin.

Mrs. William F. Fay was in white satin and pearls.

Novel Gowns Add To Beauty Scene

Mrs. [illegible] Parker, who had with her her pretty dark eyed daughter, Elinor, was in black satin, while Miss Elinor was in pale pink satin and wore flounces of net ruching on the skirt and smaller bands of ruching on the bodice.

Mrs. Richard C. Dixey, who chaperoned her daughter, Rosamond, and a party of friends, was in black velvet.

Mrs. John A. Burnham wore a handsome gown of black satin and her daughter, Miss Helen Burnham, was becomingly gowned in old rose crepe.

Mrs. George Garland in dull blue satin and her daughter, Alice, in rose pink chiffon, were among those occupying the Lassell box.

A striking beauty in a most original gown was Miss Elizabeth Wells, who wore white satin with an over-drape in coat effect of deep orange velvet. Her extremely long jet earrings helped complete her [illegible]

[illegible] Miss We[illegible] [illegible] R. Fearing [illegible] Mrs. Bayard T[illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] white [illegible] and, with Mrs. [illegible], in black velvet, were together in a second tier box.

Mrs. Charles G. Weld was in white lace over white satin with a handsome tunic drape of deep [illegible]

Among the most distinguished of the [illegible] Mrs. [illegible] who wore a strikingly lovely gown of gray satin trimmed [illegible]

Handsome Matrons Greet Friends in the Foyer

Two distinguished [illegible] greeting their friends in the foyer during intermission were Mrs. [illegible] distinguished in black jetted satin, and Mrs. Franklin Dexter in white satin and heavy white lace.

Mrs. Oscar [illegible] Mildred Coxe, who was one of [illegible] was in pale pink satin.

Two of the [illegible] promenade [illegible] rose satin and M[illegible] chiffon over [illegible]

The most [illegible] of the [illegible] Staples Potter [illegible] silver embroidered [illegible] of silver. A band of [illegible] dark hair and added [illegible] loveliness of her toilette.

Another gown of rare beauty was that worn by Miss Clara Endicott Sears, one of the wealthiest of [illegible] It was of pale pink satin [illegible] silver embroidered chiffon.

Mrs. Edward C. Bates wore [illegible] chiffon and Mrs. Moses Williams, Jr., was in black velvet.

Pretty Claire Means was a notable figure in pale pink satin. Miss Elizabeth Putnam wore metal green velvet. Mrs. George Cushing was in green satin, Mrs. James Jackson in deep gray satin and Mrs. Nathan Matthews, who was with her, wore striped gray and white satin.

SMART SET EAGERLY WAITS FOR AFFAIRS FORETOLD BY PLANS

Functions in Aid of Charity Take Prominent Place in Events of Near Future, but Musicales, Lectures and Dancing Parties Are by No Means Missing from List of Society Temptations.

THERE is always a deep interest in the future belles and beaux of the smart set, and such a number of them as there are in Boston! To walk along Commonwealth avenue any bright, sunny afternoon is surely a revelation, for it is literally thronged with these prettily clad young aristocrats, all bubbling over with health and good spirits and romping along as freely as though they were the poorest of urchins out for their daily frolic. Of course they are always attended by either nurse or governess, but the children of Boston are practically given free rein so far as their childish pastimes are concerned. But there is one fact self evident, and that is that there is no race suicide in Boston's Four Hundred.

A CHEMIST'S DISCOVERY.

New Remedy for Eczema and Other Skin Troubles.

The most remarkable feature about Cadum, the new remedy for skin diseases, is that its beneficial action is seen in every case where it is applied. Not a single instance has been found where it failed to allay the terrible itching of eczema at once. People who have been afflicted with eczema for years and have tried everything without being relieved should take fresh courage, for the new remedy Cadum is different from anything else. It is the discovery of a chemist, who felt for years that the world needed a cure for eczema and other skin diseases, and as a result of his studies and experiments Cadum is the outcome. While possessing such remarkable powers in overcoming different forms of skin troubles, Cadum contains no dangerous drugs. When applied over unsightly sores on the face and hands, it forms a thin, almost invisible coating, so that the disease is covered up while the healing process is going on. The 10c. size is intended for trial purposes by those who wish to test its wonderful virtues in skin troubles, such as hives, pimples, blotches, tetter, itch, acne, herpes, scaly skin, rash, psoriasis, ringworm, chafings, eruptions, sores, scabs, itching piles, scurvy, etc. Large boxes 25c. at all druggists.

BELLEW AND HITCHCOCK TO ADD THEIR PERSONALITIES TO BOSTON STAGE GALAXY

"Midnight Sons," "St. Elmo," "Is Matrimony a Failure?" "Ben Hur," William Hodge and Henrietta Crosman Continue, While "Via Wireless" Comes to the Grand with Big Scenic Effects.

By FELIX ST. CLAIR.

KYRLE BELLEW, the [illegible] pite of his dislike [illegible] matinee adoration [illegible] succeeds Sir Charles Wyndham at the Colonial Theatre [illegible] new Sutro play, "Builder of Bridges."

Raymond Hitchcock [illegible] in George M. Cohan's latest musical play, "The Man Who Owns Broadway."

[illegible] with present attractions. Henrietta Crosman [illegible] at the Hollis, Vaughan Glaser in "St. Elmo" [illegible] the [illegible] "Ben Hur" at the Boston, "The Midnight Sons" at the Shubert and "Is Matrimony a Failure?" at the Majestic will tarry, and at the [illegible] William Hodge [illegible] not yet in sight.

"Via Wireless," [illegible] Frederick Thompson spectacle [illegible] which was [illegible] year at the [illegible] Theatre, comes to the Grand Opera House [illegible] The great wireless room and the [illegible] among the most remarkable ever staged.

Keith's offers Joseph Hart's "The Futurity Winner" [illegible] shown with other big vaudeville acts, and the American Music Hall has [illegible] "Ma Gosse," with several sensational dances in addition to the regular bill.

John Craig will play "The Spitfire" for another week, and all the burlesque and moving picture houses have new shows.

* * * * *

BELLEW IN "BUILDER OF BRIDGES."

"Four quivering pages, torn direct from life," is how the passionate press agent describes "The Builder of Bridges," which brings Kyrle Bellew to the Colonial.

Bellew was last seen here in "The Thief," the masterpiece of Bernstein. He is now interpreting the ideas of the great English playwright, Alfred Sutro.

The play is unusual, to judge from the story. Dorothy Faringay, played by Miss Gladys Hanson, a typical English girl of the better classes, has just returned from a mysterious and unchaperoned trip to the continent. Her fiance discovers it and demands an explanation, which she is unable to give him.

The reason is that she has been seeking another man, cold-bloodly forcing him to love her that she may save her brother from prison. Unfortunately, in one sense, she has fallen in love with him herself, but her object is attained in that he loves her.

How she secures her release from her original engagement and conquers doubt in the heart of her lover is told by the play. There is said to be one exceedingly powerful scene which in intensity rivals the greatest play.

* * * * * * * *

"The Man Who Owns Broadway" is the latest creation of George M. Cohan. Cohan actually thinks that the sun rises at Fourteenth street, sets at Fifty-ninth street and shines only on that flamboyant thoroughfare known as Broadway, New York. Like the Boston man who thinks the earth is flat, he is rational on all other subjects, and even clever. Once he broke away from Broadway to write a show called "Fifty Miles from Boston," but this piece, in spite of the fact that it contained the best song Cohan ever produced—"Harrigan"—was not very successful. So George went back to Broadway and has had uniform success ever since.

IT WAS WEANT TO BE SERIOUS.

"The Man Who Owns Broadway" is the result of an attempt of Cohan to put David Belasco and Eugene Walter out of business as writers of the drama. He called it "Popularity," and it told all about an actor who was a matinee idol but saw his star waning. Cohan wept salt tears when he was writing it and then called in his friends. To his surprise, they began to laugh as he proceeded, and before he reached the sad climax they were struggling with mirth.

"What's the matter with you guys?" cried the playwright indignantly. "Do you think it is funny?"

"George," said Sam Harris, wiping away the tears of mirth, "it's the funniest thing you ever wrote. All it needs is a few lyrics and Raymond Hitchcock to play the poor actor."

"Well," replied Cohan, "there's more money in comedy than tragedy anyway." And he sat down, deftly exaggerated the character of Sydney Lyons, drew upon the "Star Spangled Banner," "Wearing of the Green," "Swanee River" and the "Arkansas Traveller" for inspiration, and in a trice produced a typical Cohan musical show with catchy songs—not too original—funny lines and funny situations. And Raymond Hitchcock was engaged for the leading role.

"The Man Who Owns Broadway" was a hit on Broadway, and should succeed at the Tremont on its merits as well as its reputation.

Cast your eye over a few Cohan songs and shows, "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway," "Give My Regards to Broadway," "Take Me Back to Broadway," etc.

* * * *

YOU LEARN IT FROM "SHAM."

Young women who are given to the practice of what is inelegantly known as "leg pulling" risk exposure if they cause their victims to take them to see Henrietta Crosman in "Sham" at the Hollis. Katherine Van Ripper discloses the methods of some of our most successful operators. For example, take a scene in the first act.

Katherine at home in her flat, redolent of shabby gentility. Caller is rich and stupid. A vase full of roses which he sent to her is on the table. Katherine is sighing.

"When my ship comes in do you know what I am going to do? I am going to have two tall palms in green majolica pots on either side of that window which looks so bare now."

Agitation on part of the fish. He gasps and swallows the hook.

Won't you let me send them to you without waiting for your ship?

Offended surprise. "Why, I couldn't do that." But as victim does not insist. "Though you send me roses and, after all, there isn't much difference between roses and palms."

"Why, no, both are a kind of flower." Inspiration seizes him.

"I tell you. I'll send the palms and not the majolica pots. Then you can accept them."

Anxiety on part of the operator. "But it was the pots I wanted particularly."

"Then I shall certainly send you palms and pots."

"Well, if you insist, my dear Mr. Buck. But how did you ever come to think of sending me palms?"

This is typical of Katherine's methods, and I fear of the methods of many young ladies in the audience.

* * * * * * * * *

Success breeds imitators. Annette Kellerman is responsible for any number of aquatic acts, but who ever would have suspected John Craig of hankering for the laurels of "the perfect woman," as her enthusiastic press agent calls her.

Craig, however, during the progress of "The Spitfire" twice plunges into a tank of water, making four dives a day. To be sure his tank is no bigger than a bathtub, but he goes in, clothes and all, and even gets his hair wet.

You see, Craig makes his entrance on board the yacht Spitfire from the sea. He is rescued from a watery grave, and when he comes on board he is dripping with moisture.

In the second act he gets himself disliked by the young lady who owns the yacht and she wishes he was back in the sea again. Very obligingly he jumps overboard. Again he is hauled out, wet and bedraggled. Thus he is obliged to get doused twice at every performance. What's that? Maybe [illegible]

The gentler sex is rescued from servitude by a rampant suffragette who bands them together and quickly make the men realize that they need their wives as much as their wives need them.

The only female whose spirit is broken by the situation is an old-fashioned mother-in-law who to get her daughter remarried is willing to [illegible]. In the [illegible] wives are reunited and there is not even a single shuffle. In real life a lot of husbands would find the door locked for good and many wives would see the last of their erstwhile loving husbands, while there might be a few new deals.

To see the Chariot Race in "Ben Hur" from the audience one is delighted with the grandeur of the spectacle, but it is not until the race has been witnessed from behind the scenes that the immensity of the production is realized.

Here is a tip for Manager Towse. After the show is over [illegible] again and let the audience pay an extra fee to pass behind the scenes and see how it is done. It is worth the price of admission to see the mechanical effect used [illegible]. A powerful [illegible] three panoramas each 90 feet long by 25 feet high rotate at the rate of 2,000 feet a minute while the machinery of the four tread mills upon which four 4-horse chariots dash at the rate of a mile in 2.20 is amazing in its complexity and immensity.

La Loie Fuller is a business woman as well as an exponent of the esthetic in dance and the soulfulness of motion, whatever that is. If you believe it examine her record. She made her first appeal to the classy folk who wear clawhammers and decollete after six o'clock.

She worked the Metropolitan and Boston Opera Houses until that field was exhausted and then into vaudeville she would go. She made a contract with Keith's to perform the "Ballet of Light" and furnished seven muses as well as [illegible] she won't keep her promise.

"Paris by Night" at Keith's last week and now "Ma Gosse" is announced for the American Music Hall. Both are French pantomimes relating to low life in Paris and introducing Parisian dances.

There was nothing very sensational about "Paris by Night" as seen in Boston. It [illegible] and the [illegible] Moulin Rouge and the Dead Rat, two well known resorts, and introduced a number of habitues. Three interesting acrobatic [illegible] more sensational. None of these acts present Paris in an attractive light, and I should think patriotic Frenchmen would object to them.

Everybody who has ever tried to attend the theatre in New York has seen the hungry horde of speculators who hang about the theatre lobbies and who seem to [illegible] appearance of Harry Lauder in New York last week drew a great throng and the "specs" were almost as numerous as the theatregoers. A diminutive Hebrew who disgusted of [illegible] new men conceived the idea of going to a customers and hiring a Highland costume, so the New York Telegraph avers. When he appeared in the McGregor tartan he cried:

"Hoot mon, hoot mon, oy, oy, oy. The real Harry Lauder Scotch kilts. Tickets at lowest prices."

He was [illegible] the waiting line of Scotchmen who purchased all his tickets and left the ordinary speculators lamenting.

Mrs. Wilton Lackaye was telling Raymond Hitchcock the other day about the dentist with whom she is involved in legal [illegible] charged her $ [illegible] attention to [illegible] worth it," she said. [illegible] Mr. Hitchcock, "why don't you take them out and throw them in his face. Wilton would."

BILLS AT BOSTON THEATRES

Tremont.

Raymond Hitchcock, Boston's favorite musical comedy comedian, returns to us to-morrow (Monday) night in the greatest success of his career, as the star of George M. Cohan's latest music play, "The Man Who Owns Broadway." He comes here following a six months' run at the New York Theatre, and Messrs. Cohan and Harris are sending the original cast and production along with him bag and baggage, including an orchestra of twenty-five artists. In the cast are Flora Zabelle, Frances Gordon, Lora Lieb, Maude Morris, Scott Welch, Mark Sullivan, George Lydecker and Stanley Forde, aided by a chorus of 100, and the prettiest costumes and scenery of the year.

Colonial.

At the Colonial Theatre for two weeks, beginning Monday, March 7, Charles Frohman will present Kyrle Bellew, the distinguished English actor, and a carefully selected company of capable players, in "The Builder of Bridges," a four-act play by Alfred Sutro, the celebrated English dramatist, author of "The Walls of Jericho," "A Maker of Men," "John Glayde's Honor," "The Fascinating Mr. Vanderveer," and a host of other successful dramatic achievements. Mr. Bellew's support might justly be called an all-star cast, including as it does such notable artists as Miss Gladys Hanson, leading woman with E. H. Sothern last season, Mrs. Wiffen, Frances Comstock, Jane May, DeWitt C. Jennings, Frank Connor, Eugene O'Brien and Ernest Stollard.

Grand Opera House.

At the Grand Opera House this week the attraction will be "Via Wireless," the sensational melodrama that was seen in this city last year for the first time. The story of "Via Wireless" is well known, and in the capable hands of a good company the patrons of the Grand Opera House will enjoy a treat.

American Music Hall.

Bostonians will next week have an opportunity of seeing the widely advertised Parisian sensation, "Ma Gosse," Royal Polo players, Empire City Quartet, Hallen and Hayes, Lewis, Bessie Leonard and other features.

Keith's.

Joseph Hart's big production, "The Futurity Winner," a startling melodrama with an exciting horse race for a finish, Flo Irwin [illegible] Laddie Cliff, Raymond and Caverly, Bergon and Lawrence and many big acts.

Shubert.

"The Midnight Sons," [illegible] in the way of musical comedy seen in Boston in a long time and produced with a prodigal hand by Lew Fields, will start on its second big month at the Shubert Theatre.

Boston.

The final eight performances of "Ben Hur" at the Boston Theatre are announced and seats are on sale for all of these concluding presentations of this famous [illegible]

Majestic.

"Is Matrimony a Failure?" begins its second week. The public has realized that this Belasco show is quite up to his standard and the patronage is gratifying.

Castle Square.

The success of "The Spitfire," Edward Peple's new comedy, has caused the management to continue it a second week.

Gaiety.

Ben Jansen and Lizzie Freligh, both too well known to require an introduction anew, will head the cast of the Bowery Burlesquers. The principal entertainment consists of "Too Much Isaacs," a well constructed musical oddity.

Howard.

The burlesque this week at the Howard will be presented by the Broadway Girls, headed by May Strehl and others of prominence. There will be twenty shapely girls in the chorus and the songs will all have a popular flavor. In the continuous show Manager Hunt has prepared [illegible]

SUB WARNED PUBLIC

Proud of Chance, Actor Wired Everybody, but None Came.

Not long ago a young actor noted more for his energy than for any startling histrionic ability got a chance, through the illness of his principal, to play a leading part. Accordingly he flooded his managerial and influential acquaintances with telegrams announcing:

"I play So and So's part tonight."

The theatre that night was comparatively empty and in the actor's dressing room waited a lone telegram from the author of the piece which read:

"Thanks for the warning."

Michael Mordkine has no less faultless a sense of rhythm than Anna Pavlowa [illegible] as ethereal. He touches the boards only to rebound from them. His gyrations in midair are marvelous. He is all lightness.

Now I understand why [illegible] Parisian women went wild over Mordkine.

That New York has already decided to honor these two marvelous Russians is evidenced by the fact that they have danced at private affairs given by William K. Vanderbilt and Otto Kahn.

ALAN DALE REVIEWS LATEST PLAYS IN NEW YORK FOR THE SUNDAY AMERICAN'S READERS

"A Son of the People," Depicting Scenes from the French Revolution, Makes Audience "Sit Up," He Says.

FOR the benefit of Boston theatregoers and in order that they may be kept in close touch with all new plays presented in New York, Alan Dale, the celebrated dramatic critic, writes each week for the Boston Sunday American a review of the newest and best productions. This week Mr. Dale deals extensively with "A Son of the People," a Drama of the French Revolution.

HERO SURELY TAKES THE BUN AS A PATRIOT AND A NINNY

By ALAN DALE.

NEW YORK, March 5. My [illegible] of the French Revolution is [illegible] to give [illegible] the stage a long and [illegible] ending series of [illegible] and heroines who insist upon being led to the guillotine for purposes of mawkish [illegible] Of course I know that this [illegible] is not [illegible] others. But [illegible] and others were not [illegible] who are perpetually asked to [illegible] the French Revolution as an en[illegible] at the rate of $2 per [illegible] head.

[illegible] the latest play on this turgid yet [illegible] occurring at the New [illegible] under the title of "A Son of the People," by Sophus Michaelis, [illegible] from [illegible] by some[illegible] into American by [illegible] we get [illegible] hero who [illegible] takes the bun. If the French [illegible] such [illegible] was a mighty good thing [illegible] the guillotine was a [illegible] substitute for the lunatic asylum.

[illegible] Aron, this wonderful hero, was [illegible] of the people," and full of [illegible] One touch of [illegible] served to transform [illegible] into a [illegible] of the first water. This [illegible] Royalist [illegible] had just married her [illegible] the Revolutionists [illegible] arrested him. Great agony [illegible] would [illegible] guillotined in the morning. He [illegible] night to live.

[illegible] very much miffed. It [illegible] to have to die in [illegible] Left alone with his bride [illegible] snorted. Then [illegible] He saw the unfortunate [illegible] his [illegible] wedding night. The [illegible] with him to save her [illegible] in her agony to [illegible] his hand [illegible] mighty son of the people [illegible] the poltroon bridegroom his clothes, [illegible] him to escape and took his place [illegible] was "the bride."

Delightful to Die.

[illegible] Aron [illegible] life. He would [illegible] and the idea was [illegible] of self-preservation [illegible] we who are not sons of the people was quite lacking in this hero. But the bride was rebellious. She went back on her word. Her bridegroom has escaped, and now she would not pay the price. St[illegible], the heroic Aron was undaunted. He sat on a chair, like Patience on a monument, smiling at the guillotine.

Later, of course, the lady "becomes his." Her patent reversible and collapsible affections were not the least remarkable of the strange "goings on" in this latest phase of the French Revolution. A few hours sufficed to cast her from the arms of her poltroon bridegroom to those of the penitential hero. In the last act he is about to be guillotined when Mr. Montaloup, his heroic comrade, also son of the people and apparently by the same mother, intervenes and insists upon saving his life.

Does he want his life saved? No! What is life to him or he to life? He is horrified at the treacherous idea of saving his life. Although supposed to be madly in love with this woman, for a few hours of whose company he has sacrificed everything, he absolutely insists upon dying. He will die. Nothing can prevent him from dying. The soldiers are ordered by Montaloup to spare him. Happiness might be his. What does he do?

He walks straight to the window, where the armed sentinels are below ready to shoot. And he lets them shoot him, and drops dead on the stage, while the lady of the patent reversible and collapsible affection falls on his prostrate corse.

But It Was Appreciated.

All that sounds a trifle unreasonable, you will admit. In the heart of every brave man lurks the ineradicable desire to live. This "son of the people" suffered from none of the troubles of humanity except love, which he endured in its most virulent form. He was a wonder.

He was of the stage stagey, and of the theatre theatrey. The Revolutionists were better off without him. However, this "Son of the People," it must not be forgotten, was acted at the New Theatre, where audiences have been accustomed to sleep.

Let me give Mr. Sophus Michaelis his due, and assert that this was the first play on the stage of this theatre that kept its audience awake. It assuredly was. In spite of its glitteringly impossible stage hero, the play kept the audience good for the first time in the New Theatre's career.

Also let me throw a bouquet at the Shuberts. It was they who, with their own star and their own company, took the matter away from the Central Park West management, and, although the fate of "A Son of the People" would be problematic at a "commercial" playhouse, it was a great gain at the New Theatre. For the first time the New Theatre seemed like a theatre. Instead of time and no situations, [illegible] here, at least, we got movement and energy, even if some of it was quite gorgeously absurd.

MILLIONAIRE PLAYWRIGHT NO FAILURE IN "TURNING POINT"

NEW YORK, March 5. Evidently Pres[illegible] "The Turning Point" [illegible] thought it better [illegible] producing that [illegible] to take any chances [illegible] its production. And [illegible] Horrible [illegible] millionaire may [illegible] American Dramatists [illegible] of which are wedded to their art [illegible] admire Mr. Gibson's [illegible] with his money to the very finest [illegible] in the world in [illegible]

[illegible] surely must know, that [illegible] secret prejudice against [illegible] gallery point of view [illegible] all righteous paupers. Mr. Gibson [illegible] expect he would clear himself [illegible] On the [illegible] Hackett he did say [illegible] the allegation that [illegible] Oscar Wilde [illegible] sought to dis[illegible] heinous idea that [illegible] a brave man [illegible] "The Turning Point" Mr. Preston [illegible] anything worse than [illegible] had he been poor.

[illegible] at this very Hackett Theatre [illegible] "The Turning [illegible]" produced this season [illegible] The first [illegible] too long. Nor does [illegible] a single million [illegible] treated himself to the present [illegible] play that is surely [illegible] his financial vil[illegible] occurrences [illegible] a day and two [illegible] comedy [illegible] are the most irrital [illegible] be found in where, and [illegible] on and slip off the stage [illegible] were "making it all [illegible] to be sure [illegible] perhaps, anthracite, the [illegible] with the coal rather than with [illegible] Yet the errors of "The Turning Point" are the errors of the [illegible] than those of the [illegible] I would sooner sit [illegible] "The Turning Point" than through "Children of Destiny," which is the work of a man who, if he is a millionaire, lacks the courage to say so.

The saucy widow in "The Turning Point" is its brightest feature and quite a bright feature too. It is Pansy Parr who says a good many of the things that, it is claimed, were borrowed.

But Pansy Parr says many bright things that seem to be original. She is a sort of fluffy interruption to all the coal talk. When the villain has demanded the sale of the strip of land for his coal concern that the hero holds, and the heroine has flouted his nefarious schemes (she seemed to be a sort of incipient Hetty Green), Pansy Parr comes on and frivols.

When the villain lures sweet little Barbara Byrd to her ruin, and the hero is, of course, suspected of the [illegible] deed, Pansy Parr again appears and lifts the [illegible]. She has no patience with girls who steal the [illegible] and then boohoo about it. When there is a frightfully dramatic and ranty scene between little Barbara's honest lover and her betrayer, Pansy Parr comes on with her persiflage.

"The Turning Point" is not subtle, but it is certainly not not subtle just because poor rich Mr. Gibson happens to be a millionaire. There is a scene in the last act which is not devoid of dramatic instinct. Nor is it likely that any of the members of the American Dramatists' Club would be ashamed of fathering it.

In this scene the hero confronts the villain, who is about to secure lovely A[illegible]'s money from the strong box, to which he has the key. In an adjoining room is a man with a gun, waiting to kill that villain for the betrayal of Barbara. So the villain is between the devil and the deep sea, and the episode is not lacking in dramatic suspense. To be sure the return of the dead girl—horribly alive—is a bit cheap and disheartening, and the "dark" scene is tawdry and maudlin, but worse things have happened this season—very, very much worse things.

LUCK IN FRIDAY, 13TH.

George Schiller Was Born and Wed on That Day.

George Schiller, the father of the four sons in "The Midnight Sons" at the Shubert, is always glad when a Friday, the 13th, comes around. He was born on Friday, the 13th. Mr. Schiller was born in the '60s and as Friday the 13th and that in August came only twice during the '60's, it is an easy thing for a mathematical sharp to figure out his age within six years. August 13 is his birthday.

When he graduated from the old Boston Museum stock company and first arrived in New York it was on the fateful day and date. The same conjunction of Friday and 13 has brought him good fortune in his work on three different occasions. Two of these were signalized by his signing important contracts and one was when he received an entirely unexpected raise in salary. He was married Friday, [illegible] 13th, [illegible] Mrs. Schiller has retired from the stage there is not a member of "The Midnight Sons" company that will not tell you that the two of them look as happy to-day as most people do on their honeymoon.

BUSONI AT PIANO.

Will Play at Symphony Hall Next Friday and Saturday.

Musical interest for the coming week will be centred in Ferruccio Busoni, who next Friday afternoon and Saturday evening will be the world's great pianists. All the promise seen in his younger days when he was a resident of Boston, and all the promise that he showed when he was last in this country, six or seven years ago, he has more than fulfilled.

When he made his first appearance this year in New York with the Philharmonic Society, playing the Beethoven "Emperor" concerto, which he will play here, he aroused extraordinary enthusiasm in the audience, and the press comments were unusually warm in his favor.

Busoni holds very high rank in the musical world, not only as a pianist but as a conductor, in which capacity he has for several years been the chief prophet of young composers in Berlin, and as a composer. His coming to Boston, therefore, is an event of more than interest to the musical public.

The symphony will be Brahm's Fourth in E Minor and the other number on the program will be Schubert's "Rosamunde" overture.

AUTOMOBILE EXPERTS DISCUSS THE INDUSTRY

BOSTON'S AUTO SHOW OPENS TO PUBLIC IN WEALTH OF SPLENDOR

Thousands of Persons Crowd Immense Floor Space in Effort to View the Premier Exhibition of Motor Cars Ever Held in This Country.

By J. C. Kerrison.

[illegible] emb[illegible] in the social ladder, elbowed, pushed and crowded each other in order to obtain a more comprehensive view of the great displays made at the opening of the seventh annual automobile show of the Boston Automobile Dealers' Association in Mechanics Building last evening.

There have been shows and shows, but none that in any way excels the great display inaugurated last evening.

[illegible] limited confines, having developed into an industrial exhibit pure and simple, bringing together as it does the product of one of the greatest armies [illegible] to be found in the world at large. It is magnificent in its purpose, prodigious in appearance, and one cannot help but compare the past with the present and wonder what the future has in store for the development of kindred industries that means so much to the world at large.

Greatest Display of Finished Cars in the Country.

Features of the Show

- 360 Exhibitors.
- 516 Motor vehicles shown
- 86 Exhibitors of motor cars.
- 10 Exhibitors motor cycles.
- 264 Exhibitors of accessories.
- Value of exhibits, $1,000,000.
- Lowest priced car, $500.
- Highest priced car, $18,000.
- Show closes March 12.

The total number of exhibitors at the show is 360, [illegible] of which will show [illegible] of finished cars ever seen in this country, the estimated number being 516. There will be nine different exhibits of motorcycles, and 193 exhibitors of motor accessories.

[illegible] in the construction of their product, but likewise in the showing of the same, whether it be in their own salesrooms or in a great show like this now being held in Boston.

Here there is little if any of the tawdry display [illegible] the industry [illegible] information that [illegible]

Has Inviting Appearance.

Grand Hall never presented such an inviting appearance. All the warmth and vigor [illegible] of the early Spring permeate the [illegible] it takes not a very strong imagination to think oneself far away from the noise and turmoil of the city. The several exhibits are separated one from the other and likewise the main aisles [illegible] hedges [illegible] feet high and rich in a profusion of white and purple coloring.

To supplement the main divisions, all sides of spaces are flanked with lower hedges of Spirea Van Houtti with its dainty white blooms and clean foliage. The deep troughs in which the shrubs are set in are thickly studded with imported tulips which bloom in every variety of color.

The stage as usual presents a special feature from an artistic standpoint but not more so than the entire exposition, which is to be one great harmonious whole. Bordered by heavy draperies, the stage picture presents a bright vista with beautifully painted landscape nearly one hundred feet long [illegible] twenty-five feet high [illegible] massive [illegible] the front of the stage [illegible]

[illegible] offers an example of what [illegible] and constructive ability [illegible] few days. One [illegible] from the [illegible] into that [illegible] Building.

[illegible] which is completed by [illegible] on the side walls.

One can almost imagine that every farm in Eastern Massachusetts had been deprived of its fence rails so many will be [illegible] These are all finished [illegible] weathered and [illegible] side walls [illegible] picture complete in every detail.

The show is in every sense and particular a motor show par excellent, comprising what [illegible] the finest collection of [illegible] and accessories that has ever been staged in this country.

This is [illegible] broad statement but nevertheless [illegible] New York shows were what might be termed [illegible] organization [illegible] Boston [illegible]

It is one great show in which licensed and unlicensed vie one with the other in displaying their products and developing [illegible] show.

Foreign Cars Represented

[illegible]

[illegible] one time owing to [illegible] number of new comers in the automobile manufacturing field, and the announcement of the production of 200,000 cars for 1910, it looked as if there would be an overproduction of machines and that prices would have to come down. Fortunately these statements were exaggerated and not only will there not be an over production but in all probability a shortage of cars will exist before Summer, and instead of a cut in prices, most of the makers of cheap and medium-priced cars have added from $60 to $200 to their last year's prices.

This is due to several causes. In the first place not over 125,000 cars will be built. Secondly, the manufacturers have not been able to get parts from the accessory people, and, thirdly, the cost of rubber and other material entering into the construction of cars, has advanced so [illegible] power plants displayed demonstrate that the designers are quite well satisfied with the constructive practices of the last two or three years.

Great Power No Longer the Cry.

Great power is no longer the one great cry, and it is interesting to note that the average horsepower will be nearer thirty than fifty, and that constructive policy has all been along well-defined and accepted lines, there not being what might be termed a radical departure in the entire show. More than one-half of the most conservative makers have come to the show with almost the same car, feature for feature that they produced last year, their contention that the season's experience had failed to develop the slightest fault with their cars.

There is really no great changes in the models of a year ago, the improvements in the main being in matters of details and refinements. Neither has there been a wholesale promotion of new models [illegible] models, and but few [illegible]

The four-cylinder motor continues to hold [illegible] even though there has been [illegible] of the six-cylinder field, two of the oldest and most prominent makers devoting their entire efforts to the production of sixes. Twin and single cylinder cars are, of course, to be found in the show, but they are decidedly in the minority and the triple cylinder is [illegible] they being of the two-cylinder class.

In the casting of cylinders there is a [illegible] diversity of practice. The majority [illegible] cast in pairs, while the individual casting is second, the en bloc system having [illegible] comparatively few of [illegible] even though that [illegible] popular in Continental Europe.

Diversity of Opinion.

The same diversity of opinion regarding bore and stroke seemed to prevail among the different makers, and it probably will continue so until the end of the chapter. The automatic carburetor seems to be the standard, and nearly all of the mixing chambers are water jacketed. The method of attaching the magneto to the chassis is as varied as any one thing but it is a noticeable fact that in every instance the designer attempts to secure accessibility.

Oiling systems have unquestionably been given great consideration during the past twelve months, the result being the general adoption of proven ideas which do away as far as possible with oil [illegible], the three types most prominent being the force feed, self-contained and splash systems.

There [illegible] new ideas in [illegible] the multiple disc clutch gained some few adherents during the year.

Magnetic ignition seems to have taken the lead in all classes and the dual system is a big gainer, generally at the expense of the double system. There is no [illegible] taking the advance being made in the circulating system of oiling for motors. Cellular coolers are gaining with many builders of cars at $2,000 or over. The dry disc clutch has gained a couple of new adherents in the adjustable roller bearing has added to its hold in the front road wheels and rear axles. The plain bearing crank-shaft is as firmly entrenched as ever, and [illegible] bearings are stronger than ever in [illegible] axles and in magnetos, [illegible] for pump shafts.

Use Propeller Shaft.

Shaft drive predominates to a considerable degree, the single chain drive being [illegible] while at least two of the leading makers have discarded entirely the double chain drive for the propeller shaft.

In the matter of ignition the jump spark [illegible] the more popular, the [illegible] and break being in the minority, although it was a noticeable fact that this system has not been discarded by any of its former adherents. A combination of battery and magneto was popular, the favorite being the [illegible] system in which the magneto and battery both operate through one set of plugs and wires.

And again can it be said that there were no radical changes in motor construction during the past year. There really seemed to be no call for any radical change as the motor, as a rule, has been brought to that stage of perfection where experiments are no longer necessary or advisable. The manufacturer has given up the attempts of the early days, having convinced himself that he has reached a point beyond which one must venture with caution and circumspection.

POINTS TO KNOW IN BUYING MOTOR CAR

Proper Action of Engine Under Load of Importance; Flexibility Also Factor.

Automobile buyers these days are learning that a car suitable for one purpose is not necessarily suitable for another and [illegible] evolved with reference to many special uses. [illegible]

[illegible] the [illegible] car when mile for mile, will cost no more than a horse. The knowing purchaser's choice resolves itself around the question of carrying capacity, speed, convenience and taste in body [illegible] supplemented by his mechanical knowledge [illegible]

Must Consider Comfort.

When buying a car [illegible] chose along the following lines: See that the car seats the [illegible] of passengers desired, and [illegible] comfort is the prime requisite in a car. Observe whether the [illegible] power to carry its load at the required speed and that it picks up speed and is able to negotiate hills on high gear without pounding or undue effort.

Quietness and lack of vibration are the first items in economy of upkeep. Note the flexibility in the range of speeds on the throttle without changing gears—how slowly it will run on high gear without the clutch slipping. Flexibility is most important [illegible] greater distance [illegible] [illegible] engine should start at a turn of the crank.

Care of the Cars.

General appearance, comfort and durability are points that can easily be judged or the reputation of the makers. Beauty of body [illegible] is the care of the car after [illegible] Will the firm stand [illegible] of its product and give prompt [illegible] service when a repair part is needed?

The traveling expert is a big factor [illegible] No matter how well [illegible] or how well it is cared for, adjustment and repairs are sure to be necessary occasionally. To protect the owner and to insure the [illegible] of his car whenever he wants it the E. R. Thomas Company has placed a corps of expert mechanics on the road whose duty it is to call on each owner at regular intervals to inspect his car carefully, to make such adjustments as he may deem necessary and to give advice [illegible]

Esperanto Cab Appears

[illegible] garage now in use [illegible] on the cab means that the [illegible] speaks Esperanto. The sign [illegible] let the tourist in search of transportation know this fact.

HOW TO DETERMINE MOTOR HORSEPOWER

While the A. L. A. M. rule for ascertaining horse power of automobile engines is well known in America, the French rating, which differs to some extent, is not such a familiar subject to the motorists in the United States. A table prepared in American terms for four-cylinder cars is appended. The first horizontal column gives the stroke of the piston in inches and the first vertical column gives the bore in inches. By following the line indicating the stroke of the piston until it intersects the line beginning with the size of the bore the horse power will be found. Thus a [illegible] cylinder would indicate thirty horse power.

The table by the French [illegible] is as follows:

Stroke / Bore	3	3.25	3.50	3.75	4.00	4.25	4.50	4.75	5.00	5.25	5.50	5.75	6.00

On the Radiator

"This Is Another Chalmers Year"

This is what a man who has owned automobiles "from the beginning" said last night as he stood in our space at the Mechanics Hall Show and watched the people crowd in to examine the cutout chassis and the models of the "30" and "Forty."

Many others have said the same thing. Nearly everyone has noticed that this is another Chalmers year.

We know that our cars are popular. Through their beauty, their durability, their performance—through a certain something called "personality" and "class"—they have won their way into the hearts of millions.

No Record Like This

We know that our cars have a good reputation. We know it from what thousands of people who visit our exhibits at the shows say. We know it from what the owners say. We know it from what people in the trade say. We know it from a thousand things we hear from all parts of the country.

This is the most gratifying fact we could possibly know. It is the realization of our hopes.

This could not be a fact simply because of advertising. It could be a fact only because the cars themselves have made good. They have made good with the people who have bought them, one by one.

They have made good in contests of all kinds during the last two years in a way that no other cars have equaled. In two years of motor contests they have won 89 firsts, 32 seconds and 21 thirds. They have won a higher percentage of events entered than any other cars.

They are the Champion Cars.

Consider Point by Point

More than a million dollars will be spent this year on automobile advertisements. But you are not fair with yourself if you buy solely by an advertisement.

Undoubtedly some one can write a better advertisement than we can write.

Yet we are honestly convinced that no one can offer you so good value in a car as we can offer.

Hence, if you did not take the car, rather than the advertisement, into consideration, you would not be treating yourself fairly.

All the advertising in the world won't make a car a good car. It has to be a good car, if it is good, because of its design, its materials and its construction. Advertising cannot take the place of those things.

Why a $10,000 Exhibit?

We have an educational Show exhibit that costs us $10,000. We did not put this exhibit in Mechanics Hall simply for the purpose of advertising, or even for the purpose primarily of making immediate sales.

We put it in because we wanted to give everyone interested the fairest possible opportunity to see everything there is to see about the construction and operation, the workmanship and finish, of Chalmers cars.

We are so sure of our car that we cut the chassis open from end to end for inspection at the shows. We are glad to show it all, for we are proud of it all.

And the interest in this cut-out chassis was so great in New York and Chicago we were compelled to put in a second one in order that all might have a chance to study it.

We Favor Shows

We are in favor of automobile shows, just as you are. You are in favor of them because they enable you to put competing cars side by side and go over them point by point.

All we ask is that you examine our car in comparison with all the other cars point by point; test it out as well as you can; take the past records into consideration; then if you buy some other car we have nothing to say.

The Chalmers car pleases first through the sense of sight. We believe that no car is more satisfying to the eye than the Chalmers. The lines are beautiful. The finish is the best. There is nothing skimpy about the Chalmers car. Nothing cheap.

Every Chalmers car has that tailor-made, well groomed, carefully-finished appearance that is always a source of delight and pride to the owner. Yet our prices are low.

Little Things Mean Perfection

So many "little things" have been carefully looked after on the Chalmers cars which have been left undone on other cars. Go over this car from radiator to rear axle. Put any other car alongside of it while you are doing so.

The radiator looks good and it is good. Note even the cap on the radiator, and the monogram—very small things of themselves, but showing thoughtful attention to details. Note the fenders: They are heavy and strong, securely fastened. Nothing tinpanny about them.

Note the care that has been taken to protect the mechanism and the passengers from dust; examine the running boards, the door latches, brass work, wiring and dash assembly.

See if any car could be more comfortable for the driver than the Chalmers.

Note the wood-work on the car. Compare the wood, and the finish of it, with any other car selling near our price.

Note the upholstering. Note the care with which the painting and striping has been done.

Note the big steering wheel and steering post, and even the wood of the steering wheel. Note the big, handsome doors. Note the tastefully designed gear and brake levers. Note the large wheels and how the rear wheels are bolted to the brake drums.

The "little things," the little matters of taste and style, that mean perfection, have been taken care of in the medium-priced Chalmers cars. Good taste has a commercial value and we realize it.

We Take Pains to Succeed

We are able to give the kind of cars we do at the prices we ask simply because we have taken the pains to do so.

We have taken the time to design good cars and to test them out. The designing of the Chalmers "30" was a two years' task.

We believe we have an inspection department that is second to none in the business. This department is one of the highest priced in our organization. But we find it pays.

We employ 103 men whose sole duty it is to inspect materials, manufacturing processes and finished cars.

There is never a moment, from the time work begins on the raw material until the finished car goes out of the factory, that any single part of the car is not under an inspector's eye.

We give the chassis the severest possible tests on the road. If they can be broken we want to do the breaking.

Every finished car is submitted to a scrutiny that is almost miscroscopic.

Will There Be a "Clean-Up"?

Another reason we are able to give so much for the money is that we are willing to accept a reasonable profit. We are not trying to make a fabulous sum of money in one year or two years. We are making a reasonable amount of money, but we are not advertising fictitious profits.

Some people say there is going to be a "clean-up" in the automobile business some day. Maybe there is and maybe there isn't. But if it ever comes we expect to be in the business after the clean-up, as we are in it before.

We think our business policies justify us in holding this belief. We are building only as many cars as we can build and have every one up to the Chalmers standard. We are selling quality; not price.

"It Is Like the Chalmers"

There are many people in the automobile business who take pride in the fact of their former connection with our organization; many who are proud to say of their product, "It is like the Chalmers."

We appreciate such compliments.

It shall be our aim to so improve our product from year to year, and to so maintain the high standard of our organization that none will ever have cause not to be proud of us and of having been with us.

* * * * *

Again we say: It is easy to make advertising claims for cars; but to make cars that will make good the claims is hard.

We ask automobile buyers this: After the advertisements have attracted your attention, then in fairness to yourselves and all the manufacturers, compare the cars point by point. That is all we ask.

CLOSE COUPLE AND TORPEDO BODIES

Underhill Company Show Four and Six-Cylinder Knox Cars for Features.

The torpedo body Knox shown by the Underhill company is unquestionably one of the most successful and practical of these latter day bodies. In the construction of this particular body every line has been taken into consideration, the result being decidedly satisfactory.

The latest addition to the Knox family is the six-cylinder, in which the power plant is of the [illegible] type, with three-point suspension.

The use of separately cast cylinders is continued on the four cylinder car but on the six they are cast in pairs. The six also has [illegible] system which employs the Atwater Kent [illegible] and Bosch ignition, the double system employing two sets of plugs.

[illegible] models [illegible] of the semi-elliptic type with three-quarter [illegible] the rear.

GABRIEL COMPANY'S NEW TYPE TRUMPET

Horn Consists of Four Single Tubes Which Controls Each Note Individually.

Visitors to the show will have the opportunity of seeing the finest and most unique novelty in the automobile signal field at the booth of the Gabriel Horn Manufacturing Company, makers of the well known Gabriel exhaust operated [illegible].

This new type trumpet horn consists of four single tubes with [illegible] end of each tube which [illegible] individually. A keyboard of four keys operate the valves and makes the horn suitable for producing all sorts of [illegible] and bugle calls as well as [illegible] for regular signal purposes. [illegible] unique arrangement of a small [illegible] keyboard makes it possible [illegible] four notes together [illegible] foot pedal for turning the exhaust [illegible] motor into the horn. The four [illegible] notes combined gives a sweet [illegible] tone of the very best quality.

An elaborate special ten-tube horn [illegible] also exhibited and which is [illegible] for producing melodies. [illegible] used with a F sharp and A [illegible]. This type of horn will afford more pleasure to the general public, as well as the occupants of the car, than any other automobile accessory ever invented. When once played it never fails to attract admiring crowds, and the general verdict is [illegible] it again.'

One of the most essential features in regard to the trumpet horn is that anyone can learn to operate it in a very short time. It is not necessary to be an expert musician in order to amuse and entertain your friends as well as others who are within hearing.

The [illegible] shock absorber, a product of the Gabriel Horn Manufacturing Company, has acquired unusual popularity during the short period it has been upon the market. It is being used as standard equipment by a number of the leading manufacturers of automobiles.

This absorber embodies an entirely new principle in articles of this class, inasmuch as it gives a free central movement when on smooth roads, consequently the natural spring action is retained. The absorber works or takes effect only when needed or when the action of the springs is inclined to become too violent as caused by bad roads. This absorber acts gradually and in proportion to the severity of the shock.

ELECTRIC MOTORS.

They Meet Every Need of Average Motorist.

"Many people are unaware of the great strides the electric motor car has made during the past few years," said F. R. White, general manager of the Baker Motor Vehicle Company, in a recent interview. "People do not know how far or how fast a good electric will really go. They know that the electric is cleaner, more convenient, cheaper to maintain and so easy to drive that a child can operate it. But they are apt to think it is necessary to sacrifice [illegible] in order to get greater speed and mileage in a gasoline driven car.

"As a matter of actual experience, however," continued Mr. White, "the electric does meet every need of the average motorist. It does everything that the average gas driven car is called upon to do. The automobile run in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred is well within the capacity of the electric.

"The mileage capacity of the electric now varies from sixty to one hundred miles on a single battery charge, and with careful handling they will go much farther. One hundred miles may not seem a big mileage at first sight, but when it is remembered that it means nearly seven hours of continuous going at the rate of fifteen miles an hour, it will be seen that the electric is not as dependent upon a current supply as is generally assumed."

JONES SPEEDOMETER.

Four New Instruments Have Been Added This Season.

Four new instruments have been added to the Jones line of speedometers for 1910, two of which have three-inch dials, one showing fifty miles and the other sixty. Another is a sixty-mile instrument at a slightly increased price and which has a four inch dial. The fourth new instrument is still higher-priced, registering a speed up to eighty miles an hour and having a four inch dial.

Jones retains his principle, centrifugal force, but among the refinements noted is the use of a vertical connection connecting the flexible shaft with the instrument, whereas in 1909 the connection was made by means of an elbow placed on the side. This vertical connection is on the bottom of the instrument.

SPEED AND TOURING CARS.

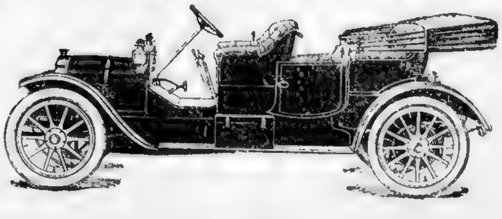
All Requirements Are Met by the Apperson.

[illegible] makes its initial [illegible] at the Boston Motor Show with [illegible]

Royal Tourist Line.

The Royal Tourist, handled in Boston by George J. Dunham Company, continues its practice of making only one chassis upon which are mounted different styles of bodies, the purchaser being given his choice of a touring car and an enclosed model, a close coupled car, a semi-racer and one of the torpedo pattern. The motor continues [illegible] of the four cylinder type developing 48.4 horsepower. The cylinders are cast in pairs integral with the waterjacket, the valves being placed on opposite sides. There is a longer hood on the new model, while a square dash has been adopted. There has been an improvement made in the carburetor, which is of the venturi tube type. Changes made in the motor have been the simplification in the ignition and lubrication systems and the abandonment of the self-starter, which was fitted to the first few models brought out a year ago. The Bosch ignition system has been adopted, and, as mentioned above, the lubrication system has been redesigned. The rear axle is of the floating type of construction, while the axle housing is a four-piece affair. Cork inserts have been introduced into the clutch, which also has a wider engagement spring, while heavy radius rods transmit the driving power. Four instead of five brakes are used, the contracting band brake acting on the transmission shaft in the rear of the gear box having been discontinued. In the frame the side members have been dropped in front of the rear axle.

THE WHITE GASOLINE CAR
A Year Ahead in Design



The design of the White Gasoline Car is at least a year in advance of any other American machine. Come and examine the chassis in our exhibit at the Mechanics Building and see the latest and best in gasoline car construction. Even if you are planning to buy a cheaper car than the White touring car or toy tonneau at $2,000, or a more expensive car than the White limousine at $3,600, an inspection of our exhibit will be of value to you, as you will see there the features which sooner or later will be adopted by other progressive makers.

The White Gasoline Car possesses all the desirable qualities to be found in other high grade cars, and in addition it has certain advantageous features which are not yet embodied in the others. Among these features are simplicity, accessibility and economy.

1.—SIMPLICITY. There are fewer parts to the White than to any other car. Nothing essential has been omitted; well thought out design has eliminated superfluous parts.
2.—ACCESSIBILITY. Any part can be reached without removing or disturbing any other part.
3.—ECONOMY. Low fuel consumption secured by the use of the "long stroke" engine, four-speed transmission and other refinements. Low cost of up-keep obtained because of simplicity and accessibility, and because the QUALITY of the materials and workmanship is the best ever put into a car of moderate price.

The White town cars are a revelation of luxury and refinement combined with moderate cost.

The Growing Popularity of the WHITE STEAM CAR

During the last eight months, from July 1st to date, we have made and delivered to customers more White Steamers than in the corresponding period of any previous year. The reasons—the White Steamer possesses many desirable qualities not found in any other type of car, and ten years of successful service have won for it the patronage of the most discriminating motorists.

See at the Mechanics Building the 20 horse-power and 40 horse-power White Steamers, which use either kerosene or gasoline as fuel.

Inter State

"40" At the Show

THE INTER-STATE Model 31 Demi Tonneau supplies a long felt want for a combined speed and pleasure car, having a carrying capacity of four passengers. In this model are embodied all the latest refinements of style, graceful lines, extra room and luxurious finish, but only those improvements which have been standardized and accepted as possessing exceptional merit. But after all the real seat of value is under the hood. We urge you to look at the hood of this INTER-STATE model and compare the motor and its connections, point by point, with those in any car you may have in mind as being your "ideal." You will find that in no detail will the INTER-STATE suffer by this comparison, even if you pick out those cars which sell at much higher price. Now start the motor and throttle down. If there is a choice in smooth running qualities it will without question be in favor of the INTER-STATE. If you will compare critically we are content. That is how you can know true motor car value and how you can personally know that you will be unwise to think of paying more for any car made.

Hartford Tires THE TIRE THAT LASTS

NO other type of non-skid tire possesses the efficiency which is the chief characteristic of the Hartford Wire Grip Non-Skid.

No other can be so efficient.

Because no other tire presents to the road, as does this, thousands of strong, sharp little claws.

The Hartford Wire Grip Non-Skid is not overweight, because the non-skid device is light, tough steel.

Its resiliency is not impaired a particle, because the non-skid device is flexible steel.

In short, the Hartford Wire Grip Non-Skid accomplishes every end which other types are designed to accomplish but cannot achieve because of various shortcomings.

A glance over the car shows a new design of radiator with longer tubes, longer filler and hard rubber cap, hard rubber steering wheel rim, longer spark and throttle levers on the steering column, increased brake leverage, carbureter primer on the dash, dual ignition, etc.

The self starter, which has been used for two years and which is generally familiar to motorists throughout the country, has been also retained. The Winton carbureter has a single nozzle and a double throttle, the latter operating in combination.

The Sensation of Motordom

The First Real Car for $1000

The Car With the Trouble Left Out

Model 38---30 H. P. Double Bucket Seat

You will see here the car which has captured the country—the most interesting car at the Show.

Two years ago almost nobody knew of this masterpiece of mechanism. Today our orders for this season's delivery amount to $24[illegible]

Four factories employing 4,000 men are turning out 125 Overlands daily to meet the demand for immediate delivery—now, in midwinter, with the snow on the ground.

All this has resulted from thousands of buyers telling thousands of others to order an Overland car.

You will see here the only real automobile sold for $1,000—a 25-horsepower car, with a 102-inch wheel base.

You will see here a 40-horsepower car, with a 112-inch wheel base, for $1,250. And the prices include five lamps and magneto.

You will be amazed to see what the Overland gives for the money. We have cut our costs 20 per cent. in the past year alone, through multiplied output and labor-saving machinery.

You will see a car of matchless simplicity. A car which a child can master. A car which a novice can drive a thousand miles and back without any trouble whatever.

You will see the pedal control. Push a pedal forward to go ahead and backward to reverse. Push another pedal forward to get on high speed. It is as simple as walking.

You will see a car so trouble-proof that many an owner has driven it thousands of miles without even cleaning a spark plug.

The Overland is the season's sensation. Around it is centered a pretty large share of the automobile demand of the country.

In the face of fierce rivalry—by the sheer force of merit—it has attained, in two years, the topmost place in motordom.

The most interesting sight at the Show—both to dealers and users—will be this car that became the king.

FORD CARS AT THE AUTOMOBILE SHOW

There's a Full line of Ford cars at the Automobile Show. You will find them in space 118-119 on the main aisle. Following the practice of former years we will also conduct open house at 147 Columbus avenue. Here we have plenty of room, every possible convenience, ample assistance and lots of time for every visitor. The entire Ford line is on exhibit at both places, and every facility offered for the careful investigation of it.

At either the private automobile show or the big show, to those not already acquainted with the Ford line, there are more real, genuine surprises in the Ford exhibits than you can begin to realize. Nor are we showing samples of picked cars. We have arranged matters so that if the cars appeal to you you can take a duplicate away with you.

At the big show and at the Ford show, too, the leading feature is the Model T touring car—a roomy, comfortable, durable, fine appearing family car which, with complete equipment and including the magneto, sells for $950.00. There will be nothing else in Boston this week at several hundred dollars of this price that even nearly approaches it in value.

There is a three-passenger Roadster and a four passenger Tourabout in both of which utility and fine appearance are combined to an unusual degree. The rear seat of either car can be removed, leaving considerable space for luggage or other load. That vacation trip or tour to be taken next summer can in no car be taken with more enjoyment and nearly as little expense as in this same light, low-priced Ford.

The two enclosed cars, the Coupe and the Town car, are real revelations of wonderful car values. The Coupe has been pronounced the finest enclosed car on the streets of Boston. The body is a composite design of the foremost body builders in the world. The neatest, niftiest, most useful Coupe imaginable, it is one of the features of all the cars in Boston this week. And the enclosed bodies are interchangeable with the open types. Buy an extra body and have two cars.

This is the time to buy and the Ford is the car you want. Buying now has this advantage—you are sure to get the car. The man who orders in the spring is apt to be one of several thousand who also waited, and he has to take his turn or buy the car that he did not expect to, but of which deliveries can always be made for reasons not particularly complimentary to the car. Anybody can order a car next spring. It is a wise man who buys now.

Bear this in mind, now is the time to buy for another reason. You did not get all of the bad weather of the winter last week. There are plenty of sloppy, wet and disagreeable days ahead before warm weather arrives. Buy a Ford to-day—a Coupe is a splendid proposition for this weather, and get real, genuine enjoyment out of your car in these months when every other method of travel is disagreeable and unhealthy. If you want a Roadster or Touring Car in the spring, $75.00 buys a Roadster Body or $125.00 pays for a Touring Car Body and a couple hours labor makes the change.

Most of us have a hankering, secret or otherwise, for an automobile. So have you. Then, why haven't you already bought? Is it because you feel you cannot afford the price? Perhaps two thousand dollars is beyond your means, or one and a half thousand, but why pay that much? Nine hundred and fifty dollars buys a completely equipped, roomy, powerful, durable, reliable, fine appearing, five-passenger Ford Touring Car. "Comparisons are odious;" but, nevertheless, a comparison of this low-priced Ford car with any of the many cars selling up to double the Ford price fails to reveal an equivalent difference in values. Visit our exhibits this week, and prove this for yourself. It may be that you cannot afford a higher price—the Ford price would be easy for you.

Be honest now, didn't you envy the Ford owner when you stood on the street corner in the snow those several days last week after having plodded along for several blocks knee deep and over, in wet, clinging snow, and he drove by in his Ford Coupe? He was warm and dry; you were wet and cold. He got to the office on time; you were late. His ride left him in good humor; you arrived out of temper, because of the slow, crowded, cold trolley car.

Of course you did and probably figured that you could not afford to go and do likewise. Lots of men are imbued with the idea that it takes a big bank account to buy a car and a fat salary to run it. Perhaps it does some cars. We have no very accurate figures on any but Ford Cars, but we know that $950.00 buys a five passenger Ford Touring Car completely equipped, and Ford dealers advertise to take care of them for from ten to fifteen dollars per month. So it is evident that the Ford is in a class by itself and that any man on an average income, two thousand dollars a year, for instance, can afford to own one, instead of envying his neighbor.

Does the upkeep cost bother you? It is a heavyweight car that makes a lightweight pocketbook. The cost to move any load varies almost in direct proportion with the weight of the load. The Ford because of its light weight costs less to keep than does a horse doing the same work, for the horse eats regularly whether you use him or not. If you can afford a horse you can afford a Ford. This car runs from twenty-five to thirty miles on a gallon of gasoline, will average over ten thousand per set of tires, and will cost but a nominal sum for repairs.

The Royal City Garage of Guelph, Ontario, contracts to keep Model T Ford Cars in gasoline, oil, carbide, tires, adjustments, and all repairs for one hundred and twenty-five dollars per five thousand miles. As five thousand miles is the average year's mileage for a car, this figures less than ten dollars and fifty cents a month—five thousand miles' travel by train at three cents a mile is one hundred and fifty dollars for only one person. It is far cheaper to ride in your own Ford Car than to travel by rail.

So don't forget the place or overlook the invitation—space 118-119 at the show, or 147 Columbus Ave. at either or both places, and the invitation is to you. If you already own a Ford come in and visit and find out about the 1910 improvements. If you do not now own a Ford come in just to investigate the line. There are surprises in plenty in store for each of you—perhaps it may mean a thousand dollars saved and a score of dollars every month afterwards.

The Agreeable Signal

The Gabriel Horn

The 1910 model has all the valuable features which have made our No. 2, 3 and 4 horns so popular, the only change being that the two lower notes are operated together making a perfect chord while the high note which is two octaves higher than bass chord gives the effect of a soprano voice with a quartette.

Trumpet Horn

Consists of four single tubes operated individually from keyboard for trumpet or bugle calls or operated in unison for signal purposes.

Special Ten Tube Horn

Has full octave in key of G, with F sharp and A. Operated by a keyboard and all sorts of melodies can be played upon it. Built to order.

1910 Valve

Like 1909 model except construction is changed so it forms practically one piece in strength clear through valve—lever is now made from ⅝ inch material. For cut-out purposes remove disc in main channel.

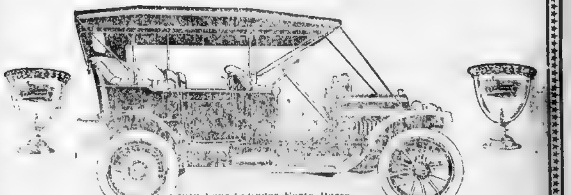
ALCO



1910 Four-cylinder Forty Horse-Power Touring Car.

A Lasting Luxury

The Car That Won the Vanderbilt Cup

was a regular stock model, same as you buy. It won because of STAYING POWER. It stayed after nearly all others had fallen by the wayside. At the finish it was running 72 miles an hour and was fit to go on indefinitely.

What lasts best is best, and in the end is cheapest.

New shaft-drive models at the show. New Alco truck in basement.

The ALCO special design of shaft-drive and full floating type of rear axle is the most interesting feature in 1910 construction.

It was a user who first said of the ALCO:

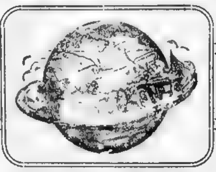
THOMAS

In the Automobile Business



These Words Are Synonymous

SUCCESS

That M[illegible] R. Thomas, since the beginning of automobiles, has achieved SUCCESS, the most casual student of automobile conditions must admit.

SUCCESS in the way of victory in contests—endurance—speed—economy.

SUCCESS in New York-Paris Race; the great prize for which cars of four nations had striven; proving SUCCESS in construction—a car endowed with the necessary qualities for long life and strenuous service.

SUCCESS in volume of business—the result of a successful car. This, the best year of [illegible] experience.

SUCCESS with his latest creations, the Model "R"—a limousine Town Car, and Model "M" a light six-cylinder "long stroke" motor car. These models are new to Boston. You are not familiar with them. They have exceptional qualities. Some of them incomparable.

SUCCESS in keeping Thomas owners satisfied--his best advertisement—better than this one.

SUCCESS in having [illegible] Thomas owners return after trying other cars—see our proof.

SUCCESS is yours with him if you are the purchaser of a 1910 Thomas car. You receive the results of ten successful years of automobile construction.

A demonstration is convincing. Expect much and you will not be disappointed. See or write us without delay: our allotment is limited.

Mitchell

Silent as the Foot of Time

WE beg to submit that so slowly has the automobile education of the people progressed that many still refer to any car under $3,000 as a "cheap car." They do so thoughtlessly and unknowingly. They have been in the habit of paying excess prices so long that it is inconceivable to them that a good car can be built for less. Yet a moment's thought will convince them of their error

Any automobile at $3,000 and over is high priced. Any pleasure vehicle for land use outside of a Pullman palace car is high priced at $3,000, and the higher the prices go the more expensive the luxury. As a matter of fact, prices on automobiles have been held up by the public itself simply because the public has bought right and left on the basis of appearance and say-so [illegible] without any regard to analysis of actual worth

About $20,000,000 of Mitchells are at present in operation. There are Thousands of satisfied Mitchell owners. Yet the Mitchell Motor Car Company has never asked over $2,000 for its highest priced car, and the car at that particular price happens to be a magnificent, classy six cylinder seven passenger automobile, and second to no car at any price.

Yet the materials used in the manufacture of the Mitchell are the very finest the world produces—the very same qualities that are used in the best of the $4,000, the $5,000 and even higher priced cars. Still, because we have not followed the lead of others and held our cars at more money than they are worth, our competitors are pleased to refer to the Mitchell as "a good cheap car." If that is the basis of figuring then the whole calculation of value must be revolutionized. Why, the Mitchell could be readily sold at twice its regular list prices, but what satisfaction would there be in that to the Mitchell-Lewis Motor Company? We know in our hearts that before 1910 is well along in history people will be offering premiums to secure a Mitchell, yet regardless of how great the premium may be, it will accomplish no more than the regular price, for we cannot possibly make more than 6,000 cars all told, and they were all sold to agents three months ago.

No car—no matter what its price—can be called cheap if the best materials in the world are used in its making—likewise the highest form of construction—the most artistic designs—the most finished finish. Because you ask—and can get—from $4,000 to $5,000 for a motor car, that is not proof that it is superior. Price proves nothing, but constant use, constant efficiency and constant [illegible] everything.

It is the constant use and the constant satisfaction that have proved the Mitchell, and because we have seen fit to improve upon our own handicraft without adding a penny to the prices, some of our esteemed competitors see therein evidence that [illegible] season's cars were not what they should have [illegible]. The man who doesn't improve stands still and goes backwards. We have gone steadily ahead and the year 1910 [illegible] such development that we could sell by wire in 18 hours five thousand more [illegible].

The 1910 Mitchell is [illegible] low cost, High-Class car. The lowering of the body [illegible] the body [illegible] the new [illegible] refine [illegible] radiator [illegible] hood design [illegible] and the silencing of the motor [illegible] excellence.

There is no car in the world that is classier or smarter than the Mitchell. It contains [illegible] of greatness that money can buy. The richest man on earth will be proud to own one, and the low cost of this high-class car is proof simply that this concern is building THE CAR YOU OUGHT TO HAVE AT THE PRICE YOU OUGHT TO PAY.

THE NEW Rambler

THE New Rambler, owing to its quiet ease of motion, reserve power and dignity of comfort, has deserved recognition as a car of character and quality.

For steady operation in crowded city traffic, on boulevard or country road, the New Rambler, because of the Offset Crank Shaft, is capable of three or sixty miles an hour on high speed, climbing any hill with gratifying ease.

With Straight-Line Drive, Spare Wheel, Big Wheels and Tires and New Expanding Clutch, its efficiency is quite in keeping with the quality found throughout its make-up.

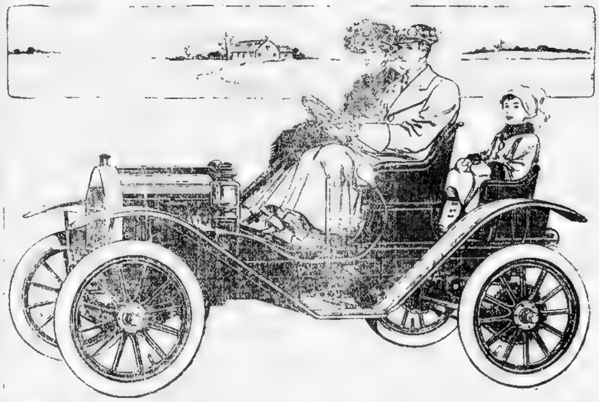
EVERYMAN'S CAR



THE BRUSH

$485.00

F. O. B. Factory

Rumble Seat and Tool Box $20 extra

Price low enough for every man
Quality high enough for any man

Think of it—$485.00 for the best built, most thoroughly proven, easiest-riding, most economical, handiest small automobile in the world!

A car that has just been awarded the highest prize in an endurance contest of 568 miles in open competition with 25 other cars selling all the way from $750 to $5,000.

A car that is always ready to go—and when you come right down to "brass tacks," when you investigate the design, material and workmanship of the Brush, you will find why it is always ready to go. The little troubles which are bound to develop in the ordinary automobile never appear in the Brush. There are no complicated parts to get out of order—nothing about it that every man cannot understand. That's why you see it on the road—not in the repair shop.

Investigate the Brush

First, you will find that it is not an imitation nor an adaptation of any other automobile—all other low-priced cars are. Many of them are mighty good pieces of machinery, but they have all the complicated parts of their big brothers. These parts are necessarily so small that they cannot stand the severe strains to which they are subjected. The more parts in any piece of machinery, the more trouble for the user.

In the Brush you will find a car so simple in design that all the parts can be made strong enough to stand as rough usage as any automobile in existence.

You will find the best of materials, each piece selected for the function it has to perform.

You will find the workmanship on the vital parts—the parts that mean the success or failure of an automobile—to be as good as on cars selling for ten times as much. Naturally, you will not find as much show, as much polish; but show and polish won't make the car run—and that's what interests the man who wants a car to use.

Don't understand by this that the Brush isn't well finished. In this respect it compares favorably with the high-priced cars, but we want to impress upon you especially the care we take with the parts that make the wheels go 'round.

When you are examining the Brush, notice how simple is the control mechanism and how easily the car is operated. One of our users recently said, "We have a touring car which we use a great deal, but we call the Brush our 'family car,' because all of us drive it. I believe it covered twice as many miles last year as our large car.

The owners of large cars are beginning to learn the wisdom of using a small car for runabout work. The economy and convenience of the Brush have appealed to many of them during the past year.

A Word About the Price

Don't get the idea that you are getting more automobile if you pay even $200 or $300 more for a big car cut down in size to sell at a comparatively low price. You will get more parts, 'tis true—also more trouble and expense.

Please remember that the Brush is the only car that is different from all others and still a proven success.

That's why you must not judge it by its price in comparison with other automobiles, but rather by what it has done and is doing every day for more than 3,000 users; judge it by the showing it has made in reliability and endurance contests; judge it by the practical, sensible features of its construction, and by its looks.

When we designed and built the first Brush, we were not aiming to make something that would sell because it was different and low in price; we were not faddist in any sense of the word; we were simply business men trying to solve a big problem which we knew would present itself.

We foresaw the demand for a car that would replace the "horse and buggy," just as the big touring car and limousine have replaced the team, the carriage and the coachman.

When the first Brush car appeared many of the wiseacres shook their heads. But regardless of what they said or did, we went ahead. Gradually people began to realize what a wonderful little car we had developed—and today the demand for Brush cars is enormous, as we knew it would be—and not a demand from any one territory—from any particular class, but from sane, thinking people in all parts of the world.

The Brush knows no class---recognizes no competition. It is the only logical successor to the horse and buggy---Everyman's Car.

CRACK DRIVERS OF THE EAST GO TO LOS ANGELES

Motordrome Races Next Month Will Present the Best Entries Obtainable.

LOS ANGELES, March 5.—More star entries were made this week for the inaugural meet of the Los Angeles Motordrome April 8-13 and 15-17. [illegible] Moscovics, vice president of the company building the new motordrome, [illegible] arrived in New York from the [illegible] Wednesday last, and in addition to [illegible] for the formal entry of Ralph De Palma's three cars, secured [illegible] entry in the amateur events [illegible] Fiat is eligible. Bragg, who is [illegible] amateur, has appeared [illegible] number of contests, his last performance being at the New Orleans Mardi Gras meet in February, where he won [illegible] race and made other creditable showings.

De Palma will drive [illegible] W. C. Arnold's big 200 h. p. [illegible] track champion will probably start in at least fifteen events. He will ship the "Cyclone" and the stock model to the coast next Monday, and after trying the big Arnold car [illegible] Oldfield at Dayton March 15, De Palma will make a flying trip to the coast with the giant racer.

George Robertson is arranging to appear with his new [illegible] entry of which is expected to be made within a day or two. James B. Ryall, who is in Los Angeles at present, is making a strenuous effort to secure a fast car for the meet, and there is a possibility of Bert Dingley and Joe Matson obtaining new [illegible].

Edward A. Hearne, the Chicago amateur, has entered the Fiat which he drove in the last Vanderbilt Cup race, and may have a Hudson for [illegible] events. THE HEIGHT OF AUTOMOBILE ART

ITS COMPETITIVE RECORD IN RACES IS REMARKABLE

It won the Atlanta Trophy, the most coveted prize of the year, and covered 200 miles without a stop in 173 minutes, an average speed of 70 miles an hour. In the 24-hour race at Brighton Beach, in which it finished third, it surpassed the record for 24 hours' continuous running, covering 1115 miles, and broke the former record for an hour's running, covering 57 miles. It made new records for 160 to 200 miles at Atlanta, finished second in two other 24-hour races at Brighton and second at Riverhead. It won twice at Atlanta and twice at Danbury. In no event has it failed to finish. This record was made by a 50 H. P. $1500 Rainier Stock Car.

RACINE'S BIG MEN BACK AUTO PLANT

Leaders in J. I. Case Thrashing Machine Co. Reorganize the Pierce-Racine Concern.

There were [illegible] of the [illegible] Racine, Wis., in which Pierce-Racine [illegible] had been [illegible] doubted merit when the psychological hour arrived for [illegible] to enter the industry and exploit the wares that needed the [illegible] of money.

One of the backbone industries of that Wisconsin city for [illegible] years has been the J. I. Case Thrashing Machine Company. The big men of this industry were well acquainted with the Pierce-Racine foundry [illegible] and its output and had scrutinized the motors and cars with the exhaustive critical insight of an organization provided with [illegible] of [illegible] experts [illegible] of a great motor [illegible] for capital and assistant in the reorganization of the Pierce-Racine [illegible].

Accordingly [illegible] 1910 C. L. McIntosh and Frederick Robinson, who were administration wizards [illegible] of the J. I. Case company [illegible] the reorganized Pierce-Racine interests and exploit with [illegible] great thrashing machine company [illegible] motor product [illegible] was only waiting to markets of the far off cities of the country to become as famous as it was in the town of Racine.

James G. Cowing, who had grown to [illegible] invaluable [illegible] the thrashing machine company [illegible] lieutenant of the administration whose skill kept the laboratory passing upon such products as were needed for the works without permitting a single slip in judgment, was placed in charge of the Pierce Motor Company as general manager. C. J. McIntosh, who was assistant treasurer of the "P. M. Co.," and a trained mechanical expert from the Boston Tech School, accepted the position of treasurer, and John Peebles, who for years was mechanical superintendent of the J. I. Case Thrashing Machine Company, in which position he created the organization which developed the mammoth production of the successful concern, was made secretary. A. J. Pierce, veteran engineer and builder of the Pierce-Racine motors, became the general superintendent.

GOODYEAR RIMS.

Is a Particular Feature in the Local Auto Show.

One of the features in the tire exhibits this year at the show and which no doubt will prove to be one of the centers of attraction, will be the Goodyear-Doolittle rim. This is a rim which successfully combines both the quick demountable and quick detachable features.

"We did not go into the demountable rim proposition in a hurry," says George M. Stadelman, secretary of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company. "We realized that there was a distinct demand for a demountable rim [illegible] less cumbersome [illegible] other ways [illegible] advantageous [illegible]

"But we [illegible] realize that the ordinary demountable rim has the same disadvantage as the spare wheel [illegible] that in case of a second puncture the owner is just as badly off as if he had no spare wheel or demountable rim on his car.

"We knew that there was only one way to overcome this difficulty and that was to secure a demountable rim which combined also a quick detachable feature. We are proud to say that we have this now [illegible]

COMMERCIAL VEHICLE RAPIDLY COMING USEFUL

Conservative Boston Men Are Adopting Truck Motors for Use in Their Business.

By H. S. FIRESTONE.

The outlook for motor-driven commercial vehicles this year is better than we have ever seen it. We may [illegible] to expect such [illegible] phenomenal growth in the commercial department of the auto as we have witnessed in the [illegible] and its popularity is growing by leaps and bounds for all that [illegible] the present will [illegible] a banner year. We are able to say that positively from the [illegible] larger number of orders for tires [illegible] months.

This means nothing [illegible] a correspondingly large number of new [illegible] for makers never [illegible] that just the number demanded by their season's output.

Boston, although more conservative than some other cities in the adoption of commercial motor vehicles, is steadily coming to the front and now has between 150 and 175.

There is one point that is always learned by a motor truck owner sooner [illegible] or later, and that is [illegible] keep your truck [illegible] An idle truck is a liability, whether put out of commission by [illegible] or wear of the tires [illegible] breakdown. Our [illegible] for years has had for [illegible] along these lines and we have finally perfected a device that will keep the truck in commission no matter what [illegible] may happen to [illegible]

By means of [illegible] a driver who has tire trouble can change tires right on the spot [illegible] removing the channel from the wheel and substituting another [illegible] a fresh tire. It is the new Firestone truck tire demountable [illegible] A second device of the same kind [illegible] pneumatic tire and demountable rim for use on high-speed [illegible] The rim [illegible] same principles as the Firestone [illegible] rim for pleasure cars, [illegible] mounted on the same wheel [illegible]

These [illegible] entirely new [illegible] commercial vehicle [illegible] but are destined to come into general use before long, as they effect a much needed economy in the operating cost.

ROAD INFORMATION FOR AUTO TOURISTS

When the 1910 automobile touring season opens, the interstate tourist will find himself much better provided for [illegible] road information than ever before. The Bureau of Tours of the Automobile Club of America, of which General George Moore Smith is chairman, has been [illegible] during the past Winter [illegible] of the scope of the work of the Touring Bureau to cover every State in the Union. The A. C. A. has also perfected [illegible] by which a motorist can join the A. C. A. as a "Tourist Member," and enjoy all the facilities and advantages of the [illegible] of a yearly membership fee of $10. The motorist can thus obtain for a nominal sum all the touring information [illegible] maps and guides he desires, and [illegible] the new arrangement which the A. C. A. has made with several of the [illegible] automobile clubs throughout [illegible] tourist member [illegible] privileges [illegible] of automobile clubs where he [illegible] his travels and receive detailed [illegible] touring information and the [illegible] privileges of each of the clubs.

For several years such a scheme for taking care of the [illegible] tourist has been discussed among [illegible] automobile clubs [illegible] A. C. A. [illegible] national touring [illegible] country [illegible] agreed to cooperate.

Through [illegible] efforts, and the efforts of these affiliating clubs, the A. C. A. has prepared [illegible] for distribution, a compilation of all the [illegible] routes in [illegible] of the States [illegible] also [illegible] enlarged its department of foreign touring [illegible] can [illegible] in a few moments at the A. C. A. everything they could wish to know about a foreign trip before sailing for the other side.

COMMERCIAL MOTOR APPEALS TO MANY

Boston Merchants Using Horses Invited to Examine Rapid Motor Vehicle.

This year the Boston Automobile Show contains some features [illegible] special interest to the New England business men, using or owning horses and wagons.

The largest commercial motor car manufacturers, the Rapid Motor Vehicle Company, Pontiac, Mich., has just completed a nation wide investigation of delivery service problems and their solution.

At the Rapid exhibit at the Boston Automobile Show carefully compiled figures are at the disposal of business men interested in improving their delivery service [illegible] a reduction in cost. These figures are taken from the books of horse owning [illegible] of every part of the United States. They represent [illegible] experiences under all kinds of conditions.

C. B. Butler, president of the Butler Motor Car Company of Boston, said last night: "I have known for some time that the Rapid Motor Vehicle Company was endeavoring to compare [illegible] that would show exactly what it is costing to operate horses and wagons [illegible] the various [illegible] However [illegible] it shows not only [illegible] cost of [illegible] shows [illegible] work with [illegible] motor wagons.

"The Rapid Company [illegible] itself in Boston [illegible] by sending [illegible] the largest exhibit ever shown at home or abroad by any automobile manufacturer. Trucks, delivery wagons, a beautiful [illegible] big [illegible] passenger sightseeing coach [illegible] to present [illegible] interesting exhibit at the Automobile Show."

J. P. Myers, sales manager of the Rapid Motor Vehicle Company, arrived in Boston last night and expressed himself as being delighted with New England [illegible]

"[illegible] opportunity of [illegible] the Boston show [illegible] America for the successful operation of motor driven delivery wagons [illegible] examples of Eastern [illegible] the adoption of service [illegible] equipment [illegible] traffic [illegible] suburban districts [illegible] demand for quick [illegible] service [illegible] that give Boston [illegible] advantage over most other [illegible]

"We have taken [illegible] to prepare [illegible] business men visiting the Boston Automobile Show."

Proud of Showing.

The commercial [illegible] are particularly proud of the showing made by that branch of the industry at the show, there being over eighty [illegible] of commercial wagons in the building. The Boston business men will naturally be interested in the work [illegible] these cars and [illegible]

Cars in Use.

[illegible] of demonstration cars will be fully as extensive as [illegible] the plan [illegible] dealer [illegible] has made special arrangements for the demonstrating of his cars, the result being that something like 200 motor vehicles will be [illegible] during the days of the show.

KING BARNEY OLDFIELD BACK IN FORM

forever and in the auto racing game a burst tire or a patch of dust in the eye may write "finis" at the end of the driver's record.

Oldfield doesn't risk his neck because he likes to see how close he can shave the [illegible] side rail. Nothing like that. Barney is as fond of life as most men of his age. Perhaps a little more so, because he has had a good time during his present incarnation. He drives a racing car because he knows there isn't another thing on earth at which he can make so much money. Probably he has made more money out of the auto racing game than any three men who can be [illegible]

Always a Money Getter.

[illegible] while other men were caring for [illegible] championship records, Barney was a premier money getter. People go to see him [illegible] has gone through the fence many times and messed up several innocent spectators, and a man who has that sort of habit is likely to furnish [illegible]

They go to see Oldfield for the same reason that they watch the parachute leap of [illegible] man who went up in a hot air balloon. [illegible] all right the parachute [illegible] be worth 50 cents.

In his new 200 horsepower car Barney will [illegible] furnish some new thrills, and if he [illegible] to wear this car out he will probably get another one of 250 horsepower, and so on.

But if anything happens to Barney they will place on his tombstone a short sentence which will explain matters thoroughly:

"Barney Oldfield—HE WAS GOING SOME."

And it will be [illegible] poor comfort to Barney's friends to know that he was setting a new record when he cut [illegible]

RAPID FIVE-TON TRUCKS.

"Built For Business."

The Rapid Motor Wagon exhibit at the Boston Automobile Show is the largest ever shown in America or abroad by any automobile manufacturer. It is worth $52,000.00.

Trucks, delivery wagons, sight seeing coaches, ambulances and used cars (one of them having a record of five years' continuous delivery service), are shown.

Every user of two or more horse drawn wagons, upon request, will be furnished free of charge, a detailed statement showing just what may be done in their business by Rapid motor wagons.

These figures are based on the actual experiences of Rapid users in 52 lines of business.

Many of these users live in New England, the others are scattered all over the world.

Your business is represented in this list.

Three delivery system experts are in constant attendance at the Rapid exhibit. (In the basement of Mechanics Building directly under the main hall stage). To the business man, we extend a cordial invitation to call and derive the benefit of our ten years' experience improving delivery service and cutting down expenses.

Note Over-size
Rim cutting certain unless tire is kept pumped up.
Beaded Hook "freezes" tight in this pocket.
Round Rim, makes rim cutting impossible.
Wires contract with inflation, avoiding creeping.
Feet almost meet.
Feet wide apart.

The Straight Side Tire has so many advantages over the Clincher type that Goodyear Detachable Automobile Tires have steadily forged ahead on MERIT ALONE. 44 Automobile Manufacturers have contracted for Goodyear Tires to be used on their 1910 cars. Below is briefly stated a few of the exclusive advantages of

GOODYEAR TIRES

They will not creep or come off the rim in use, even though the tire be ridden absolutely flat. No tire bolts are needed. Ask how our patented Piano Wire Tape overcomes this. Hooked foot or Clincher type tires, even when held in place with several bolts, come off in use, sometimes causing fatal accidents.

Goodyear Straight Side Tires will not rim cut. The broad, rounding rim surface, possible only with the Straight Side Tire, does away with all sharp edges. Note the half section on the left. See the sharp edge of the rim flange. Remember, the entire load is carried on these edges, and unless such a tire is fully inflated it is very apt to rim cut.

The straight side construction of Goodyear Tires allows us to make them larger than any other tire sold for the same size. Each Goodyear Detachable (Straight Side) Tire is larger than its rating. So in Goodyear Tires you get Extra Size plus Extra Quality.

Goodyear Straight Side Tires are easily removed and replaced. The large space between the toes (or feet) allows one to push the side walls in easily and unlock the detachable rim without trouble.

In Hooked-foot or Clincher Tires the bead binds and often must be pried loose. When the toes touch in the center (as a precaution against coming off) it is a big job both to loosen a Clincher Tire and to unlock the detachable rim when it IS loosened.

At our exhibit at the automobile show we are showing the full Goodyear line. We are also demonstrating the famous Goodyear-Doolittle Demountable, Detachable Rim—the rim that makes a tire change in less than three minutes.

If you would save time, tires and trouble, meet us at the show or send for full information.

"The large number of manufacturers who have been [illegible] to produce automobile parts promises to be materially increased by the announcement of the automobile builders that they are unable to secure [illegible] to make the output planned [illegible]," says General Manager F. L. Holmes of the Jackson Automobile Company of Jackson, Mich. [illegible]

At the present time the successful automobile part brings a handsome profit to the [illegible], but, as with every other business, the time will come when competition will bring it down to normal basis, with [illegible] [illegible]

Going to Wait and See This, That and the Other Motor Car

That is what you frequently hear a prospective purchaser say.

Now let us suppose just for a moment that you saw something decidedly attractive to you in a car which had been recently placed on the market (say, within a year or two) and seemed to be great value for your money. Would you then pay $1,000, $1,400, $1,750 for a machine built by a manufacturer who had not gone through the experimental stage, or who had not learned by actual experience how to build a perfect car?

The most important question to-day to the prospective purchaser is, or should be, "The House Behind the Product," whether or not they are going to remain in business and are thoroughly responsible, also, whether or not they live up to their guarantee in a broad sense.

It is an everyday occurrence with us to have people drop into our store who had made mistakes of purchasing an unknown car in 1908 or 1909 and ask what we will allow them for their [illegible] on a Buick. Many of them frequently say that they have been very much disappointed, the car they bought was not as represented, the agent did not live up to his guarantee, they had constant trouble, the dealer had no parts on hand or other facilities to care for them. Others did not tell us of their troubles, simply were willing to stand them and charge the loss up to experience.

It is [illegible] their unknown cars [illegible] as much money [illegible] inferior [illegible] car as a Buick would bring, even though their automobile cost them the same price as a Buick, or possibly several hundred dollars more. It is a very easy matter for the reader to see how impossible it is for unknown, untried cars to bring the same standard price in the second-hand market that the Buick product would sell for, when you consider that we are thoroughly established, having branches in all the principal cities throughout the United States, and have built up a tremendous business of 50,000 cars in 1910 from an output in 1904 of 18 cars.

The Buick company do but little advertising, as you undoubtedly know. Their [illegible] standard of [illegible], power, finish and workmanship are responsible for the "bed rock" foundation of our enormous growth. In fact, we are the largest builders of motor cars in the United States, which should cause you to dismiss from your mind any other car in which you thought you would be interested. In doing this you will safeguard yourself against making a serious error and suffering the loss of depreciation that many purchasers of other cars have experienced in the past.

Spaces 137-141 will contain a complete line of Buick cars, as well as a $50,000 trophy exhibit.

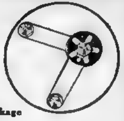
The Economy of It



The Possibility of Spring Breakage is Removed when the

Truffault-Hartford Shock Absorber IS PUT ON A CAR

The ravages of vibration, the racking it causes every bolt, nut and part, ceases.

In actual figures the use of the Truffault-Hartford decreases depreciation through wear and tear, 50 per cent.

That's the economy of it. It is a matter of dollars and cents to have your car Truffault-Hartford equipped.

If you cannot have a set put on at the factory, have it done at the garage.

The motorist who looks to comfort and economy must realize the absolute necessity of having his car Truffault-Hartford equipped.

A car that is jarred is necessarily racked, and constant racking means a quick finish.

The Truffault-Hartford Shock Absorber absorbs the jolt, it absorbs the vibration, it nullifies the discomfort to the car's passengers.

Its use makes the car run smoother, last longer.

It saves your feelings, it saves your pocketbook.

Casgrain SPEEDOMETER

Operates in an Oil Bath

Don't fail to see the Casgrain at the Show—Space 412 Gallery. We'll be there—prepared to show you a really efficient, reliable and accurate Speedometer.

The Casgrain is original. Every individual mile is shown by large, clear figures—28 inches of them all told. Every instrument is tested individually, on a special electrical apparatus. Every figure is placed on the dial, BY HAND, during this electrical test.

The Casgrain is absolutely accurate—we not only say it is, but we guarantee it. Jars and jolts won't affect it—and wear won't alter it. We guarantee that, too. What is more, we'll repair or replace any defective material or workmanship AT ANY TIME.

Be sure to see and have the Casgrain Speedometer demonstrated—its simplicity and originality will convince you.

E-M-F THIRTY 30 STARS OF THE SHOW FLANDERS TWENTY 20

These Popular Cars Are Exhibited in Stripped Chassis and Various Types of Bodies in Boston This Week.

E-M-F "30"---MOST TALKED-OF CAR IN THE WORLD.

NO OTHER AUTOMOBILE IN THE WORLD enjoys such a widespread reputation E-M-F "30." We appreciate the scope of that sentence and we realize also that some judicious readers will consider it just a trifle on the side of exaggeration. Yet we make the assertion, confident that any who cares to investigate, to inquire, will find it is unassailable.

THERE IS AN EXCELLENT reason for that reputation. There must be a good, sound reason back of it when any product gains a world-wide reputation in two years. And in this case that reason is not far to seek.

NOT ALWAYS DO RIVALS PROMOTE the success of that which they would, and if they could, destroy. But E-M-F "30" has enjoyed that unique distinction.

WHEN THIS CAR WAS FIRST ANNOUNCED—that was two years ago—the claims of its makers were so seemingly impossible of fulfillment that makers of other cars which were to suffer by the competition, fell upon it en masse. And in their zeal they succeeded, not in turning prospective buyers away from E-M-F "30," but rather did they create greater interest in this car than it might otherwise have commanded.

OF COURSE THERE WERE OTHER REASONS besides the mere specifications and price which set rivals by the ears. Other cars had been touted as wonders-—had come, lived their little day and passed on into oblivion.

BACK OF THIS CAR were reputations—many men of national reputation, brains, experience, engineering skill; and lastly, there were back of the giant project, not one, but several men of such financial standing any one of them could buy and sell several of the factories which were to meet this car in competition.

LET A CLAIM BE MADE—or a promise—by unknown, irresponsible persons and the world may listen to the tale—if it be not too long—and then pass on its way. But here were man who could not afford to lend their names to any statement of questionable accuracy—and these men promised a car at $1,250 which should surpass in mechanical excellence and equal in luxurious appointments, any car then selling for $2,500 or less.

WE NEED NOT TELL YOU how well that promise has been fulfilled. Twelve thousand E-M-F "30" cars today on the roads in the hands of owners—and every one boosting—tell more convincingly than any words of ours, how full to overflowing was the measure of promise fulfilled by the E-M-F Company.

WE ARE TALKING OF TWO YEARS AGO—seems but yesterday that this car came and revolutionized the automobile industry—set a new standard of values—and incurred the bitter enmity of every rival.

MORE RECENT HISTORY, however, did space permit its recital here, would be one of the most remarkable stories ever printed. You who read the daily press are familiar with it. That is to say, you know as much as has been printed. The whole story never will be told. Would that it could—it would show wherein this car surpassed every other car on the market and why thousands and thousands of dollars were spent, like water, in efforts to control the rights to sell this car and its younger brother, Flanders "20."

NOW THEY DON'T QUARREL OVER THINGS of little consequence. They don't fight to sell cars that are hard to sell or that can be equalled by other cars more easily gotten. E-M-F "30" is known in the trade as the "car that sells itself"-which is to say, it is the one car that the intelligent, well-informed buyer, after looking them all over, finally chooses.

65 CARS EVERY WORKING DAY is the output of the mammoth E-M-F plant No. 1 at this time. Yet now, as always, the factory is several hundred cars behind orders. Think what that means. Figure it out in dollars—in annual volume of business. It is astounding. Yet the reputation of this car is such—present owners boost it so enthusiastically—customers are always waiting at the gate, as it were, for their cars to come out.

NOW YOU CAN'T FOOL 12,000 PEOPLE. Remember they are business men who made their money by their own good sense—else they couldn't own an automobile at all. Remember also that before buying any car the average man interviews every friend he has who owns a car. And a satisfied owner is the best salesman. These are they who have contributed most to the unparalleled success of E-M-F "30."

HERE'S GOOD ADVICE FOR YOU. Look them all over. Examine closely details of design. And particularly investigate quality of materials. Remember, malleable castings have no place in a motor car. Steel drop forgings, stamped, pressed, and drawn steel parts make E-M-F "30" superior to every other car selling at anywhere near the price.

COMPARE OTHERS POINT FOR POINT with E M F "30." After you have satisfied yourself as to the relative values of the cars themselves, then make that more important investigation into the standing and integrity of the concern back of each. Make sure—don't accept the word of a mere salesman who may not know, and if he does won't tell—whether or not the car you are thinking of buying is in any respect an "assembled" car. If it is, then you are paying two profits on it—one to the parts maker, another to the "manufacturer" you buy from.

AND IF IT SELLS FOR THE SAME PRICE as E M F or anywhere near it, and is an assembled car, then certainly the quality cannot, by any possibility, be as good. That stands to reason. Only one concern makes any profit on E M-F "30" and that is a small profit per car, multiplied by the tremendous quantities produced.

WE INVITE THAT INVESTIGATION because, if you delve deep enough you will find that only one concern in the world can say and prove it—that, from the raw material to the finished car, every part is made by the one concern, in its own factories. And that one concern is the E M F Company of Detroit, Michigan.

WE ARE SHOWING A STRIPPED CHASSIS of this car in the local automobile show. Not only that, but we have a large exhibit of important parts, such as motor, crank-shaft, cam shaft, gears, cylinders, pistons, axles and other parts that, being enclosed in the assembled car, you could not otherwise examine. We want you to examine these closely. If you have engineer friends, ask them to inspect them and give you their opinion.

YOU WILL SELL YOURSELF A CAR then and it will be an E M F "30"—without any more advice or asistance from us. Glad to meet you at our exhibit. Won't importune you to buy—our only worry is to get enough of them but we will answer, courteously and directly, any questions you may choose to ask as to the car or the company back of it

JUST A WORD ABOUT FLANDERS "20"

"WILL THE MARKET ABSORB 25,000 cars of a business-runabout type?" was a question I propounded to some of my associates one day. We were discussing the project of designing a car of quality such as, up to that time, could be found only in cars selling at prices which were prohibitive for business service—where a car must not only earn its keep, but show an economy, said Mr. Flanders in explaining how it came about that a car like Flanders "20" was determined upon and the price set at $750, leaving a smaller margin on this car than other manufacturers consider safe

"I CAN MAKE SUCH A CAR FOR $750 if we can feel sure the market will absorb not less than 25,000 cars the first year. But in order to obtain that price, and put the best possible quality into every part, I must distribute the 'overhead' over that number of cars at least."

"IF YOU CAN SELL SUCH A CAR AT THAT PRICE, then it is certain there will be a market for them," replied one of the directors. Now, there is the history of Flanders "20" in a nutshell. Of course, we spent, not merely hours, but months, in discussions of various features of the proposed car and angles of the proposition. But the brief discussion quoted above tells the story.

YOU SEE IT IS AS SIMPLE AS A CIRCLE—and as complete. The price and quality creates the demand—that is to say, a car of such matchless quality at such a low price opens up a tremendous market among business and professional men in all walks. Certain of the market, we can manufacture in tremendous quantities, applying machinery and methods otherwise impossible. And quantity production in turn makes the price possible.

AND WE HAVE NOW A MONOPOLY of that particular branch of the automobile business, for no concern can possibly equal the quality of Flanders "20" at the price without first installing an equipment costing not less than $2,000,000, manufacturing every part from the pig iron to the completed car. And even then they would have to have experience and an organization equal to ours, of which the greatest financier in this country recently said: "The E-M F organization is the most perfect commercial fighting machine I have ever known." Business is warfare, you know—friendly, but warfare just the same.

Flanders "20," like its older brother, E M-F "30," is the product of that great commercial machine—product of the brightest brains, the ripest experience, the best engineering skill. In short, you get, when you buy one of these cars, the combined knowledge of the greatest organization of experts—master minds all ever gotten together in this industry.

Manufactured From the Raw Material to the Last Detail of Finished Product, by The E-M-F Company, Detroit, Mich. Licensed Under Selden Patent.

TRY ONCE AGAIN

Until you've gone your fullest length,
How can you calculate your strength?
An early failure's just a heat—
A trial—a test but no defeat,
Youth is the Chrysalis of men.
Wait for your full-winged power, then
If you fall when you strive to soar
Try once again and then once more;
While you are still above the ground,
While brain and brawn and pluck are sound,
Unless you own it, you're not downed;
Depth's not confined to wells alone;
Some men don't come into their own
Until the Autumn time of life.
You may be forced to pass through strife,
To battle hard and battle long,
To smart beneath setback and wrong,
Before you hear Success' song.

The Envious Man

By Herbert Kaufman

—[Copyright, 1910, by Herbert Kaufman

He's simply a failure without the courage to own up that he weakened and quailed under the test of contest. He wants things, but won't wait and endure the trials through which they are attained.

Somewhere, some time, he had his full share of chance and didn't qualify. He's a rusty pot criticising active kettles.

He grants no one credit for a bigness beyond his own. He narrows all art, all application, all cleverness, down to his personal and puny measure—he will not acknowledge that there can exist an effort so honorable that it must always find its just and fair reward.

He won't urge his half-sized brain into expansion—he won't direct his mind to creation—he's a wrecker, not a builder—constantly smarting under the success of others—always seeking to smirch and destroy and detract.

He's chronically mad with jealousy—green-blooded—his veins are poisoned with the venom of bitterness.

No possession can bring him pleasure—whatever he gains is too little, because less than all of everything means that some one else has something.

Underlying all his miserable, jaundiced disposition is a pitiable greed—were he Lord of the Earth, he would writhe in misery because the stars were not thrown in for a premium.

He is not capable of friendship—friendship is a wholesome thing—it encourages—it gives—it sympathizes—it enthuses—it shares.

He neither pays respect to stability nor homage to genius—he ridicules earnestness—discounts merit—jeers at knowledge and smears his nasty sneers on brilliant achievement.

There's a lens missing in his moral vision—a flaw which is blind to see the good in anything. He's wrong—the unhappiest of all mortals and the cause of unhappiness to all.

His tongue stings with slander and gossip. He hurls his verbal bricks at innocent men who have never crossed his path or known his name or placed a single obstacle in his way.

He has never lifted his head in a song of praise. He does not understand the meaning of Progress.

He blames the hewer of trees for wasting a few chips while the rest of mankind is praising him for felling a huge oak. He points to the spoiled and rejected parts on the inventor's floor when the rest of us are extolling a tenacity which, in the face of every setback, finally achieved the working model.

He's a malignant microbe whose presence infects cheer and discourages enthusiasm. He's one of the pests of the earth, whose only possible value to humanity is the opportunity he gives a real man for contrast.

HAGERTY'S $1000. WILL BACK THE PURITY OF THIS MINUTE-MAN STRAIGHT WHISKEY.

FULL HONEST QUART

MINUTE MAN WHISKEY

We all know that food stuffs not properly matured are not fit to eat. You would not eat half ripened fruit or vegetables. Why should you drink whiskey not properly matured? It takes at least four years to mature whiskey. All our whiskeys are matured in charred oak barrels and stored in a bonded warehouse under the supervision of the United States government for a period of not less than four, five and six years.

Straight Whiskey properly matured is what reputable physicians order for medicinal purposes.

ABSOLUTELY STRAIGHT LIQUORS.

Hagerty's Private Stock Whiskey, 5 years old, Rye or Bourbon, $1.00 qt., $4.00 gal., $11.00 doz.

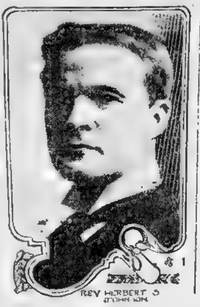
WHAT "THE STARVATION LINE" ACTUALLY MEANS TO WOMEN OF BOSTON



REV HERBERT S JOHNSON

Low Wages Driving Girls to Destruction, Declares Rev. Herbert S. Johnson; They Cannot Be Good on $5 Week

Even Though They Fall, He Believes They Will Reach Heaven More Easily Than Class Responsible for Wages

Less Chance in Other World for Rich Woman Who Gives to Church $100,000 Made by Forcing Others to Go Astray

HALF the working women of Boston live—or half-live, rather, "on the starvation line!" It is a constant fight for life, for honor. Comfort there cannot be. Happiness is beyond reach. It is semi-starvation or—a life that they are forced to live no matter how repugnant it is.

The cause of this lamentable condition, declared the Rev. Herbert S. Johnson, who has given the subject deep, conscientious study, is the low wages paid. Three-fourths of the girls who walk the streets, declares the clergyman, are driven there by insufficient pay.

"A girl cannot be good on the average wages paid in this city," he asserts. "The lowest wages that should be paid a girl who supports herself is $9 a week."

In a remarkable interview with an American reporter Dr. Johnson tells how "the other half" of Boston Women live, including the pathetic story of a girl who battles with life on $5 a week.

"I believe," said the energetic young clergyman, who is pastor of the Warren Avenue Baptist Church, "that a street walker made so by low wages will pass through the gates of heaven more easily than a rich Christian woman contributing $100,000 a year to the support of a church, a large part of which has been in dividends that have been produced by the under pay of the poor."

DRIVEN TO DESPERATION BY POVERTY.

"There are hundreds of young women starving in Boston and other places, not able to live decently, not able to enjoy life, because they are constantly harrowed by the fear of debt. And the reason why they are starving is easy to find; it is not something deeply buried in the mysteries of life," said the Rev. Mr. Johnson. "These women will continue to starve as long as the wages of women remain where they are. To expect a young woman to keep in any way respectable upon five dollars a week, or six dollars, or seven dollars a week, or even eight dollars, is wrong. Eight dollars a week is better than five dollars, and how few women get this amount? Why, you would be surprised to know how small are the wages of women in this city; and as long as they are small, they will continue to sin, and you make them sin, you drive them into that condition where they are craving for good food, and where they want something decent to wear, for a woman sees other women dressing well and naturally wants to get something new herself, and in a moment of thoughtlessness she is driven to do wrong because she lacks the sheer necessities of life.

"Coerced to be bad, coerced to forget her honor, coerced to sell herself, because the commercial spirit of this age will not give her more to live upon, and there are many persons who think that a woman because she is a woman, can live upon a little, and like to keep her living upon a little because of this.

"For eleven years I have watched this matter. I see every week many women, and hear their tale of woe. These women are respectable and their struggles to meet their expenses are heart-rending.

"Only last week there came to my notice a young woman, who was suddenly thrown out of employment, and had some trouble with her eyesight. All alone in this city, without friends, without enough to eat, she came to me and told a most pathetic story, how some days she had very little to eat, and could not afford to see an oculist.

Helping Hand Needed.

"Think, what such a condition as this will drive any one to do? I at once got an oculist to aid her, and here I want to say that the physicians and oculists of Boston are very kind and considerate of these young women, who need medical advice. I have known of a number of cases where their good services have been given, and I appreciate them.

"Now this woman might have been driven to worse things than starvation, had not some one come to her rescue. It is the helping hand and the will of kind women, which is doing much to keep these poorly paid women respectable. But what put this woman where she was? What brought her down? Not any lack of ability in herself. While she worked she could not save anything, her wages were so small, and when out of employment, she felt herself sinking more than ever into debt.

"When a woman gets into this condition she is likely to be tempted. Some man comes along and gives her food in some restaurant; better food than she has had for some time. Things of this type are very tempting to a poorly fed, young girl.

"But who is to blame for her fall?

"I ask this in all sincerity.

"I have helped many a woman over a difficulty, and the stories which I have heard prove to me, beyond any question, that nearly three-fourths of teh women, driven to an objectionable life, may be traced in the beginning to low wages.

Must Have $9 a Week.

"I am now prepared to say that I believe that the lowest wages to be paid a woman should be nine dollars a week. To expect a woman to live upon less than this is to put them into temptation. I am also prepared o say that if we wish to improve the condition of women in Boston, and to give them encouragement to be pure and noble, we must use our influence to denounce this method of conducting business, which will allow it to grow and prosper, because it does it at the expense of making girls sin.

"Now, I asked a girl a short time ago how she managed to live upon five dollars a week. Here is her story: She had for her breakfast many a morning macaroni, milk and water, which cost her a little more than one cent. Then for luncheon, she generally had soup, and in the evening for dinner, some cooked meat, which she and her roommate had bought. Sometimes, but not often, she had chowder, or lamb stew. Her meals would not cost her more than thirty cents a day oftentimes.

"They were not sufficient to appease her hunger. Yet what with the aid of this other girl, who roomed with her, she managed to eke out a sort of existence. She bought one suit and made it do for two years, and then made another skirt out of some cheap material to change with. She would often make shirtwaists for other girls, charging for this work fifty cents. Her shoes cost her four dollars, for two pairs a year.

"This girl fought for years for a living. She could only get five dollars a week, and all that she could afford to pay for a suit for two years was fourteen dollars and fifty cents.

"Now there are hundreds of girls who are doing this same thing to-day right here in this city. They are starving upon such a wage. I repeat it, that they do not get enough to live. They can never get a good square meal in the way they are living. Some of them are cooped up in a small bedroom, and trying to cook upon a gas stove in a very [illegible] style, and then buying cooked meat to make a dinner out of it. They cannot go anywhere simply because they haven't the clothes. A young girl has pride, and she wants to look decent.

"After careful looking into the condition of the young women who are working in this city, I am persuaded, that we cannot expect a young woman to keep her purity upon the average wages that are being paid.

Easy to Fall in Boston.

"It is so easy for a woman to fall in this city. More women to-day are falling here. I think that you will find that the White Slave traffic is not decreasing in this city. How could it? All that you have to do is to board a car in this city and keep your eyes open and you will often mark transactions which reveal much.

"This may be an awful thing to say, but it is too true to be denied. We must awaken to the importance of this crisis. It is absolutely necessary to keep our young women pure.

"Many of them in the city are living heroic lives. [illegible] living upon these starvation wages and maintaining their purity, and alas there are others who have starved long [illegible] and fallen. They are condemned by those who made this state possible. I do not condone their sin. I do not justify it in any sense of the term, but I do say that this condition of low wages has made it possible, and I think that when a young woman goes wrong let us be careful in condemning her; let us find out the cause that leads to it, as was unfortunately made known a short time ago when that young woman attempted to commit suicide, driven to her sad ending because she could not get enough to support her honorably, and had to give in to the tendencies of low wages, and then awoke to her shame and finally despair.

"We all need to awaken to this matter of low wages, and we can go on and preach, Sunday after Sunday, and many in our churches may be enjoying the beautiful services, but let me tell them without any reserve that the very ones who are doing much for our Christian interests are the very ones who are paying starvation wages.

"Christianity [illegible] practical to-day, so practical that it [illegible] every point of conduct, and that we [illegible] be Christians in any sense of [illegible], when we employ help and give them such a return for their services that we drive them to sin and starvation.

"The Christianity which we need to-day, is the Christianity which will give enough to people to live upon, and then turn around and make them happy by their sacrifices in behalf of those who need our sympathy and kindness in living good lives."

CLUB BURNS MORTGAGE.

Robert Emmet Association to Have New Home in September.

With the burning of the $10,000 mortgage on its property on Center street, Jamaica Plain, the Robert Emmet Association of that place, Friday night took the first step toward the erection of a new $50,000 home. Work on the new building will get started within a few days. The new structure is to be ready for occupancy by the first of September.

The building committee includes President Francis J. Horgan, J. M. Fallon, L. J. Malone, F. J. McLaughlin, W. J. Burke, Brian McElroy, James J. Corvin, James J. Curley, James M. Dunbar, Thomas J. Roche, John J. McLaughlin and Timothy F. Finneran.

MISSION AT CHELSEA.

Marist Fathers Begin Week's Services To-day.

Beginning to-day, a week's mission will be given for the French population of Chelsea and vicinity in the Church of Notre Dame de l'Assomption, Chelsea. The mission will be preached by the Rev. A. Rabel, S. M. of Notre Dame de Pitie, North Cambridge. The exercises will begin this evening at 7.30 and on the other evenings of the week at 8. The Marist Fathers, who are in charge of this church, invite the French people, not only of Chelsea but also of the neighboring cities to attend the mission.

Women Ministers to Meet.

The women ministers of Boston and vicinity will hold a conference at the Hotel Curtis, No. 745 Mt. Vernon street, March 7 at noon. Mrs. Anna May Peabody will speak upon the topic, "Co-education," at No. 65 Mt. Vernon street at 2 p. m.

ROOF GARDENS ALONG WATER FRONT IS LATEST MOVE

Architect Comes Forward With Unique Plan to Give People More Breathing Spots.

BOTH CHEAP AND EASY

Utilize the Ferry Head-houses, Says Louis Newhall, and Make City Happy.

ROOF gardens for the Boston ferry head houses—that's the latest idea.

This new proposition for the development of the Boston water front comes from Louis Newhall, a prominent architect. If his idea is carried into effect, it will provide popular resting places for the [illegible] on sultry Summer days.

Mr. Newhall would utilize the tops of the municipal ferry head houses by making them over into waterscape roof gardens so covered and shaded that thousands could enjoy the cooling breezes. The alteration plans are simple. They [illegible] for the strengthening of the present roofs of the North and South ferry buildings and for their ornamentation in such [illegible] that canopies could be spread over them and comfortable seats provided.

"Those who have not been in the habit of visiting the waterfront of Boston do not appreciate that to thousands of people, waterfront sights afford great pleasure and that, during the summer periods, droves of clerks regularly spend their noon recess at the waterfront for the invigorating breezes," says Mr. Newhall.

Opportunity for the City.

"We have an opportunity at hand to provide not only resting places but observation places that are at once interesting and delightful. The city owns ferry headhouses or practically owns them, inasmuch as in the case of the North ferry it has a lease which must continue for several hundred years. The idea has been in my mind for some time, and while I have not made any sketches, I am sure that there would be but little trouble in carrying the idea into execution.

"There is no doubt that this would be a popular move. For proof, the fact might be cited that on any hot summer's day hundreds of people can be seen standing at the fence at Driscoll's landing watching even on that narrow survey. At the various plots summering theings have become so numerous that pier owners have put up signs barring the people out. Even T Wharf, which formerly offered possibilities along this line, is now overrun with restrictions by reason of the press of business.

"What the men are able to enjoy to a certain extent women folks are barred from entirely. A man can travel along on the outside stringer of a pierhead and snuggle down into some sort of comfort. He can even take chances over on T wharf, but the tired shopgirl or the mother with the small children soon finds, if she ventures, that she is not wanted.

Arrangement Hastily Made.

"The city is really wasting a great opportunity. It is not getting the full value out of the money invested in the property. The pier houses in question run substantially only one story, and, as I had it worked out in my mind, easy stairways could be arranged directly from the street and a new floor surface laid down. It might be that on account of the law regarding structures along the water front in excess of [illegible] feet in height some legislation would be necessary, but that would be easy.

"The area in such cases is sufficient to allow ample space for resting and quiet recreation. In the case of the North ferry the structure could be carried partly over the Dover [illegible] dock, and this would have an added advantage, in such as it would screen from public gaze the unfortunates as they pass from the prison vans to the prison boat.

"Roof-garden plans could be duplicated on the East Boston side. The cost would be small for the over the properties and the maintenance charge would be small.

"The North End pier has been a godsend; the Marine Park pier was another salvation. Here is an opportunity to duplicate neither of the piers in question, but to give to the use of the people new vantage points where with comfort they can enjoy the water. Unless something of this sort is done it is only a question of time before the people will be practically shut off from access to the water-front."

CITY SUFFERS LOSS.

Englishmen Appeals for Children Who Quit School.

Graham Wallas, a member of the London County Council who is lecturing at Harvard, told 500 members of the Twentieth Century Club yesterday afternoon that hundreds of boys and girls are compelled every year to leave school thereby robbing the community of timber that would make for efficiency in conducting the municipality. He felt that it was the duty of Bostonians, who are urging high ideals in public life, to keep such children at school. Mr. Wallace said:

"You know hundreds of boys and girls in Boston who had to leave school at an early age and go to work and whose alertness in working out projects startled your imagination. If it could be arranged in some way that they could be trained in those things so essential to city life the expense of the same being paid by the city, there would be a great change take place in the complexity of conditions which now confront the body politic."

DRAMA OF OLD IRELAND.

"Mona the Vestal," to Be Given by Young Ladies' Sodality.

"Mona the Vestal," a religious Irish drama of the days of St. Patrick, by Miss Mary B. Ryan, will be produced by the dramatic class of the Young Ladies' Sodality connected with the Immaculate Conception Church. The play will be in Boston College hall, James street, the evening of March 17. Miss Ryan, the author, will take part in the performance. The cast of characters is as follows:—

Mona, Miss Mary Walsh; Dairena, Miss Bessie Daley; Brenda, Miss Marie Cox; Ena, Miss Helen Co[illegible]; Ita, Miss Elizabeth Gibson; Dairmel, Miss Katherine Shea; Ura, Miss Watson; Eithne, Miss Annie Fraser; Eileen, and Eva, the Misses Harvey Cassidy and Josephine Suldivan; Syra, Miss Marie Cox; Lona, Miss Helen Knightly; Sheela, Mrs. D. A. Sexton; Abaris, William Doonan; Semo, William Hazelboom; Oengus, William J. Cassidy; Clodomir, David Gibson; Uhric, George Kittredge; Ailbe, Patrick Higgins; Doral, Michael J. Costello; Avitus, Leo Dulaney; Mi[illegible]h, Leo Dulaney.

Miss Ara MacDonnell will prepare the introduction and Miss Mary Harte will have charge of the music.

To Lecture on Ireland.

Rev. Mortimer E. Twomey, rector of St. Eulalia's Church, South Boston, will lecture in Bethesda Hall, next Sunday evening, on "Ireland." Father Twomey is one of the most eloquent priests of the archdiocese. He has for years made a study of Ireland, its conditions and prospects, and is familiar with its beautiful scenery and the people. A concert of Irish music will be given before and after the lecture.

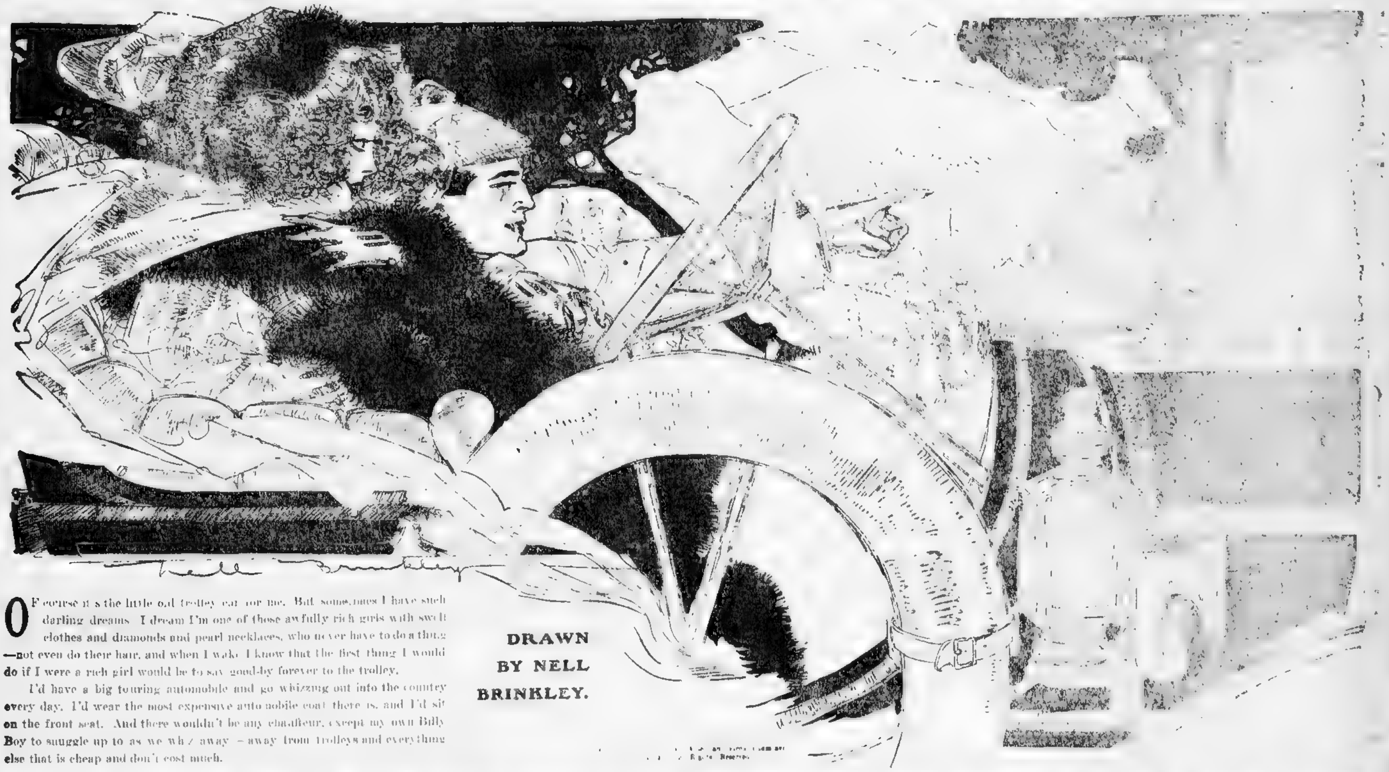
The Working Girl's Dream---"What I'd Do This Aftern[illegible]"



OF course it's the little old trolley car for me. But sometimes I have such darling dreams. I dream I'm one of those awfully rich girls with swell clothes and diamonds and pearl necklaces, who never have to do a thing—not even do their hair, and when I wake I know that the first thing I would do if I were a rich girl would be to say good-by forever to the trolley.

I'd have a big touring automobile and go whizzing out into the country every day. I'd wear the most expensive automobile coat there is, and I'd sit on the front seat. And there wouldn't be any chauffeur, except my own Billy Boy to snuggle up to as we whiz away—away from trolleys and everything else that is cheap and don't cost much.

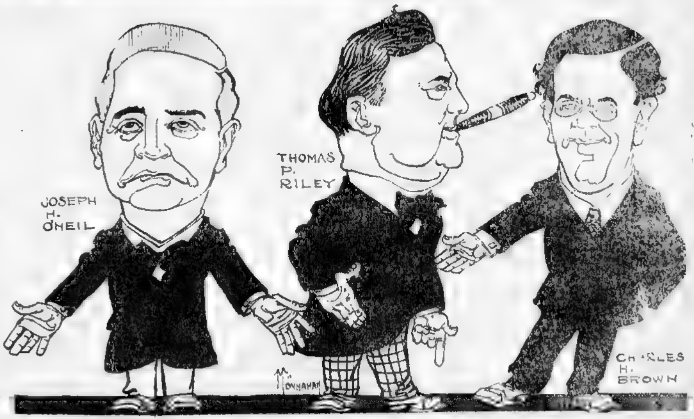
BEST STORIES TOLD IN BOSTON LAST WEEK

THE Sunday American presents herewith the best stories told in Boston last week by men who are well known to the public, and who always seem to have a "new one" at their tongue's end:



Going Some, but a Rum Go

By Representative Charles H. Brown of Medford.

THERE was a chap out my way who went daffy over the prohibition question. I myself made the fight for the Prohibition Bill in last year's Legislature, but this fellow wanted to burn down all the breweries and distilleries. He got so bad finally that he announced he was going in to Boston drink up all the Medford rum in the market He had never before touched a drop. He took a train to the North Station, went to a saloon nearby and called for some Medford rum. He got it.

"Ten cents," said the barkeep.

Then he had another, and started uptown. Reaching Haymarket square, he went into another saloon, this one a bit more fashionable than the first He ordered Medford rum.

"Fifteen cents," said the man behind."

He had another. Same price.

Eventually he struck Newspaper row He went into an emporium with figured glass windows and a lot of other trimmings.

More Medford rum. This time the price was twenty cents.

He wandered through the alley to Young's Hotel. More Medford.

"Twenty-five cents," announced the thirst doctor. The booze exterminator was so joyed at that he had six. When he made his exit a policeman took him in tow.

It was his first offence, and the judge released him the next morning. When he got back to Medford the next day his neighbors asked him if he had succeeded in cleaning up all the Medford.

"No," he said, sadly. "'Twan't no use." Then he reflected for a moment. "But, by jimminy," he added, brightening up, "I drank so durned much of it they had to boost the price."

Only $40,000 a Year

By Representative Robb dePuyster Tytus, journalist, Egyptologist, millionaire, farmer and statesman.

WHY did I give up scientific research and come back to live at home? Well, I'll tell you. It was too expensive. Mrs Tytus and I sat down one day and figured it out We found that with all our income and our revenue from writings and so forth, the best we could make above our expenses was $40,000 a year. And you know, old chap, that one can't do much on $40,000 a year.

Note—Tytus told this story the other day to Representative Isaac Willetts of Fall River. Forty thousand dollars is more than Willetts makes in two years. Willetts wandered into the House reading room immediately afterward. Next morning the House pages wondered who had kicked all the holes in the reading room waste-baskets.

Hooray for Justice!

By Representative Thomas F. Riley of Malden.

WHEN I was a cub just out of law school, my partner, a much older man, left me in court one day to await a verdict while he went back to the office and took care of the office practice. It was a hard case. The other side was having the final word of argument, and there was nothing for me to do but listen to them and wonder what my partner would say when I telephoned the result to him. Perhaps I didn't pray that the agony would soon be over. Well, the other side finished and the judge thought for a few minutes. I nearly fell off my chair when he declared in favor of our side. I fairly flew to a telephone, got my partner on the line and shouted so that I could be heard all over the court house:

"Justice has triumphed!"

"Appeal the case," shouted back my partner. "Perhaps we can win out before a jury."

"W-w-hat do you w-w-want to appeal it for?" I stammered. "Our side won."

"Aw, rats," was his answer. "I thought you said justice had triumphed."

Oh, So Bashful!

By Joseph H. O'Neil, President of the Federal Trust Company and former Congressman.

DR WILLIAM EVERETT, who died a few days ago, was one of the most bashful men I ever knew. He and I served in Congress together. I was tipped off one day that the Committee on Naval Affairs was to report a bill which provided for taking "Old Ironsides" away from the Charlestown Navy Yard and mooring her at Portsmouth.

I went to Everett. "Here's a fine chance," I said, "for you to make yourself strong with your Charlestown constituents. When this report comes in, you rise to a point of order and say that the 'Old Ironsides' clause has no place in the bill."

But the doctor was scary. "Why don't you do it?" he asked.

"There are several reasons," I said, "be-

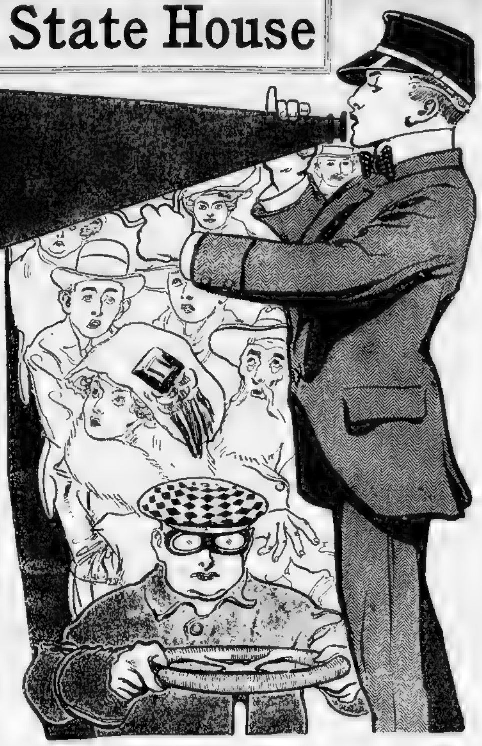
The Rubberneck Megaphone Man at the State House



TIME—Early in the afternoon.

SCENE—Beacon street, in front of the State House. Rubberneck wagon, loaded to the gunnels, steers up out of Park street and comes to a full stop. Man with the Megaphone takes his usual position on the front seat, and, after sizing them up, shouts:

MEGAPHONE MAN—Ladies and gentlemen, owing to the fact that we have with us to-day the honorable Board of See-lect-men, from Seedville, together with other distinguished gents from up State, I have been asked to point out to you, with illuminating comment, some of the illustrious citizens who pass in and out of the State House.

SCHOOL TEACHER (rapturously)—O, how lovely; I want to see Roger Wolcott!

MEGAPHONE MAN—For the benefit of the young lady I will say that Representative Wolcott is happily married. It is a little early for him to appear. In the meantime the tall, stout, distinguished looking gentleman, coming down the steps, is Francis Peabody, Jr., the—— OLD GENTLEMAN IN BLACK (with white cravat)—I am very familiar with his "Religion of an Educated Man." He doesn't look a bit like what I expected, however.

MEGAPHONE MAN—You have mixed up your Francis Peabodys sir, if you will permit me. This is General Francis Peabody, not the Harvard man. The religion of an educated man is not this Francis Peabody's, at least not in the sense you have in mind. General Peabody (take a good look at him, ladies and gents; you may not have such an opportunity again for years) dates back to 1632. He is one of our reel, ginooine Brahmins. He bears the distinction of being about the only Big Fellow in our midst who is unfamiliar with the songs of John Harvard and Eleazar Wheelock, having been educated abroad. A stockholder in three trust companies, and a director in two, he has nevertheless been up-stairs to-day to slam the trust company gentlemen who pulled the leg of the Legislature last year and had their taxes reduced.

CHAIRMAN OF THE SEEDVILLE SELECTMEN—I call that refreshing! I had an idee that all these wealthy men in Boston were out to beat the taxes any way they could. Can't you stop him? Wouldn't he like to address the Board? Ask him, young man!

MEGAPHONE MAN—Not in one million, six trillion and nineteen billion years, my friend. Ask me to jump off the gilded dome and I'll consider it. However, here comes another. The determined looking gent with the fighting gray moustache is Nathan Matthews.

GROCER'S CLERK (from Holyoke)—Not the ex-Mayor?

MEGAPHONE MAN—The ex-Mayor, precisely. Also the Fin Commer. Mr. Matthews has been giving his critics a jolt to-day by joining hands with General Peabody in telling the trust company lobbyists what chumps they have been.

YOUNG LADY FROM FALL RIVER (who reads the papers)—I don't care about all these old fossils. I want to see Big Bill Keliher, or Jim Curley, or Alexander Higginson.

HER FRIEND—Or Little George Coleman.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Little George is denying himself to callers these days, but we'll take a run down past Clark's, after a while, and if Big Bill is in town I'll be pleased to show him to you. You folks realize, of course, that nobody has the right to put a hand on Big Bill's shoulder and tell him somebody wants to see him at the office? Dee-cidedly not! If a lot of fall guys enter into a plan to skin somebody, and get trimmed themselves, who's to blame? However, the stout party just coming out at the side door is Senator Dan Mahoney of Holyoke, an acquaintance of Big Bill's.

DRUG CLERK (from Wenham)—I should think he'd be a skeered.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Who? Dan? Do not worry, little one, the gentleman who can steer your Uncle Daniel against a brace game is not living in these parts. Daniel is the gent who presided over a committee meeting the other day and told the W. C. T. U. ladies that every member of his committee is a teetotaller. Two reporters who heard the statement are still unconscious.

CHAIRMAN OF THE SEEDVILLE BOARD—You used the expression "fall guy," a minute or two ago; just what do you mean by that, young man?

MEGAPHONE MAN—Meet me in front of the Adams House at 9 to-night, Jack, and I'll take you off some place and show you. However, there are fall guys and Fall guys. Here comes George H. Fall, who ran for Mayor of his native city of Malden twenty-one times before they fell for him. George is the little gentleman hiding behind the whiskers.

YOUNG WOMAN FROM FALL RIVER—Are your lamps bad, kid, or is there a live one around anywheres?

MEGAPHONE MAN—I regret to state that Jim Doyle is still in the South, sister, and that Jim Shaw is with us no more. However, if good looks suffice, cast your weather eye on our State Forester, Mr. Frank William Rane. Born at Whitmore Lake, in Mishygan, Frank William is one of the few rank outsiders who have ever got away with anything in Massachusetts.

OLD LADY IN THE BACK SEAT—I'd like to see Governor Draper.

MEGAPHONE MAN—The Governor is rehearsing a speech at the present moment, Madam, but the Beau Brummel approaching is the assistant Governor.

OLD LADY IN BLACK—Looie Frothingham! Isn't he handsome!

MEGAPHONE MAN—Looie is a perfect gent, Lady, but the work of art drawing towards us is William Augustine Murphy, the assistant Governor, not the Lieutenant-Governor. Notice the little children brighten as he approaches. So he goes through life, charming legislators, smoothing out the rough places for his chief and making every minute count.

GRAND ARMY MAN (from Easthampton)—I came down here to see the Hooker Statue. Where's "Fighting Joe"?

MEGAPHONE MAN—Fighting Joe is seated on his horse on a pedastal in the State House yard. I meant to have pointed him out long ago, but Sam Holman of Attleboro has been standing in front of him. Mr. Holman is moving, now, sir. There he goes. Now you can see the statue, Comrade.

MEGAPHONE MAN (winking at the Young Woman from Fall River)—I thoroughly agree with you, Ma'am. Here comes Joseph Lee, the Mt. Vernon street philanthropist, champion of the play-ground movement in Massachusetts. One of these fine days my successors in this educational work will be pulling your grandchildren up in front of statues to Joseph Lee. No; he doesn't look it: looks like a coupon clipper, but he is it and he means it.

MEGAPHONE MAN—We will now pass the Public Garden and proceed to the Public Library and the Art Museum.

YOUNG WOMAN FROM FALL RIVER—We will not, Mister, and that's a bet. Come, Mame.

[Girls from Fall River leave the car, one of them accidentally glancing in the direction of the Lowell Alderman, who also quits. The car proceeds up Beacon street, the Old Lady in the Back Seat further expressing her opinion of people of low ideals.]

FOUR WAYS TO ECONOMIZE--By Wex Jones

(Copyright, 1910, by American Journal Examiner. Great Britain Rights Reserved.)

AS all the millionaires [illegible] the higher cost of living doesn't matter at all. The trouble, so James J. Hill and Speaker Cannon and Andrew Carnegie and others have pointed out, is that persons don't economize enough. All these authorities must be right, so the advantages of a handy guide to economize cannot be overlooked.

I.

To Economize on Rent.

Rent is a serious item in the small household. As some one has said, it is often cheaper to move than to pay it, but this method, owing to oppressive legislation, has certain disadvantages. Sleeping in the street cars and elevated while frequently practised, has also several objectionable features. Working all day and walking around the block all night to keep warm is a convenient method, but becomes rather wearing after [illegible] days. The only [illegible] a job as night watchman, when you can spend the day in pleasure and slumber comfortably in the cellar at night. As there are more persons in Boston who dislike to pay rent than there are vacancies for night watchmen, it is advisable to get your application in as early as possible.

Another way to avoid paying rent for a [illegible]

II.

To Economize on Furniture.

If you feel that you must do as most others do and live in a flat for which the landlord collects with heartless regularity, you can still save quite a considerable sum by avoiding the purchase of useless furniture. It is, of course, a useless waste of money to buy a piano if your neighbors have one. When you feel like playing a little rag time, move these neighbors into your flat until you get through with your music on their piano.

A carpet that is spread upon the floor is frequently stepped upon by careless persons and is consequently worn out soon. With care a carpet can be made to last for years. Roll it up carefully and wrap it in burlap. Place it in the ice box and lock the door.

There will be no need for a bookcase if you give your books to the janitor for fuel. This plan will also prevent you from wasting time in reading.

To save money on kitchen utensils, china, cutlery, silver, sideboards, dining room tables, etc., etc., eat your meals in a restaurant.

Incidentally your gas bill can be reduced materially by burning gas in the day time only when much less of it will be needed.

III.

To Economize on Beef, Eggs, Milk, Etc.

Of course the obvious way to save money on beef is to make your diet of hay alone, but many persons do not like to give up cutlets, steaks and so forth. The best way for these persons to laugh at the exactions of the Beef Trust is to go and live with a rich father-in-law. Unfortunately not everybody is provided with a rich father-in-law, and in some cases the father-in-law even insists upon living with his son-in-law. For these there is only one way to scoff at the Trust, and that is to import hippopotamus or giraffe steaks from Africa, where there is a glutted market.

"Keep a cow," says Governor Hadley, of Missouri, referring to the high cost of milk. For a similar reason we say "Keep a hen." If honey is too expensive, do as somebody or other advised and keep a bee. Should maple syrup rise in price, keep a stiff upper lip.

IV.

To Economize on Amusements.

If you are fond of playing pool, a little head work will save you much expense. Just as the game is being concluded look at the clock and say, "Just time for my train. Settle the bill, old man, will you." Be careful to assume an off-hand manner, as the least evidence of preparation will ruin the scheme, unless your friend is of an exceptionally sweet character.

The same plan can be applied to most things of the kind, and at the end of the month, despite the high cost of everything worth having, you will have a comfortable balance in the bank.

"Vatch der Step!"—Mr. Dinkelspiel in the Subway

([illegible] 1910, by American Journal Examiner. Great Britain Rights Reserved.)

MEIN lieber son Looey:—Ve haf receifed your letter from Philadelphia, vare you haf been enchoying der eggscitements of der street car strike, und ve vas glad to hear dot up to der present moment no coupling-pin has cuddled up a leedle closer to your hat rack, und dot you vas still able to rush madly up to your room in der hotel efery time you see der police reserves exceeding der speed limit down der street.

We doan'd enchoy der blessing of a car strike ofer here, Looey, but der Subway during rush hours ve haf always mit us, und der resemblance is so close it is painful.

I haf made up a small bundle of poetry abouid vich is on der same principal as two wrongs do not made a right, und no man can right a wrong ven he has written der wrong vay, but pleuse eggscuse your Foder for dis vunce, vile I burst fort' as following:

DER SUBWAY.

Der shades of night vare falling fast
As through de Subway's mouth dare passed
A yout' both brafe and unashamed;
Vile far away a woice eggsclaimed:
"Vatch der step!"

Der yout's eggspression it was sveet,
Vun pound of gold vas in his teet',
His clothes vas neat (no tailor named),
Vile far away dot woice eggsclaimed:
"Vatch der step!"

Down in der Subvay grim he danced,
Den stood like vun mit fear entranced;
Before him surched a howling mob,
Und still dot woice vas on der job:
"Vatch der step!"

Der yout' turned pale, den turned to go,
But hunger vispered at him, "No!
In Newtonville your Mudder vaits
Mit supper on her China plates!"—
"Vatch der step!"

Ah! vare's der son dot will not brave
Der howling mob if he can save
Der mother's heart mit ankvish turned,
Because der roast beef might get burned:
"Vatch der step!"

Den mit a yell of rage und hate
He choined der grouches at der gate;
Deep twixt his teet' his ticket lay,
Both hands were needed for der fray—
"Vatch der step!"

His elbow sharp he pushed mit zest
Into der ticket-taker's chest,
Und brushed right by mit careless air—
None but der brave can save der fare!
"Vatch der step!"

Vot is dot scream of voman's woe?
Der yout' has stepped upon her toe;
Vy does dot man yell: "Holy cats!"
Der yout' has slapped him in der slats.
"Vatch der step!"

Der Subvay cherm now holds him fast,
Der pirate flag flies from der mast;
Und loud der battle hymn he cries,
"For Newtonville and Mudder's Pies!"
"Vatch der step!"

His coat soon disappears from view,
His shoes of tan vus black und blue;
Der Necktie made of red und green
By mortal eyes no more is seen—
"Vatch der step!"

His eyes now mit a frenzy roll,
A ancient hate is in his soul;
Zip! goes a lovely voman's rat;
Zow! goes a nice Fedora hat—
"Vatch der step!"

He shoves und pushes here und dare,
Veak vimmen veep in vild despair;
Und all der vile he shouts mit glee,
"Behold! der Subvay Kid—dot's me!"
"Vatch der step!"

Der shades of night vas all abouid
Ven from der Subway's mouth comes ouid
Der yout', all in und veak und gone,
Vile down below der woice keeps on:
"Vatch der step!"

His Mudder meets him at der door:
"Ach, Himmel; velcome home vunce more;
How pale your face, how sad your eyes,
Vot you need, son, is eggsercise!"
"Vatch der step!"

Yours mit luff.

SOME OF THE FUNNY THINGS THAT THE CHILDREN SAY

A bashful little miss of five, who particularly disliked gentlemen, was playing with her kitten one day. Her mother, entering the room, saw her cutting off the cat's whiskers with a scissors.

"Why, Anna! What are you doing?" she asked.

"Oh, nufing, only I don't like man cats, so I'm cutting the whiskers off my kitty to make him a lady."

* * *

A young man called to see his sweetheart and was being entertained by her small sister while big sister added a few finishing touches to her toilet. The little one handed him a rather wet and sticky piece of white candy and, wishing to be in favor with the small member of his beloved's family, he ate it. The little girl watched him with great interest, and finally said:

"You like it?"

"Very much indeed," the young man replied.

"Well, Fido didn't—he spit it out twice!" the child replied.

Travis, aged five, was reprimanded for his disobedience, and when told that God did not love naughty boys, asked:

"Mother, how does God know I have been naughty?"

"He sees everything you do, my son," was the reply.

Then, after a moment's reflection, he said: "Gee, but I must keep Him busy."

One day a little girl got into a car and there was no seat for her to sit in. A gentleman whom she was standing in front of said:

"What is the matter, little girl? Haven't you got any seat?"

The little girl replied: "Yes, I have a seat, but there's no place to put it."

Little Johnny was in his back yard one day asking the rabbit how much is 1 and 1, 2 and 2, 3 and 3, 4 and 4, etc. His mother called out from the window, asking what he was doing to the rabbit.

"Well, mother," said Johnny, "the teacher said that rabbits multiply quickly, but this funny bunny can't even add."

The teacher was explaining to the class the different parts of their bodies and what they were used for. "The nose," she said, "is made to smell and your feet are made to run."

One little boy, with a worried expression, raised his hand, and the teacher inquired: "Well, Johnny, what's the matter?"

"My nose and feet ain't that way," exclaimed Johnny.

"Why, how is that?" asked the teacher.

"My nose runs and my feet smells."

Said Bobby to the minister at dinner:

"Can a church whistle?"

"Why do you ask?"

"Cos pa owes twelve dollars back pew rent, and he says he's going to let the church whistle for it."

Little boy (to girl)—Has your baby got all stomach teeth.

Little Girl (puzzled)—Our baby has all its teeth, George, but I don't know whether she has any teeth in her stomach or not.

A small boy in a Sunday school class said to his teacher: "Teacher, can God do every thing?"

"Yes," said the teacher.

"Can He make a stone so large that He can't lift it Himself?"

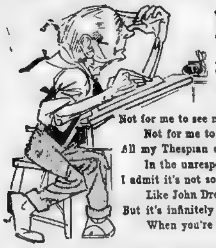
The other day little Garland, aged four, said to his mother, just after his morning bath:

"Mamma, why is one toe so big? I thought they was all the same age."

THE MOVING PICTURE MODEL.—BY JAMES J. MONTAGUE.

The Funniest Poet of Modern Times.

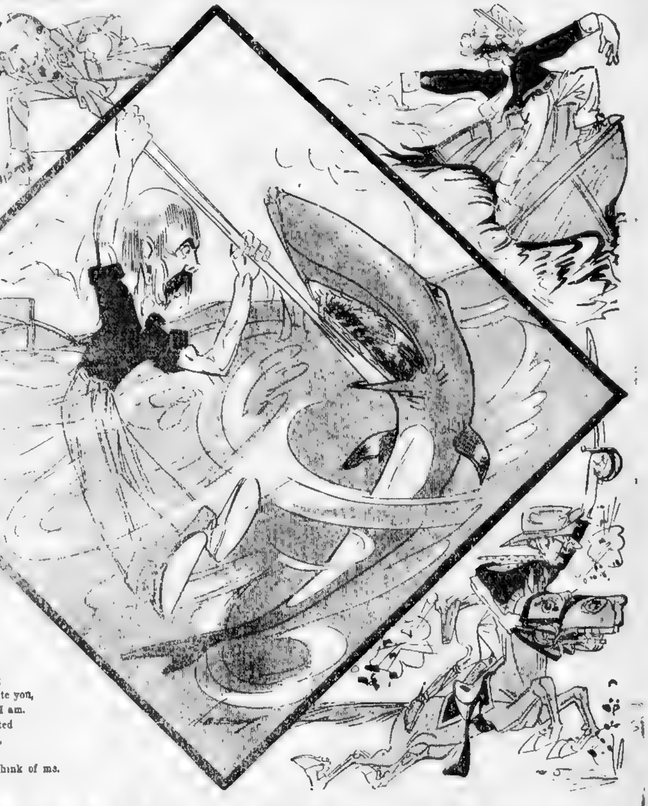
(Copyright, 1910, by American Journal Examiner. Great Britain Rights Reserved.)



DEAR DAYSEY MAY—I read last week that you adored to go
Six nights in every week to see the moving picture show,
And so I take the liberty to thank with all my heart
A lady who appreciates and understands my art.
'Tis I that thrills your throbbing soul, 'tis I that wakes your laugh,
For, Daysey, I'm the model for the cinematograph.

Not for me to see my picture as a Broadway billboard fixture.
Not for me to pose in posters for the monthly magazines;
All my Thespian endeavor must be carried on forever
In the unresponsive reaches that we call "behind the scenes."
I admit it's not so easy to be debonair and breezy,
Like John Drew and James K. Hackett, whom you girls all dote on so,
But it's infinitely harder to display dramatic ardor
When you're nothing but the model of a moving picture show

I get to work at six o'clock; I swiftly shuck my coat
And give an imitation of the man that rocks the boat.
I presently plunge overboard and find a watery grave
By landing seven feet below upon a canvas wave.
And while the biograph clicks on I seize an ashen oar,
Beat off an over-eager shark and calmly swim ashore.



At half-past six I don a mask and creep with unctuous stealth
Upstairs to see a millionaire and part him from his wealth.
He shoots, I shoot, the morning air with pale-blue smoke is filled,
And then I fall downstairs head first, for I'm the one that's killed.
You may not think that it is art to burglarize a flat,
But do you fancy that Mantell or Sothern could do that?

Moving Picture Shows

At seven, bravely garnished with a spotless uniform,
I lead a charge of cavalry and take a fort by storm.
My horse is foremost in the fight; he trips and falls, and see!
A dozen supes with sharp shod feet charge headlong over me!
That may not be the highest form of pure dramatic art.
But do you think Forbes-Robertson would care to play the part?

And so for ten long hours a day the biograph's cold eye
Is fixed upon me while I fly, or fall, or fight, or die;
And all that you, Miss Daysey May, six nights a week may go
To fill your heart with thrills the while you see the picture show.
And I, unknown to cheering crowds, unspoken of by fame.
That you may laugh or weep, must be the model for the same.

I don't ask you to adore me or to sit and languish for me
Like you might for Johnnie Barrymore or Mr. Faversham;
But since moving shows delight you, why I make so bold to write you,
That you'll understand hereafter who and what and why I am.
And I'll more than feel requited if, the next time you're excited
When careering from a building a revolving form you see,
Rendered marvellously tragic by the moving picture's magic,
You will know you know the fellow, and, mayhap, will think of me.

A HEART-RENDING TRUE LIFE STORY

There Is No Laughter in This Article, but It Is True! True! True!

(Copyright, 1910, by American Journal Examiner. Great Britain Rights Reserved.)

Elizabeth Goodnow is a New York woman who believes that women are bad not from choice, but, oftentimes, from cruel necessity. Her splendid work as a Probation Officer at the Night Court has given her ample opportunity to know the facts. If relentless poverty is what ruins the souls of so many women, Mrs. Goodnow believes this should be made known and a remedy found. From her new book, "The Market for Souls," just published by Mitchell Kennerley, New York, is taken the following sad chapter—and it is only one of many which seem to prove the author's assertions. How many such stories are hidden in the life of Boston?

IT was her first arrest and she was turned over to me on probation. I took her into a room off from the court room to talk with her. She was a pretty Italian girl of about seventeen years of age. I was interested in her at once, as Italians are very rare in the Night Court. The girls of that race do not go into the byways and highways, or else they do not get into trouble with the police. Her curly black hair was brushed smoothly back from her face, which seemed to set her apart from the ordinary run of big pompadoured girls that we saw every night. She was badly frightened, and I let her cry for a while before I tried to question her; then I found out her mother's address and the fact that she lived at home. She promised she would come and see me once a week, but she would not promise that she would leave the street. She would say nothing, just shake her head and cry when I talked to her about work, or asked her to come to my place for a few days.

She went away, and the next day I hunted up the address she gave me, wondering if she had acquired the American girl's habit of giving me an address on a vacant lot; but she had not, and after a search I found the tenement on Leroy street. Their flat was on the fourth floor, and after climbing the dark and rather greasy stairway, I came to the door. In response to an "Antra Le!" I opened the door and walked into an inside room that was the kitchen. The family were in the back room, the only room with a window, and all except three babies were sitting around the table making flowers. The mother gave me a chair, then went back to her work. I spoke to them, then drew the chair nearer to the table and watched them. The father, mother, little girl of about twelve, a boy and two smaller girls, and a brown-eyed lad of, I should say, four, were all sticking marguerites on wreaths for hats.

After a few moments I said, "I have come, Mrs. Gilletti, to talk to you about your daughter, Rosa."

She flushed a dull nervous red and glanced quickly at her husband and the children.

"You—you—are from da shop where she work?" I waited a moment, then she gave me a glance that implored me to say yes, and I replied, "Yes—I want to talk to you about her—her—work."

She pushed black the flowers, picked up the baby from the crib, and started to an inside room. I followed her, and when she got inside she gave me a chair, softly closed the door and lighted a small lamp, then sat down facing me. The baby began to cry and she gave it the breast, and sort of rocked back and forth hushing the baby. Then she stopped and eyed me anxiously, "Rosa?"

"I am sorry, Mrs. Gilletti, Rosa is in trouble. I am from the police; she has been arrested."

I could only see her face dimly, but she clutched the baby, and sat perfectly still for at least a minute.

"Ah, Madre Mia," she half moaned, "my Rosa." Then, turning to me, "What for she arrested?"

I said, "She was arrested on the street. You understand? I am afraid Rosa needs help, and I came to you to see in what way we can help her."

"My Rosa good girl, she no bad, she good girl."

"No, she is not a bad girl, but she is in trouble now, and perhaps needs you to talk to her."

"You say she taka by da police? Tella me. She in prison—my Rosa?"

"No, she is not in prison. She will be here soon. She must come and see me once a week, and we will see if we can do something for her. Does she work, Mrs. Gilletti?"

"No," hesitatingly, "I doan know."

"Where did she work—before?"

"She work in box factory on Jones street."

"Why did she leave it?"

The mother looked down, played with the baby's stocking and said very softly, "I doan know."

"You don't know. Is she working now?"

"I doan know," again softly, without looking at me.

"Do you think she is working?"

"I no can tell."

"Tell me, does she go away in the morning to work?"

"Yes—mos' ever' day."

"Now, Mrs. Gilletti, won't you help me? I want to be good to Rosa. I want to help her."

"Y—e—s. You police. I no can talk you. I doan know."

"Yes, I am in the police. But you see, if you let me know about Rosa, I will try to help her, so she won't get into trouble again. This is her first time, you know. The next time she is arrested, perhaps they will put her in prison."

At this she seemed to shrink, as from a blow. Her hands were clasped tightly around the baby, her face white and drawn with misery. Her eyes stared straight ahead. She seemed to have forgotten me. Finally she half whispered, "Rosa my Rosa in prison."

Then in a moment she turned to me and said, "Oh, Senora, I tella you all. I no want you 'rest Rosa some more. I tella you all."

She glanced apprehensively at the door, went over to see if it was closed, then came back and sat down heavily in the chair. Her hands fumbled nervously with the baby's clothing and she looked in my face appealingly, as if asking me to help her to begin.

"Is Rosa your oldest?"

"Yes."

"How many children are there?'

"Eight bambini, and—and—Rosa."

"Where does your husband work, Mrs. Gilletti?"

"He no work. Oh, I tella you all. I tella you all, den you see Rosa no bad girl.

"This Winter ver' bad. Padre no gotta work. He sometime no work, one time one week. He [illegible] fifty cents some day. Some time snow come, he gotta job wid da citta for shovel da snow. Some time he empty da ash can for one lady. He do anyt'ing—anyt'ing. Some day he walk, [illegible] walk, all day, looka for work. Den he come home, he putta da head in da hand, he say no gotta da God in America. No gotta da work for poor man, he wanta die. He good man, he no drink, he no do bad, he worka hard. But he man, he no lak maka da flower. But all day he must maka da flower wid me and da bambini, so we can buy little to eat. We all maka da flower. [illegible] more big bambini go school. Before go in morning early must maka da flower, when school finish, dey come home quick, maka da flower. Dey no play, dey no do notting, just maka da flower. We all work, all da time. Padre, madre, bambini, all. No can maka one dollar one day. More time sixty cents. You see da marguerite. We maka one gross, we gotta fi cent. It taka long time maka twelve dozen da wreath, [illegible] Da first thing, must putta da rent. Twelve dollar dese room. Tree little room. One all dark, lak you see, but must [illegible] twelve dollar ever month.

"Den [illegible] I sick long time before baby come. I no can work much, work little. But I sick. Must doctor one time. He say must go out, must gotta fresh air. How I can gotta fresh air, how I can gotta out? Must maka da flower. Must cook for da padre and da bambini. Some time I putta on my shawl and I sitta on da steps, but ver cold. I no got plenta close, very cold. Den two bambini sick, da boy, my little girl Anna gotta da trouble here," pointing to her chest. [illegible] Da nurse she come from da Settlement, she taka to St. Vincent. Den two week must go to da country. Dey gone one month, and all da time no so many to maka da flower. I must work more late, work more hard. Den de baby come. I ver sick. Da doctor come from da Settlement, no costa da money, but must buy da medecine. Dat costa ver dear. Poor Rosa she come home ever night, she maka da flower, she see da padre maka da flower, she see da bambini maka da flower. She see madre sick, no gotta plenty eat, no gotta notting. She maka four dollar one week, she give me all. But twelve dollar in da box first ting for da rent, den sometime no gotta money for wood. No gotta for oil, no gotta notting, notting.

"You understan', Senora, no can live. Rosa see no can. She say me 'Madre Mia, whatta can I do? No can live dis way.' Plenty night she come home I cry, Padre sitta head in hand, he no cry, but he wanta die."

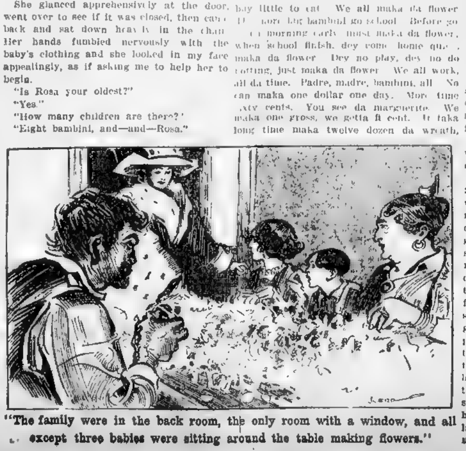
Here she was quiet a long while, then went on in the low monotonous voice of the desperate poor.

"One day she, ma Rosa, no come home. She no come home ver late. I aska her where she been, she say wid fr'en'. Next night she come home, den again she no come ver late. Den bime by she come home, go out again. I talka her, aska her where she go. She say she work late she maka more money. Dat week she giva me ten dollar. I no can talk. Ten dollar, all one time ver much money. I no see ten dollar for one year, all in one week. I cry, I ver sick, you know, and I cry. She tella me she gotta good work night time, she maka plenta money. But she go work day time, too, in da box shop. Ever week she giva me ten dollar, some time fifteen dollar. I pay back rent. I buy bambini shoe. I buy one time da week little meat. I buy Padre new shirt, new pant, new close. We all ver happy. Some time I sing. Padre feel more lak man in he new close. He hold da head up, he no sitta da head in da hand. Some day he gotta work. He ver happy. Bambini no work so hard. Some time can play after school. Some time little boy can play wid odder little boy in da street. Da little girls go Settlement back yard and swing, maka da dollie, all a same odder little girl. Rosa, she laugh when she see ma face. She buy me good dress, pretty dress, ver warm. She buy me shawl, nice black shawl, and den she call me her pretty madre. She taka ma face and looka in ma eyes and say 'Madre, tella me you happy.' I tella her I no so happy since I was in Napoli."

Here she was again quiet, and her voice became more soft. It was hard for me to hear her.

"Den one day—one day—Senora Frascati she come me. She know I ver glad I no so poor. I tella her no girl lak ma Rosa, she work ver hard. Senora Frascati look me very long in da face, ver hard, she say me 'Senora Gilletti, you doan know what ting Rosa do?' I say 'Yes, she work in da box factory, she do work night time, she maka da double money.' She say 'Poor Senora Gilletti, she [illegible] you. She no worka da box factory.' I no understand, den she tell me ma Rosa a bad woman.

"I no can talk, I no can breathe, I no can see for long time. It seem somet'ing in me here die. Senora Frascati she scared, she go home. [illegible] she lie. She jealous cause Rosa good girl, maka plenty money. But I no can forget. I watch Rosa when she come home. I try see if she look like bad girl. I no can tell. I no can tink. I no want Padre know. I fear he killa her. I fear if true, he killa hisself. He have taka da money from Rosa. He good Italian man. Good Italian man no wanta da daughter go bad. He starve, he die, but no wanta da girl go bad. All time I wait, I watch, I fear Padre. I leave door open so she mak no noise. I tell lie. I do ever ting so Padre no hear what ting Senora Frascati say. I near crazy, I no know what to do. I tink I must tella her. But I no laka ma daughter tink I hear she bad. I shamed. I have taka her money. But whata can we do? Padre no gotta work all da time, some time little, some time no work for week. I near crazy. I tink all time perhaps Padre dis week getta work, stidy work, den I tell Rosa, no go on street. For love of Dio, Rosa, it breaka my heart. But what I do? We must live, we no can live widdout da money of Rosa. Den some time night time I lie and tink. Perhaps Rosa no bad. Perhaps lie of Senora Frascati. I must know. I crazy. I must know. So—when—when—Rosa go out one night—I putta ma shawl over ma head and I follo her in da street. I see—Si, Senora—Ma Rosa—not good girl!"



"The family were in the back room, the only room with a window, and all except three babies were sitting around the table making flowers."

Who is there that can resist them and their antics?

A Rapid-Fire Dash Through the Happiness Maze of Some of Boston's Easily Found Indigo Dispellers Converts Chronic Knockers to Boosters of the Joy Route.

CHERE is a prominent State street broker who doesn't like Boston because the restaurants do not throw in a burlesque show with the table dehote dinner, as he says they do in other cities.

There is an eminent drygoods merchant who doesn't like Boston because he can't buy a drink after 12 o'clock.

There is a New York journalist temporarily sojourning in Boston because he cant' get work in New York, who doesn't like this city because there is no place to go after 1 a. m., when he is through with his work.

They dined together a few nights ago, and such an anvil chorus you never heard. But there was a man of philanthropic mind and an explorer of ways and places. He overheard them and he smiled as he listened. Then he said:

"The trouble with you fellows is that you don't know your Boston. You have never tried to get acquainted with the city Come with me and I'll show you the town."

So he hailed a taxicab—sports always travel in taxicabs—and they started on a tour.

"Up town first," he said to the driver, and the machine hummed along, while the knockers were bumped about until they were unable to knock. The first stop was at the Columbia Music Hall.

"Nothing left but a box," said the man in the window. So they entered a box. The show had just commenced. Across the stage stretched a line of blondes and brunettes whose lower extremeties were encased in silklings and who beamed invitingly at the audience. The tramp comedians disguised as dukes were ogling the beauties familiarly, and the drygoods merchant leaned back contentedly. A soubrette singled him out and cooed at him, "Oh, you baldy."

"This is no place for us," said the philanthropist. "Come along, boys."

"Not on your life," declared the merchant. "You can do what you please, but I shall see this show."

Sadly they left him, and the taxicab rolled down town to where "The Midnight Sons" were cavorting at the New Shubert.

Again there were girls, bushels of girls, frothy, frivolous, frolicsome girls, also decollete girls George Munroe, the Irish washwoman, came on, and wearing petticoats. Then came the great shoe store scene. The washwoman wished a new pair of shoes. The audience roared with laughter. The State street broker doubled up with mirth and, as he was fat, he was in danger.

"Take me away before I laugh myself to death," he murmured, and his two friends supported him to the waiting taxi.

Next they looked in at the Majestic, where "Is Matrimony a Failure?" held the boards. I don't have to see this show, I know it is," said the newspaper man.

However there was a vacant box into which our friends glided. There was a situation in progress of being evolved that was quite French, and was becoming Frenchier every moment. The broker's eyes were glued to the stage. The newspaperman and the philanthropist tried to drag him away in vain. Finally they left him. "Oh, you girls!" he murmured contentedly between chuckles of delight

A few moments with William Hodge, and then down to the Boston Theatre.

"The Grove of Daphne scene in "Ben-Hur" was in progress. Again there were girls, blondes, graceful and friendly. They accosted the strangers who wandered through the grove

"I know the manager," said the newspaper man." I sha'l walk on the stage and let them come right up and speak to me."

"You come with me," said the philanthropist, and instead of going through the door that led to the stage they went through the door that led through the Mason street subway.

The taxicab was still waiting. Now they sped down town toward the new Casino.

There was a bright electric sign announcing that the Bon Ton Burlesquers were inside. Charlie Waldron, who was smiling expansively at those who passed in, confirmed the announcement. The philanthropist and the journalist got seats in the front row. The olio was on, and a lady sat on a trapeze and removed her hat, and her jacket and her waist and her shoes, and, fearing for the next move, the philanthropist fled, but the journalist bravely stood his ground.

Outside the driver of the taxicab was getting anxious

"Say, which of youse guys is going to pay for this machine?"

The philanthropist handed him the seat check and said, "You will find the host of the evening in the next seat to this one. He will remain till the last. I am going to the American House to telephone to my other two friends and bring about a reunion."

"Sorry, pal, but you ain't going to do nothing of the kind. You are going to pay for this taxi or I'll call that cop over there, who is a friend of mine."

The philanthropist remonstrated, but the driver was adamant

"You pays $18.75 or you goes to jail," he declared

It now developed that the philanthropist had no money left. The policeman was called and the philanthropist was taken to the station house. As he was pushed into his cell and heard the key turned in the door he smiled happily

"Well, I gave those fellers a good time, anyway, and I guess Boston ain't so slow."

But back at the various stations of mirth where he had left them along his tour of joy the three knockers were transformed. With eyes and voice and hands they were "boosting" now

They had profited by Boston's always ready recipes for laughter, and indigo had become a pinkly-purple maze of effervescing happiness

AWFUL embarrassing thing happened to me down at the Flatiron Building yesterday. I saw a pretty girl walking across the street with her stockings on wrong side out.

"What did you do?"

"Oh, I turned the hose on her."

I RAN across Pat the other day painting a fence. He was working as if his very life depended on every stroke of the brush, and I inquired why he was in such a hurry.

"Oh," he replied, "I'm trying to get through before the paint runs out."

"Vas iss?" say I, all excitements.

"Pat bate his wife up this morning."

"Ach himmel," say I, starting to cry. "The poor woman"——

"Yes," Mike says, "Pat got up at five o'clock and she didn't get up till six."

THE other day I went into a saloon and asked the man behind the bar to lend me ten dollars to bury my [illegible]. He said he would be glad to help me out if he could. Then, looking in the cash drawer, he said.

"I'm sorry, old chap, but there's only [illegible] in the box."

"Well," said I, "give me that, and I'll take the other $1.20 in drinks."

Gus—In the State of New York.

Heinie—No, sir; half of it was in Italy.

WHEN I was a young man I wanted to try my hand at literature. One day I walked into the office of an editor out in Kansas City and asked him how I could get an article in his paper.

"It depends," explained the editor, "upon the size of the article. If it is a small article, such as a hair brush or a pair of scissors, the best way is to spread the paper on the table, then——

"But I didn't wait for the rest. I gave up literature then and there and became an actor.

THE great flood they have been having in Paris reminds me of the story of the hero of the Johnstown flood. This poor fellow died and went to Heaven, where Saint Peter ushered him into a room especially provided for the souls of famous flood heroes.

As he entered this room all the other heroes stood up and gave three hearty cheers—that is, they all did except one old man. This one old man remained seated and grunted cynically while the rest were cheering.

"Who's the old gink who refuses to salute the hero of the Johnstown flood?" demanded the new arrival.

"Oh, don't mind him," replied Saint Peter. "That's Noah."

HEAR about the awful time Heanie's wife had? She went over to the five and ten cent store and bought one of those new Chantecler hats—the kind with the big roosters on them. She also bought a lot of false hair, switches, rats, Marcel waves, and all that sort of thing.

BY the way, I'm going to write a burlesque on Rostand's new play and call it "chandelier." It's going to be a sort of light opera. It will be a matchless production, full of [illegible] and very little gas. The story of the play is about a poor boy who falls in love with a rich girl, with jet black hair, wearing a white mantle. After following her all around the globe he at last wires her and gets a tip to meet 'er in the cellar, where he finds her asleep at the switch. Finally, the girl is captured by the Indians who knock her senseless with a piece of pipe and threaten to burn 'er at the stake. After this—but never mind. Isn't it awful to have to use a bunch of junk like this to earn enough to pay my gas bill?

IT was once my ambition to be a real actor. I wanted to play in the classy stuff like "Hamlet" and "East Lynne" and "Why Husbands Leave Home." The first manager I asked for a job gave me some lines from "Julius Caesar" to read. I had just reached the part where Caesar says: "I have only one life to give for my country and I'm not taking any chances on that," when the manager interrupted me.

"That's rotten," he said, "Henry Irving would never have read those lines the way you do."

Discouraging as this was, I didn't lose my nerve for a second.

"No," I replied, [illegible]

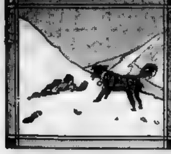
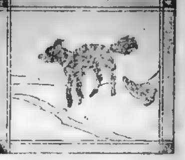
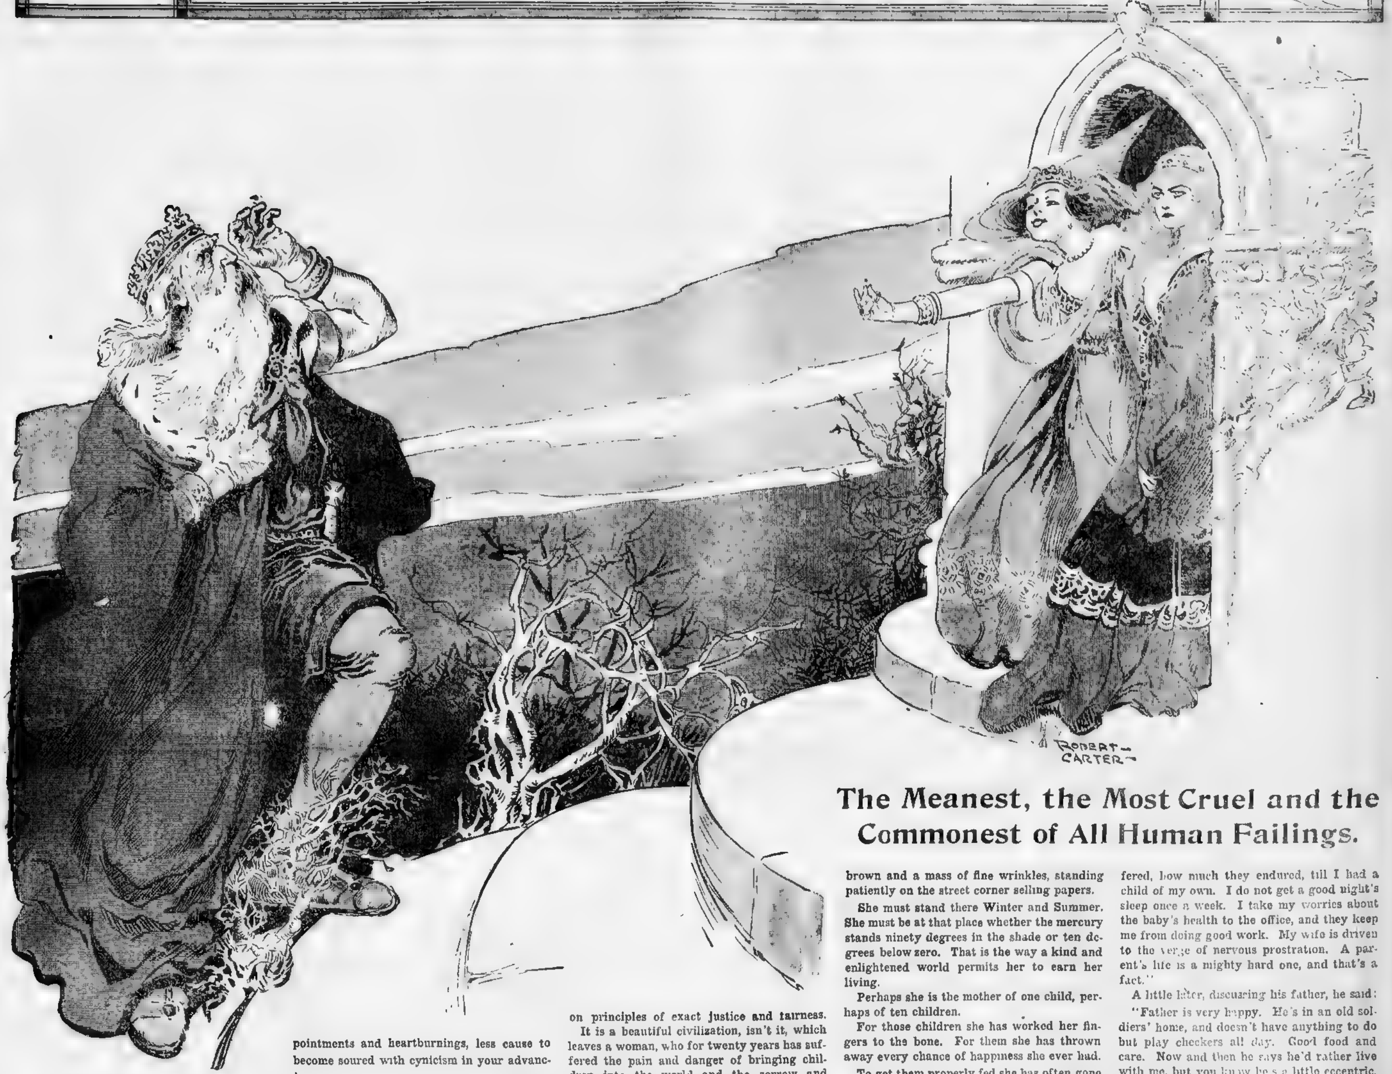
SHAKESPEARE must have had Broadway and Forty-second street in mind when he said, "All the world's a stage." You can see enough bad actors around there any old time.



INGRATITUDE.





The Meanest, the Most Cruel and the Commonest of All Human Failings.

Copyright, 1910, by the Sunday American-Journal Examiner.

SHAKESPEARE, who knew better than any other English writer what was in men's minds and souls, devoted one of his greatest plays, "King Lear," to the subject of ingratitude. If you have not read that play, read it. It will make you understand better the meanness and the cruelty of this commonest of human failings.

In the story of the foolish old King, who gave all his kingdom to two ungrateful daughters, only in the end to be turned out into the cold by them, is a lesson that will make you think. And it is well for every man and woman to think about ingratitude, and to think earnestly about it, for it underlies about half of the meanness in the world and is responsible for fully three-quarters of the misery and suffering.

It is not the intention of this article to set any reader to thinking that he or she is unappreciated or to excite the very easily aroused passion of self-sympathy.

Make it your own rule not to expect gratitude. Thereby you will have fewer disappointments and heartburnings, less cause to become soured with cynicism in your advancing years.

Do what you do for others for the pleasure that you get out of it, not with the expectation of return. When you help other men you help yourself. It makes you broader and better, and adds to your self-respect, a commodity of which you need all you can accumulate up to the point of vanity.

But while it is wise never to look for gratitude—human nature being what it is—there is no way in which you can do more for the betterment of mankind than to cultivate the habit of gratitude in yourself and to encourage among others every form of it, which is expressed in the care for the old and infirm, in the rewarding of public service and, above all, in reverence and kindness to mothers—whether they be rich or poor.

A little while ago a great stir and commotion was raised because some Congressman suggested a pension to mothers. Loud were the howls of the gentlemen who are now fattening on the tariff bill.

"Pension mothers!" they shouted. "Ridiculous! As if our burdens of taxation were not already heavy enough, without adding to them by an assessment for gratuities for a lot of indigent women!"

Naturally, from gentlemen who object to a tariff because its existence forces them to cheat in order to evade it you would expect exactly that kind of talk.

Yet if ingratitude were not an appallingly common human quality, the suggestion of a pension to mothers would be welcomed as a measure not only kind and worthy, but based on principles of exact justice and fairness.

It is a beautiful civilization, isn't it, which leaves a woman, who for twenty years has suffered the pain and danger of bringing children into the world and the sorrow and anxiety incident to bringing them up, to shift for herself as best she can when she is worn out by the work of motherhood and in her feeble age faces starvation?

Justly the soldier who has fought for his country is rewarded. He risked his life that the nation might live. It would be a cruel nation that would let him starve.

Yet there is no mother who has not risked her life as heroically and who has not worked and worried and sorrowed and suffered through all her years that her children—her gift to the nation—might become worthy citizens.

You may call this pension idea fantastic—you may say that it is placing too high an estimate upon human kindness and chivalry to suggest any such scheme as a pension for mothers, but——

Suppose you could see the mother who reared you, old and feeble and unfit to earn enough even to live in a wretched tenement and to eat the wretched food which the Food Trusts toss out to those who have but little to pay!

When you remembered all that mother had done for you, would you still think a mothers' pension idiotic?

Unable to help her yourself, would you want her to die in poverty and pain merely because you did not think the nation ought to support her?

Now, look about you a little the next time you go down to business.

On one street corner is an old woman, her hands as thin as hands can well be, her face brown and a mass of fine wrinkles, standing patiently on the street corner selling papers.

She must stand there Winter and Summer. She must be at that place whether the mercury stands ninety degrees in the shade or ten degrees below zero. That is the way a kind and enlightened world permits her to earn her living.

Perhaps she is the mother of one child, perhaps of ten children.

For those children she has worked her fingers to the bone. For them she has thrown away every chance of happiness she ever had.

To get them properly fed she has often gone hungry. That they might have an education she has gone without the clothes she needed to keep her warm.

You may argue that, all this being true, it is the duty of her own children to take care of her; it is nothing for you to worry about; you have troubles of your own.

Well, however numerous your troubles may be, it will not hurt you to add this mother's troubles to them.

Her own children may be dead, or broken-down wrecks in hospitals. But allowing that they are merely ungrateful scoundrels, who have not decency enough to care for their own mother, do you think she ought to suffer because of their cruelty?

There are, of course, "homes" for indigent women. There is one chance in a hundred that a poor old woman, knowing no one, having no friends and no church, could get into one of them. Try the experiment for some poor woman you know if you want to get a little useful light on that subject.

But such places, however well kept and provided for, can never be real homes. Certainly a life in them is a pretty poor reward for a lifetime of service such as only a mother can give.

To leave for a time the pension for mothers question (and we trust we have set you to thinking about it), let us take up the case of the average adult son or daughter, and their gratitude to their parents.

Said a proud young father the other day:

"I never realized how much my parents suffered, how much they endured, till I had a child of my own. I do not get a good night's sleep once a week. I take my worries about the baby's health to the office, and they keep me from doing good work. My wife is driven to the verge of nervous prostration. A parent's life is a mighty hard one, and that's a fact."

A little later, discussing his father, he said:

"Father is very happy. He's in an old soldiers' home, and doesn't have anything to do but play checkers all day. Good food and care. Now and then he says he'd rather live with me, but you know he's a little eccentric, cranky sometimes, and he'd be a frightful bother around the house."

"A frightful bother!" Of course. And so the poor old father must be congratulated because his war service entitles him to play checkers and do nothing in an old soldiers' home!

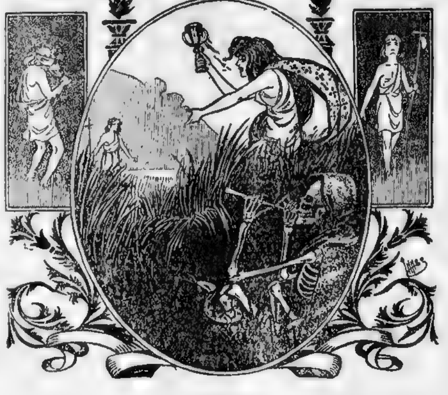
The son is now discovering that he, the son, was considerable of a bother when he was a youngster. He realizes that his father, now playing checkers, did a good deal for him, and that his mother did infinitely more and yet he calmly relegates the patient old gentleman to an old soldiers' home. Let him pray that the baby who is now keeping him awake nights does not treat him the same way when he grows old and cranky, and—worst of all from the son's point of view—improvident.

In this cartoon the artist shows the poor old Lear driven from the doors of the daughters to whom he had given his all. Because he asked a little shred of his kingly glory, a few of his followers to be with him in his age, they turned him out on the world, to die at last a madman, unfriended and suffering.

The play is a marvellous picture of ingratitude—the more remarkable because it fits many a situation to-day as well as it fitted conditions in the time in which it was written.

Read it and think about it. And after your mind has dwelt for a little time on this basest form of selfishness—ingratitude—if you can declare yourself free of any taint of it—well, you are not among those for whom this editorial was written.

Fathers—Look To Your Sons—By Ella Wheeler Wilcox



(Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal Examiner.

(Great Britain Rights Reserved.)

ARE you the father of a young son? Are you sending your son away to college, or into the world to work, without giving him any instruction which may save him from lifelong disaster?

Of course you will say that boys will be boys; that you do not expect your son to be a paragon of virtue; that you know he must learn what life is, in his own way; and that he must sow his wild oats and reap the harvest and then settle down to sensible serious things.

But have you realized just what the harvest may be that your son will reap?

Long ago, in some small village or little New England town, you perhaps scattered a few wild oats, and they never brought you any heavy harvest of trouble.

You know other men who learned life's lessons in their own way, without the direction of parents; and so you think your son will come through all right if left to himself.

But, my dear sirs, do you know how our land is changing, and how very many new dangers are menacing it from every side?

We are in touch with old world art, old world culture, old world customs and old world VICES.

Every country in the world which has grown in opulence and become luxurious in its tastes, and extravagant in its habits, has finally degenerated through its excesses and its vices.

Old Egypt, Rome, Greece have paid the price; and our own country is on the road to the same goal, unless our great men rise to the occasion and show the race its dangers and show it, too, the way out into safety by the paths of altruism and hygiene.

Our medical men are being very frank in their accumulation of statistics. If you want to know just what dangers your son may encounter, in his pleasant task of sowing wild oats, go to any prominent and respectable physician and ask him to tell you what he knows about the physical condition of a large percentage of men in America to-day. You may have heard of the "white slave traffic" [illegible] girls [illegible] sold all over our land to traders in women's bodies, and that the [illegible] is rampant in our midst.

Perhaps you say this is a state of things which has always existed and [illegible] exist; but do you realize what the menace is for YOUR SON unless you talk to [illegible] the truth about it?

In sowing his [illegible] break [illegible] form.

He runs the risk of lifelong disease; and not only disease for himself but for his wife and children.

He runs the chance of escaping with temporary illness himself, and then of producing crippled, deformed and insane children to swell the lists of the world's unfortunates.

Statistics prove that twenty-five per cent. of all blindness in children can be traced to the diseases of the father, diseases gained while sowing his wild oats."

The sympathetic friends of many seemingly good men who die before middle age of paralysis, insanity, locomotor ataxia and Bright's disease wonder at "God's will" in so afflicting suffering mortals; while the physician in charge knows that these maladies were induced by the men in their youth; in the oat field.

Eighty-five per cent. of the deaths of women who died of diseases peculiar to the sex are the result of poisoned systems—from the same cause.

It is one of the awful laws of nature that innocent women and children must suffer from the sins of men, bent upon sowing their wild oats.

Ex-President Roosevelt has said that "The conservation of vigor should be a national honor."

Vigor cannot be conserved for many years (mental or physical) if drugs or stimulants are used.

Ask your son to read the report of men of science who are studying the effects of alcohol in a careful and practical manner. From a recent bulletin published by the Committee of One Hundred on national health the following extract is taken:

"Drug habits take numerous forms, and they are more prevalent than most persons realize. The commonest form of intoxication is alcoholic. It is interesting to observe the change which has come about in the attitude of scientists toward alcohol. From having enjoyed a high place in materia medica, it is in danger of being completely discredited. So far as its habitual use is concerned the only question which remains in debate is whether in minute quantities it may be innocuous or even beneficial. In any except minute quantities it has been shown to be injurious.

It lowers the resistance of the white corpuscles, which are the natural defenders of the body. Although the phagocytes belong to the most resistant elements of our body, yet it is not safe to count on their insensibility toward poisons. It is well known that persons who indulge too freely in alcohol show far less resistance to infectious diseases than abstemious individuals.

Here is the gravest indictment that may be brought against the abuse of alcohol. It is not, however, the only one. The relation of drinking to insanity, peripheral neuritis, Bright's disease, cirrhosis of the liver, inflammation of the stomach, arteriosclerosis (a most common cause of apoplexy), tuberculosis, to crime in all its forms, and to all the possibilities incident to the hereditary transmission of a weakened organism has been pointed out. If personal hygiene is a duty, it is the duty of every man to recognize the danger from alcohol to himself and to his progeny yet unborn. Instead of copying the habits of others, he may consider the responsibility of causing others to copy his.

"A basis for computing the sickness that might be saved by total abstinence is furnished by comparison between the sick rates of abstaining and non-abstaining societies, made by Mr. H. Dillon Gouge, public actuary of South Australia, in 1892. He found that the average weeks of sickness in three societies of abstainers was 1.248; in three societies of non-abstainers the average weeks of sickness was 2.317 (lacking only one-sixth of being twice as much).

"The investigation made by the Massachusetts Bureau of Statistics of Labor in 1895 indicated the following percentages due to alcoholism.

	Per cent
Crime	84 41
Pauperism	48
Insanity	.35

Several English life insurance companies—the Sceptre, the United Kingdom and General Provident and others—have found by their statistics, running over forty years, that abstainers have a death rate about 23 per cent. lower than non-abstainers. Since the figures of the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York gave the same advantage to American abstainers (23 per cent. lower death rate), it seems fair to take the available computations of the English life insurance companies as a basis for estimating the saving of life that would result in the United States if individuals should decide to give up the use of alcohol."

These statistics, gathered by earnest and unprejudiced men, would make good reading for your son.

And in connection with this reading matter you might point out to him that it would be just as sensible, just as manly, and just as great a proof of reason on his part to run blindfolded over the roofs of ten-story buildings, and take his chances of escaping harm, as to sow his wild oats in the sexual field, and to use stimulants and drugs and run the risk of coming out with health and vitality for himself and his offspring.

Another thing you want to impress upon the mind of your son, and to pray God with all your strength to give you eloquence and convincing power while you talk.

You want to make him realize the splendid virtue of being a MANLY MAN; of abhorring anything effeminate in manner and habits; of loathing every phase of decadence and degeneracy; and keeping away from men who are of that type as he would keep away from lepers.

The forests of modern life abound in trees draped in green vines; but some of these vines are the deadly poison ivy; and as our virile young men walk joyously through the winding paths let them beware of what they touch.

It is criminal negligence to send them forth ignorant of the existence of these dangers.

Look to your sons, men of our land.

Fables of Broadway By Dorothy Dix

"THE OTHER MAIDEN"

ONCE upon a Time a Nifty Youth wooed a Beauteous Maiden and won her for his Bride, and their Wedding was largely attended by Fashionable Society, although everyone felt that it Lacked Interest, because it was a First Offense for each of the High Contracting Parties.

"Quite Amateurish my dear, not a single Divorce in it," whispered the women to each other.

"Not a thing in his Past worth repeating, by Jove!" said the men.

"Of course it isn't Smart for a married couple to be so Much in Love with each other as they are," sighed their Friends, "for in our most Exclusive Circles, Husbands and Wives are seldom, even on Speaking Terms with each other."

"Shocking bad form," continued others, "but what can you expect of the New Rich who have only had their Money Seven Years. When they have had an Ancestral Fortune that is Still in the Family after Twenty Years, as ours is, they will also be Employing Private Detectives and Butlers who keep Diaries."

"You are quite correct," replied the more Hopeful. "Just give them time and they will Fall in Line with the Customs of Our Set."

"Let us Trust so," exclaimed a Pessimist, "but I, for one, consider it Beastly Bad Taste for a Man to Kiss his Own Wife."

Notwithstanding these Dark Prophecies the Young Couple continued to be Gloriously Radiant, for they were Deeply in Love and resolved to make Matrimony a Glad, Sweet Song. They fitted themselves up a lovely apartment in which they gave Living Picture Exhibitions of How To Be Happy Though Married, and as they would sit by the Evening Electrolier the Husband would read aloud while the Wife did Fancy Work, and they would wonder how they could ever have thought it Fun to Frivol away their Time in going to Parties or hot-footing it up and down Broadway.

"Home, Home, Sweet Home for ours," the Young Husband would say, as he struck a Noble Attitude in the midst of his Wedding Presents "there is nothing so Beautiful and Elevating as the Simple Life that is lived in the Privacy and Purity of one's Own Nest, where one is safe from the Lures and Temptations of the Wicked World."

"That Listens Grand," his friends would say to each other, "but we opine that the Quiet Nest Thing would get on our Nerves if we had Much of it, and while we apprehend that it is Desirable to have a Home to go to when Other Places close up still we do not see ourselves using the Setting Hen Act as a Continuous Performance.

"Moreover, while it is True that our Young Friend's wings have been Clipped by Matrimony, we are Wise that the Feathers will grow out again, and we hazard the guess that he will Fly the Domestic Coop, for we have seen this Phenomenon happen more than once in Matrimony."

Now, the Young Man's Bride was, indeed, a Model of all the Virtues. She was a Good Looker all right and not only Possessed the Joyous Raiment but could Sport the Glad Rags with the style of a Dress Model. When it came to the table-talk she was a Spellbinder, and in addition she could do Stunts in the Housekeeping line that had a Professor of Domestic Economy tied to the Post.

This being the case it looked as if she had a cinch on Domesticating a Husband so that he would never care to Wander from his own Radiator. Nevertheless in Time, although the Young Man was still deeply in Love, he began to find out that the Wholesome and Nutritious Roast Beef and Potatoes of the Family table sort of palled on his Appetite, and to pine for Lobster and Champagne. Also he found himself dropping to sleep over the Thrilling Game of Pinochle that he and Wife played Every Night, the while he wondered if the Boys were still sitting around a Jackpot at 3 a. m. Conversation likewise began to languish because he and his Wife had told each other everything they Knew, and they got so that they Fell with Joy on the neck of any Bore that came to call of an evening.

Under these circumstances, which are not New to the Student of History, it was not long before the man began to make Sneaks of an Evening and to put up to his Wife Plausible Fairy Stories about having to meet a man from Oshkosh on business, or sit up with a Sick Friend, but the Wife, who had cut her Wisdom Teeth already, did not fall for these Ancient Gags worth a cent.

"How is it," she said, "that you spend your evenings abroad, for I thought you were strong for the Home Nest Theory?"

"I am," replied the Husband, "I think there is No Place like Home for a Woman, and it is a source of Great Pleasure to me to know that I have placed you Safe in your Nest where no Harm can befall you. As for me, being a man, things are Different, and it is Necessary that I should Mix with the Crowd and Brighten myself up."

These words greatly grieved the Wife, and she shed many bitter tears during the Long Evenings when she was left alone at home while her husband was hitting things up along Broadway. Perceiving at last, however, that Domestic Hydraulics had no effect, she turned off the tear ducts, and pinning on her Hat she fared forth among the Millinery and Dressmaking shops.

"I have a hunch," she said to herself, "that Home has lost Interest for my Husband because Domestic Life lacks Excitement and Ginger, and so if I want to Hold him, it is up to me to give him a Run for his Money."

So the next evening when her husband telephoned from the office that he had been Unexpectedly Detained by Business, instead of tearing off a Wail and handing him a Bunch of Hot Reproaches, she merely replied in a cheerful voice:

"Very well! It's Really a Lucky Coincidence, because some Friends have just Invited me to go with them to the Theatre and to Supper afterward, and I had accepted, although I hated the Idea of leaving you at Home Alone."

Then she hung up the receiver before he could ask her any questions, and, although he Won in the little game that he Sat in that night, somehow he did not Enjoy it.

Yet he should have been Perfectly Happy, for there were no more Curtain Lectures no matter how Late he Stayed out. Nor did he have to invent Excuses to get away of an evening. On the contrary his Wife always appeared Anxious to Hustle him off, and when he got home he generally found her just removing her Coronet Braid before the Mirror, and that he was barely in time to unhook her Latest Paris Creation.

It did not take much of this to get him going, for it is one thing for a man to Enjoy himself in the Gay World, and Another for him to know that his Wife is Enjoying herself thereabouts, and so it was not long before the husband went to his wife and thus addressed her:

"I fear," he said, "that we are Neglecting our Home, and I begin to pine once more for the Quiet and Privacy of our Own little Nest."

"So do I," replied the Wife, "and I will be Glad to fly back to the Domestic Perch if you will bear me company, but I do not propose to Roost there any more by my Lonely."

"I was a Selfish Brute to ever Desert you," returned the Husband, "but I only did it to Find out if my Wings were Merely clipped or really Cut off by Matrimony, and now that I know that I can Fly I am content to remain in the Home Cote."

"My wings are also in the same able Condition," casually remarked the wife.

But thereafter the Husband remained a Pattern of Domesticity, for it takes the Snap out of opening Champagne Chorus Girls to Wonder if your Wife is Nibbling on a Bird and a Small bottle with a Gay Party at the Pazaza.

Moral: This Fable teaches that there are More Ways than One to Nail a Man to his own Hearthstone.

Trustfulness' Value

By LANDON CARTER.

PATIENT trustfulness is perhaps the highest form of influencing youth, for how can a child fail to feel always on the defensive and irritable, if the attitude of parents and guardians is one of suspicion?

Such influences affect character, for mature life invariably reveals earlier surroundings and influences.

Certain books of the Bible might be almost termed treatises on patience, so full are they of beautiful examples which teach its true value and the responsibility of its cultivation.

Parents should never forget that they have a claim to the respect and service of their children. Of course, the necessity of unceasing patience is most wearing and trying; however, a little tactfulness at the proper time can frequently avert scenes and is the secret of a marvellous influence that can be possessed by all; for tact means thoughtfulness—not the semblance of it, but a real interest expressed in the grace of word and deed.

In an ordinary conversation, if tact avoids contention and arguments, how much more powerful and doubly necessary is it in the care and guidance of children.

Abnormal unselfishness on the part of parents is a cruel influence for children as well as for themselves, because it makes the children selfish, while it is almost certain that in the future parents will be the victims of this selfishness they have created.

It is difficult to learn patience enough except through its need, which teaches the cruelty of thoughtless words and the injustice of judging from only partial knowledge. Such consequences are unpitying, and carry with them power to terribly wound and perhaps forever alienate our loved ones; so it is always better to fix our minds on the certainty that a "gentle answer turneth away wrath" than consider what possible excuse there may be for us in case of unexpected development.

Words are by no means the surest evidence of impatience; for susceptible, sensitive persons are frequently more affected by a gesture or a change of tone than by mere verbal statements, which have power to conceal as well as express feelings.

Impatience often results in a state of feud, which, even though temporary, is always a shock to any form of love—without which would our lives become lonely and our homes desolate.

More can be accomplished by patience, trust and amity than by harsher methods which always embitter and alienate; for gentle encouragement often succeeds where correction is powerless.

"Letters to My Son"

A story whose first lines throb right into the heart, touching the eyes tenderly with tears,——

The sacred maternal confidences of a young mother to be, written that "her son" might certainly know her manifold love, though she should not survive to tell him.

Suggesting some beautiful hymeneal hymn sung in a garden of flowers beyond which a spire rises in the glow.

Nothing so delicate and tenderly true has been produced in years, so savingly mingled with feminine humor and little whimsical touches of grace.

EMMET'S MEMORY HONORED TO-NIGHT

Clan-na-Gael Will Pay Tribute at Meeting in the Tremont Theatre.

To-night in Tremont Theatre the 132d anniversary of the birth of Robert Emmet will be celebrated by a memorial meeting held under the auspices of the Clan-na-Gael.

The meeting will be presided over by James H. Vahey of Watertown. He will present as the orator of the evening James M. Sullivan of New York, who will speak a eulogy of the life and deeds of Emmet.

The list of invited guests includes the names of Governor Draper, Lieutenant Governor Frothingham, President Treadway of the Senate, Speaker Walker of the House of Representatives, United States Senators Lodge and Crane, the Mayors of Boston, Quincy, Lowell and Cambridge, the members of both branches of the State Legislature, of the Boston City Council and the national officers of the Ancient Order of Hibernians.

The officers of the different German societies of Boston and vicinity have accepted invitations to take seats on the platform as the guests of the executive committee. Their presence will be an interesting feature of the meeting.

Before the speaking opens, a concert of Irish music will be rendered by the Irish Choral Society under the direction of Charles F. Forrester.

The speakers and officers of the reception committee will be escorted to the theatre by a military parade in charge of Major O'Leary of Lowell and Captain O'Donovan of Lynn.

The committee of arrangements for the meeting is made up as follows: James O'Sullivan of Lowell, chairman; James I. O'Neil of Brighton, P. J. Colbert of Boston, P. A. Foley and Thomas J. Collins of South Boston, Bartholomew Crowley of Haverhill, Jeremiah Dineen of Neponset, John M. Cotter of Cambridge and James J. Harold of Waltham.

NEW ORGANIZATION.

Knights of St. John to Aid Cause of Temperance.

Rev. Francis J. Butler, "the Father Mathew of New England," is actively organizing the Knights of St. John the Baptist, a cadet temperance society for young men of the Catholic faith.

When Father Butler was pastor of St. Leo's Church in [illegible] he founded the society and established its first council in his parish.

He has recently established a council in St. Anne's Parish, Somerville, of which he is now the rector.

In this Somerville council there are two companies, A and B. Their officers are:

Company A—Captain Herbert Masden and First Lieutenant David Kelley, Second Lieutenant John [illegible], First Sergeant Eustis Macdonald, Second Sergeant Timothy Gannon.

Company B—Captain Matthew G. Sullivan, First Lieutenant Louis B. Connelley, Second Lieutenant James Hurley, First Sergeant Robert [illegible], Second Sergeant William Meskill.

The two companies are to be drilled by John Rogers, who is one of the knights and has served five years in the militia. He intends to start drilling the boys within a [illegible] first public appearance in uniform in the Holy [illegible] Temperance League parade early in June.

Holy Week Services.

Holy Week begins on Palm Sunday, which this year falls on March 20.

The exercises at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross will be as follows:

Office of Tenebrae—Wednesday, March 23; Holy Thursday, March 24; Good Friday, March 25. On the first and second nights the service will begin at 7:30 o'clock. The Good Friday service will be at seven.

On Holy Thursday morning at 9 o'clock the blessing of the Holy Oils will take place.

The mass of the Pre-Sanctified will be on Good Friday morning at nine.

The blessing of the Baptismal Font and the Pascal candle will be on Holy Saturday morning at 8 o'clock.

The masses on Easter Sunday, March 27, will be at 6, 7, 8, 9, 11:30. A Pontifical mass will be said at 10:15. Solemn Vespers and sermon will be on Easter Sunday at 4 p. m.

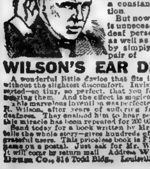
Deaf Persons Can Now Hear

Wonderful Invention Has Delivered Thousands from the Handicap of Deafness.



Don't think you have to worry along if you can't hear well. Every deaf person is at a hopeless disadvantage, deprived of social pleasure, barred from active business. Any dullness of hearing is a constant mortification.

But now this misery is unnecessary. Every deaf person can hear as well as ever before by simply wearing a pair of

WILSON'S EAR DRUMS

A wonderful little device that fits into the ears without the slightest discomfort. Invisible when inserted—so tiny, so perfect, that you forget you are wearing them. And the effect is magical.

This marvelous invention was perfected by Mr. Geo. R. Wilson, after years of suffering from hopeless deafness. They enabled him to hear perfectly. And this miracle has been repeated for 200,000 persons.

Send today for a book written by Mr. Wilson that tells the whole story—gives hundreds of letters from grateful users. This priceless book is FREE for your name on a postal. Just ask for Mr. Wilson's book. It will come by return mail. Address Wilson Ear Drum Co., 316 Todd Bldg., Louisville, Ky. (3)

LEADING IRISH SOCIETIES OF BOSTON

IRISH CHARITABLE TO HEAR BIG SPEAKERS

Members of Society to Gather at Young's for 173rd Banquet.

THE 173d annual dinner of the Charitable Irish Society of Boston will be held on March 17, St. Patrick's Day, at Young's Hotel. Among the oldest organizations of its kind in the republic, the members of the "Charitable Irish" take just pride in the fact that the St. Patrick's Day dinner was only twice omitted, and on each occasion for a highly patriotic reason. The omissions took place first in the Revolutionary War, and next during the war of the Rebellion. The number of members of the society who were enrolled in the armies of both wars, so widely separated by the years, was so large that it was found best to omit the St. Patrick's Day banquet. With those exceptions the society's dinner on March 17 has always been in Boston the leading observance of St. Patrick's Day.

The after-dinner speakers this year will be:

John B. Dore, the incoming president.

Richard J. Lane, who will preside as toastmaster.

Arthur Brisbane of New York.

Justice Hammond of the Supreme bench of Massachusetts.

Hon. Edwin U. Curtis, Collector of the Port.

President Ballantyne of the Boston City Council.

President Pirie of the Scotch Charitable Society.

The Charitable Irish Society was founded in the town of Boston in 1737. Its founders had two objects in view, which they set forth formally as follows:

"First, to cultivate a spirit of unity and harmony among all resident Irishmen and their descendants in the Massachusetts colony, and while adhering to the fundamental principle which underlies all governments—obedience to properly constituted authority—to advance socially and morally the interests of the Irish people.

"Second—To alleviate suffering and to aid such of its members as by the vicissitudes of fortune might be deserving of its charity.

"Remembering that morality, industry and education are the levers which move and direct the world, the present members bind themselves anew to maintain and perpetuate the purposes of the society as expressed by its founders—so that even our fellow citizens of other origin may be converted into helpers ready to aid us in developing and strengthening our resources, and that the interests of Irishmen and their descendants may be advanced by encouraging the culture of those great principles which, guided by charity, tend to make the perfect man."

The present officers of the society are: James H. Devlin, Jr., president; John B. Dore, vice president; Thomas F. Taff, treasurer; John J. McGrath, assistant secretary; Patrick O'Loughlin, keeper of the silver key and chairman of the board of directors. The directors are Arthur W. Dolan, Bartholomew A. Brickley, Francis W. Fogarty, Bernard J. Joyce.

Three of the prominent men to take part in Irish Charitable celebration.

JAMES H. DEVLIN.

TRINITY ALUMNAE TO HEAR T. A. DALY

Under the auspices of the Trinity College Alumnae Association of Boston, T. A. Daly, the famous poet humorist of Philadelphia, will lecture at the Tuileries, on Commonwealth avenue, this afternoon. The subject of Mr. Daly's talk will be "New Neighbors." It will consist largely of sketches from Italian life in America, to the faithful portrayal of which Mr. Daly has devoted a large share of his talent and attention.

He is a former president of the American Press Humorists and is particularly noted for his Italian dialect verse.

Mr. Daly has written two books of verses, "Canzoni" and "Carmina." Both volumes have won warm praise from high critics of literature.

A. O. H. NOTES

State President Joseph J. Rogers, State Vice-President John H. Dillan, Secretary Jeffrey Sullivan, Treasurer Edward McCarthy, State Chaplain Rev. Philip J. O'Donnell, County President John F. Donnelly of Middlesex, County President Richard Dwyer of Suffolk and County President Heber McKenna of Essex, will meet the committee of the Lowell A. O. H., this afternoon in Hibernian Hall, Lowell, and make preliminary arrangements for the State convention and parade to be held in that city August 4.

Division 50 of Suffolk County will observe St. Patrick's Day with a literary and musical entertainment in Odd Fellows Hall, 8 Warren street, on Friday evening, March 18. Ex-Representative Martin P. Higgins will deliver the principal address. Irish and American melodies will make up the concert programme. All members of the A. O. H. and Ladies' Auxiliary are invited to attend. The committee includes Patrick Burns, James Moran, James J. Daniels, Cornelius Mulgovan and Thomas Burns.

The First Hibernian Regiment will have new uniforms and equipment ready for the parade at Lowell during the State convention. A complete roster of men will be in line under command of Colonel John O'Leary. Weekly drills are being held under the direction of the staff officers, and each company is at the present time in excellent condition.

Division 40 of Boston will hold its annual ball in Paine Hall on Monday evening, April 18. Major Timothy Scott, Captain William F. Henderson, John Cummings, Denis Sullivan and Joseph D. McCarthy are making the necessary arrangements. Military men are requested to attend in uniform.

County President Richard Dwyer, Rev. Denis J. Wholey, P. R., pastor of St. Joseph's Church, Roxbury, who is also county chaplain, and the other members of the county executive, are making arrangements for the Memorial Mass for deceased members at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross, on Patriots' Day, April 19.

David I. Walsh of Clinton, will be the orator at the St. Patrick's Day exercises of the Worcester Hibernians in Hibernian Hall that evening. The customary parade of the Worcester County divisions will be omitted this year.

County President Richard Dwyer of Suffolk announces that the reports submitted show the county organizations to be in excellent condition as to the number of men and amount of money in treasury.

Division 68 of Suffolk has voted to organize a military company. It will be attached to the First Hibernian Regiment. Weekly drills will commence early next month.

National President Matthew Cummings and State Chaplain Rev. Philip J. O'Donnell will address an open meeting of Fall River Hibernians this afternoon.

Suffolk County has voted to send three delegates to the National Convention in Portland, Ore., next July. One of the three is County President Dwyer.

Division 10 of Chelsea will observe St. Patrick's Day with their customary banquet. Councillor James M. Curly will deliver the principal address.

Division 31 of Dorchester has pledged five hundred dollars to Rev. Father Maguire, S. J., as a donation to the O'Connell Memorial fund.

Division 24 of Boston will observe the St. Patrick's anniversary in Phoenix Hall, 724 Washington street, on Monday evening, March 14.

Division 13 of South Boston will hold their annual ladies' night in Dahlgren Hall, E street, on March 17.

Division 76 of Dorchester will meet in Washington Hall, Codman square, this afternoon.

Division 17 of Roxbury will meet this afternoon at 8 Warren street.

Archbishop Ill.

MILWAUKEE, March 5.—Archbishop Messmer, who only recently returned from a trip abroad for the benefit of his health, is again seriously ill.

HIBERNIANS WAR ON SCURRILOUS CARDS

Leading officers of the Ancient Order of Hibernians have taken steps to check the exhibition or sale of objectionable post cards which caricature the Irish race. Boston is the scene of active work in this regard.

Swarms of these cards have, in past years, been put upon the market always before St. Patrick's Day. The A. O. H. officers have asked the postal authorities to exclude the offensive postals.

The Irish people are not the only complainants. Last year, during the Jewish holiday, some enterprising art dealers got out for sale and distribution throughout the country an illustrated postal which was extremely insulting to the people of the Hebrew race. It is said that nearly half a million of those postals were seized and destroyed by order of the postmaster-general, George Von L. Meyer.

Three years ago President Roosevelt was appealed to by prominent Irishmen for the suppression of some vicious postal cards, whose only object seemed to be to bring ridicule upon the great Celtic element of the country. Mr. Roosevelt took prompt action, when the nature of the cards was proved to him. On the suggestion of the President the cards were kept out of the United States mails.

CATHOLIC NEWS

Arrangements are under way by the parishioners of St. William's Church, Dorchester avenue and Belfort street, Dorchester, for their first annual reunion and dancing party to be held on the evening of April 11th in Paul Revere and Talbot Halls, Mechanics Building. The women and the men of the parish are uniting their sincere endeavors with the pastor, Rev. James McCarthy, to make the affair a pronounced success. The proceeds will go towards the church building fund and much is in store as to the result. Myles Sweeney is the unanimous choice for floor director and chairman of the committee on dancing. Edward T. Sheehan is chairman of the executive committee, and John Skinners, chairman of the souvenir committee.

A two weeks' mission will begin its second week to-day at the Church of Notre Dame de Pitie, on Hawly street, North Cambridge. The mission is being conducted by the Oblate Fathers of Montreal. The first week was for the women of the parish and next week will be for the men. Services will be held every morning at 5:30 and 8 o'clock and every evening at 7:30 o'clock.

Work on St. Margaret's new parochial school near the church property on Columbia road, Dorchester, is fast nearing completion. It is one of the finest school buildings in Boston. Builders and school committees from other sections of the State have come to view the new school and leave with a good impression of Father Ryan's ideas.

Members of St. Joseph's Church, Lynn, will hold a novena in honor of St. Joseph, the patron saint of the church. It will begin March 11 and continue until March 19. High Mass will be said on both of these dates. Rev. Fr. O'Connor of South Boston preached the Lenten sermon at the church last Wednesday night.

The St. Mary's C. T. A. Society of Lynn is to give a costume party after Lent. John F. Tenney, president, has the affair in charge. At a meeting held by the society this week the speakers were William Garton, William Duffy, Patrick Connors and James Fee.

The annual reunion of St. Mary's Parish, Lynn, held in January, netted $2100. It was the most successful reunion in the history of the parish at the head of which is Monsignor Arthur J. Teeling. Rev. T. A. Curtin, assistant pastor of the church, had charge of the affair.

The annual retreat for the men of St. Matthew's Church, Norfolk street, Dorchester, by the Passionist Fathers, which began last Sunday, will close to-day. The success of the retreat is pleasing to the fathers and the pastor, Rev. John A. Donnelly.

Extensive arrangements are being made for the annual banquet of the Cambridge Union of Cambridge, which will be held in the Dunster Cafe, Harvard square, on Thursday evening, March 17. Archbishop O'Connell will deliver the principal address.

Rev. Joseph Parent, pastor of St. Jean Baptiste Church, Lynn, inaugurated a class in French for his parish members this week. His assistant, Rev. A. Cordier, assisted by Orphee Gingras, one of the parish members, will have charge of the class.

Rev. John Dugnan of St. John's church, Peabody, preached the Lenten sermon at Sacred Heart Church, Lynn, last Wednesday night by invitation of Rev. William J. McCarthy, acting pastor in charge.

St. Joseph's C. T. A. Society of Lynn will receive holy communion on Palm Sunday, March 20. The society is making plans now for its annual Easter ball to be given March 28.

REMEMBERED A POSLAM AD.

Good Fortune Results in Freedom From Distressing Skin Troubles.

To their good fortune in remembering a poslam advertisement many have recently attributed their extraordinary cures of eczema, acne, tetter and other skin troubles. The necessity for a skin remedy like poslam might not have seemed pressing at the time the announcement was read, though they have since found that there is always a necessity in the household for poslam. Apart from its use for serious skin diseases, whenever minor skin affections appear, such as pimples, muddy complexion, inflamed skin, rash, herpes, insect bites, itching feet or scalp, these yield to it readily and are quickly banished. The unusual properties of poslam are demonstrated when it stops all itching with first application and restores the health of the skin in cases where an entire limb or a large part of the body is affected.

Every druggist keeps both the 50-cent size (for minor troubles) and the $2 jar, and either of these may be obtained at all Riker-Jaynes stores and Houghton & Dutton's drug dept., as well as other reliable drug stores.

But no one is even asked to purchase poslam without first obtaining a sample package, which will be sent by mail, free of charge, upon request, by the Emergency Laboratories, 32 West Twenty-fifth street, New York City.

CHILDREN OF THE GAEL Whose Names Shine in History

JOHN HENRY FOLEY.

SOME of the most beautiful public memorials of England and Ireland are the product of the inspired hand of John Henry Foley, who was born in Dublin in 1818.

The great statue of Hampden in Westminster Hall was carved by Foley. So were the effigy of Caractacus at the Mansion House in London, and of Lord Harding at Calcutta. The latter is considered one of the finest equestrian statues ever made. He also did most of the work on the gorgeous Albert memorial in Hyde Park.

In Ireland the best specimens of Foley's genius are his statues of Oliver Goldsmith and of Edmund Burke, in Dublin, and of the great apostle of temperance, Father Mathew, at the head of Patrick street in Cork city.

Foley was only thirteen years old when he became a student in the art schools of the Royal Dublin Society. In 1834, when he was sixteen, he entered the Royal Academy in London. Five years later he made his first appearance as an exhibitor with his "Death of Abel" and a figure of "Innocence." In 1840 he attracted the attention of the world of art by his group [illegible] his [illegible].

At the time of his death, which took place in London in 1874, one of the greatest art writers of the day said of him:

"John Henry Foley was one of the greatest practical sculptors of our generation. His art, combining as it did the severity of the ancient with the [illegible] of the modern school, especially in historic portraiture, is the finest yet seen in England. His devotion to his art was as intense as his manners were simple. He was the creature of no literary [illegible] and was never caught by the lure of what we call society. He had all the sprightly qualities of his countrymen and nothing delighted him more than to see his few familiar friends sit round his table. His heart was true to his Celtic soul and in every [illegible] of a [illegible] he was [illegible] the first to answer."

Besides his gifts as a sculptor, Foley wrote poetry [illegible] it was good poetry [illegible] testify. He was also an accomplished musician, which talent, however, he carefully reserved for the exclusiveness of his domestic circle.

Retreat for Young Men.

The annual retreat of the Young Men's Catholic Association of Boston will be opened next Sunday at the Church of the Immaculate Conception. The retreat will continue through the week and will conclude with a general communion the following Sunday.

Because of the large attendance at this annual retreat the exercises will be conducted simultaneously in the main upper church and in St. Valentine's chapel.

The priests selected to conduct the services are Father Joseph Dinand, S. J., in the upper church and Father T. A. White, S. J., in St. Valentine's chapel.

"Immigration Problem."

"The Immigration Problem, from a Practical Standpoint," is the title of an address to be given next Sunday evening before the Holy Name Society of Charlestown by Jeremiah J. Hurley. Mr. Hurley is deputy commissioner of immigration. Few men in the United States have a better grasp of the great problem of which he is to speak. He has studied it at close range in all its phases for years and has at his fingers' ends a vast amount of data of the most valuable and interesting kind.

REV. FATHER GASSON TO REPEAT LECTURE

Illustrated Story of the "Passion Play" to Be Given in Boston College Hall.

Fr. Gasson's fine lecture on the "Passion Play" will be repeated Sunday evening, March 20, in Boston College Hall. The proceeds of the lecture are for the new college building fund. The splendid views and the interesting descriptions by Fr. Gasson, gained by personal residence and observation at Oberammergau, make the entertainment most delightful and instructive.

The members of the committee in charge of the [illegible] Court Lion, M. [illegible]:

John Canning, James J. Brown, James J. Conway, William H. Conroy, John Keefe, George F. Daly, Dennis Crowley, William Long, William F. Mead, Thomas P. McNamara, Charles P. Shea, William Cassell, James L. Hickman, James J. Hickman, Jr., Peter P. O'Meally, Wallace P. Lyon, William A. Moore, John J. Madden, George W. Eakin, Peter J. Griffin, Thomas McLaughlin, John J. Crowley, Emmons Cotter and Charles E. Fay.

Knights to Give Dance.

Rose Croix Council, Knights of Columbus, of Roxbury, is arranging for a dancing party to be held in Catholic Union Hall on the evening of April 12. Many men prominent in Boston public life are on the committee.

THAT TOO MUCH ATTENTION CANNOT BE GIVEN TO THE IMPORTANCE OF BEING ON TIME. PROMPTNESS IS THE BIGGEST ASSET SOME MEN POSSESS. I WOULD RATHER BE PROMPT THAN TALENTED. I WANT THEM TO SAY "DONT WORRY ABOUT BUSTER, HE SAID HE WOULD BE HERE AND HE WILL" DOING A THING AT THE RIGHT TIME IS MORE IMPORTANT THAN DOING IT. Lady Duff-Gordon's Exquisite New Designs

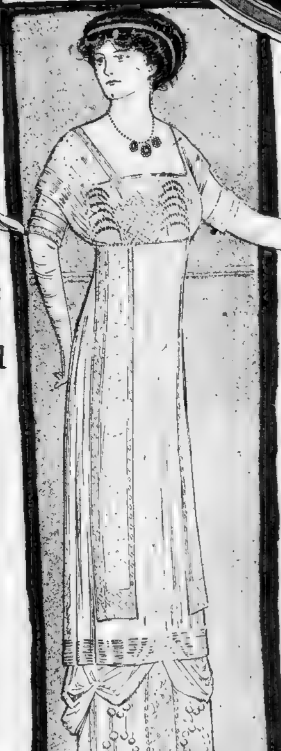
Gown I made for Lady Nayler-Leyland of oyster gray silk shot with pink, the hem embroidered with dull gold. Over this foundation is a robe of blush gray chiffon, and over this another robe of pinkish gray net embroidered with gold and silver grapes and leaves. Around the waist is a swirl of net enriched with gold and silver vine leaves. The decolletage is all of flesh-colored chiffon, and over this is a fichu of pale bluish gray tulle with vine leaves of brilliant silver.



The Countess of Mar and Kellie's costume. Over a petticoat of pale yellow chiffon and delicate silver lace is a robe of dead-white satin charmeuse, caught up with festoons to show the petticoat Over this again is another robe of white silk net embroidered with silver bugles. The upper part of the decolletage is of flesh-colored tulle, with a pale blue ribbon run through the top

The Duff-Gordon Coat of Arms

The Greatest Living Creator of Fashions Explains Some of Her Gowns Modelled Especially to Harmonize with the Temperament and Personality of the Individual

By Lady Duff-Gordon "Lucile"

THE most beautiful and the most appropriate gown that I have made for an American since my arrival here is that for Mrs. Philip Lydig.

But what a subject!

She is an exquisitely beautiful woman of a most unusual and pronounced type; an American, a fashionable New Yorker, but with the soul of old Castile and Cuba slumbering within her. It was that soul that I dressed, and the effect was perfect. In my completed gown she impersonated all the smouldering fire and beauty of Spain

The gown is different from anything I ever made—is different, in fact, from any gown in the world, and the reason is that Mrs. Lydig is entirely different from any other woman. She is a type by herself, with an immense amount of temperament, and temperament, you know, comes from the soul.

Let me tell you about the gown now, step by step. When I first looked at Mrs. Lydig I saw the whole scheme of coloring in a flash, just as I afterward carried it out. It was as if the whole scheme were photographed upon my brain.

In the first place, there is a skimpy short slip of flesh-colored satin charmeuse, the softest fabric made, and this is just wide enough to permit the wearer to walk with short steps, the entire hem not measuring more than a yard and a quarter around. This had the bottom finished by a scant frill of flesh-colored lace five inches deep, through which the feet and ankles show, and it is slit up one side about ten or twelve inches, so that it opens when the outer robes fall back. Of course Mrs. Lydig will wear with it the most beautiful flesh-colored silk stockings and slippers. Perhaps at times her slippers will be of silver to match the enrichment on the outer robe.

Now, over this skimpy flesh-colored satin slip is a filmy dress made of alternate strips of flesh-colored lace as sheer as cobwebs, and flesh-colored chiffon. This and the charmeuse slip are fastened together and are put on as one piece, while the outer robe of velvet is slipped on quite separately, as if it were a mantle.

This velvet robe is of the most wonderful shade of old scarlet, with a silvery bloom on it. It is lined throughout with peach-colored satin, which is rolled back in a sort of collar about the neck.

Down one side of the open front and about each sleeve is a band of chinchilla fur Down the other side extends a band of wonderful silver enrichment in dull and oxidized tones. This also forms the girdle and a decoration on the corsage and sleeves.

The velvet robe fastens over at one side, and is caught together by four strange, antique-looking ornaments of old silver, with tassels hanging from each.

A note of strikingly contrasting color is lent to the whole toilette by a chiffon bow of the most vivid parrot green fastened to the lace decolletage in the centre of the bust. The bow is crossed in the centre by a bit of old blue and dull gold Persian embroidery Let me add that this note of contrast seems to typify Mrs. Lydig. That is a psychological note. I know from an inward conviction that it belongs there, that it makes the robe more distinctly the property of Evening gown for Lady Evelyn Guinness, with a flesh-colored under-dress of charmeuse satin, and over it a clinging robe of flesh-colored chiffon embroidered in gold and rhinestones. About the low-cut corsage is pale gold passementerie, and at the bottom frills and flounces of lace, with pink roses. Wrapped about the figure is a mass of powder-blue crepe de chine, lined with pink crepe de chine.

This gown, which I made for Mrs. Philip Lydig, has a skimpy slip of flesh-colored satin charmeuse, finished at the bottom with a frill of flesh-colored lace, and slit up the side twelve inches. Over the slip is a filmy dress of flesh-colored lace and chiffon, and over this an outer robe of old scarlet velvet lined with peach-colored satin, which is thrown back at the neck to form a collar. The decorations are of chinchilla and silver.

Over all was a fichu drapery of white tulle spangled with silver bugles. This drapery continued in long stole-like ends quite to the bottom of the tulle tunic.

A gown that pleased me was one that I made for Lady Evelyn Guiness. She is thoroughly artistic in her temperament, and so I was able to make for her a most artistic creation.

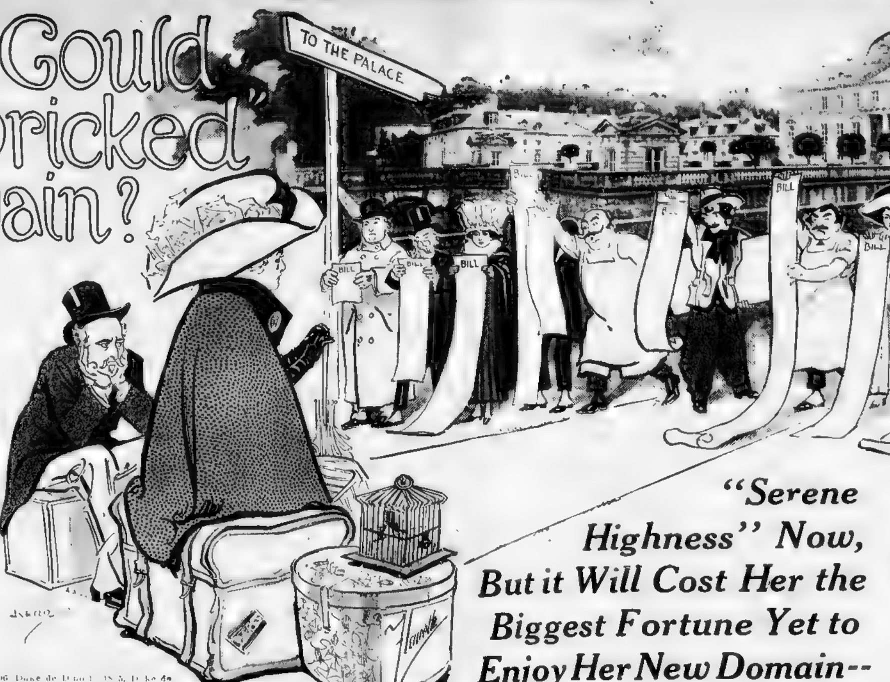
Anna Gould "Goldbricked" Again?



"Serene Highness" Now, But it Will Cost Her the Biggest Fortune Yet to Enjoy Her New Domain—Title Just as Debt Ridden and Empty as All the Others!

POOR Anna Gould!

To use the language of those American circles where the talents of the European aristocracy are best appreciated, has she been "gold-bricked" again?

By the death of his father her present husband has fallen heir to the ancient principality of Sagan in Prussia, which carries with it the titles of Duke and Prince of Sagan and the prefix of "Serene Highness." These honors will, of course, be shared by his American wife.

"Her Serene Highness, the Duchess."

That appears to be something worth striving for, some compensation for unspeakable humiliations, for affronts and deceptions innumerable, for ruinous expenditures and years of social struggling.

But the Duchess cannot enter into possession of her principality because it is in the hands of creditors who will not give it up except on payment of an enormous sum, possibly exceeding that which the Duchess has already paid for the debts of Count Boniface de Castellane.

There stands the ancient castle of the Sagans, with its moat and its drawbridge and its portcullis and its donjon. From its lofty battlements flies the [illegible] tered banner of the race. All around stand loyal peasantry, ready and eager to do homage to the gracious American Duchess, who would come among them to spend her ducats.

But she cannot go there, simply because a syndicate of money lenders, wine merchants, tailors and other vulgar commercial persons keep hold of the property until the debts of all the Sagans are settled.

Recently Anna Gould's husband, hitherto known as Prince Helie de Sagan, proposed to open his ancient castle of Sagan for the first time, and give his bride the pleasure of residing there as chatelaine. He sent word that he was coming and sent at the same time a large consignment of very choice wines and delicate eatables. Helie is considered the best judge of wines and liqueurs in Paris.

The base-born caitiff creditors seized first the wines and the delicacies and then informed the Prince that he could not occupy the castle unless he paid his father's debts.

To understand Anna Gould's present position it is necessary to say something of her husband's family history. Undoubtedly she has come into a remarkable collection of ancient titles, more than any woman who has married into the French aristocracy.

The founder of the family was Helie Talleyrand, who was Lord of Grignols, in 1109—over seven hundred years ago. He was a reputed younger son of Helie, Sovereign Count of Perigord. The family went along as moderately distinguished members of the nobility for several centuries. In 1750 the name was changed to Talleyrand-Perigord.

Then came the astonishing Charles Maurice de Talleyrand Perigord, the most successful turncoat that ever lived. He got something out of the old regime in France, something out of the Revolution, something out of the Directory, something out of Napoleon, something out of the restored monarchy.

He was created Prince of Benevento in 1806, Duke de Dino in 1815, Duke de Talleyrand and Duke de Valencay in 1817. His nephew and heir married the Princess Dorothea of Courland, Semigallien and Sagan, and with her inherited vast estates in Prussia, including the feudal dukedom and castle of Sagan. The King of Prussia then made the French nobleman Duke and Prince of Sagan, with the prefix of "Serene Highness."

Most of these titles now belong to Anna Gould, although the dukedom of Valencay has been ceded to Helie's younger brother, Boson, who was married to Miss Helen Morton and was divorced by her. Another title, that of Duke de Dino, was ceded to a cousin who has been married to two American women and divorced from both. The rest of the titles remain with the head of the family.

How is it that the Sagan estates are so crippled by debt? Because four of the most distinguished spendthrifts in Europe have been burdening them for years with their debts. It would really be quite surprising if Helie de Talleyrand had not inherited more debts than Boni de Castellane was able to pile up by his own exertions in eight years.

Helie's grandfather, who has not been dead many years, was the last member of the family who owned any unincumbered property. He possessed the Chateau de Valencay, the great seat of the family in France, acquired by the famous Talleyrand, and the rich Prussian estates. His oldest son, who has just died and was long known as the Prince de Sagan, and noted as "the modern Alcibiades," was the most distinguished spendthrift of his generation in France. His wife, who lived apart from him, was a great social leader from the days of the Second Empire until a few years ago. She spent vast sums of money. It is true that she had a fortune of her own, but she impoverished the family nevertheless.

The two sons of the modern Alcibiades, Helie, now head of the family, and his brother, Boson, have been amazing spendthrifts.

It is estimated that the bills, promissory notes and other burdensome documents accumulated by Helie and his near relatives would handsomely paper three magnificent chateaux.

So from the day she married into the European nobility to the present time, Anna Gould has been saddled with the debts of others, in return for which she has received nothing worth having.

During the eight years of her married life with Count Boni de Castellane he squandered over $9,000,000. Had he been permitted to do so, he would apparently have wasted the whole of the vast fortune left her by her father, the late Jay Gould. At the time of her marriage this was estimated at $15,000,000. Fortunately her brothers and sister had control over her property. Under the direction of her brother George Gould her fortune undoubtedly increased very greatly, so that to-day, even after all Boni de Castellane's extravagances have been paid for, there remains a very handsome balance for other noble spendthrifts.

Most of the expenditures of Castellane were for his own benefit or for the objects of his admiration, and consequently his former wife has little to show for them.

Two principal possessions remain to her from the Castellane regime. These are her palace in Paris on the Avenue du Bois de Boulogne, and the Chateau du Marais, a magnificent place near Paris. The former house is intensely uncomfortable and unsuitable for a modern residence. The owner would probably be glad to sell it if she could, but no one is likely to buy it. It would make an excellent museum.

Boni de Castellane spent $1,500,000 of his wife's money on the Parisian palace. It is a reproduction of the Grand Trianon at Versailles. This palace was once the residence of Mme. de Pompadour, the favorite of Louis XV. After that it was occupied by Queen Marie Antoinette. Boni fancied himself very much in these surroundings.

He bought the handsomest and most costly site in Paris for the palace. It is at the corner of the Avenue du Bois de Boulogne and the Avenue Malakoff. For this land alone he paid $740,000.

He made the house as nearly a reproduction of the old palace as the site would permit. It had a hall one hundred feet in length. It was fitted for the most luxurious prince of the old regime. Boni had himself photographed hundreds of times at the head of the grand staircase.

On the furnishing of this palace he spent upward of $2,000,000. Scores of the objects bought for it he sold at any price they would fetch when he needed ready money.

In the gardens he built a series of magnificent fountains that could be operated at night with a blaze of colored electric lights at a cost of $1,000. It was better than a Coney Island show.

He decided that he wanted a handsome clock and he obtained one at a cost of $60,000. It was a relic of the Renaissance and had been a favorite timepiece of Catherine de Medicis. It would not go when Boni bought it, but that was a trifle. A skilled clockmaker worked on it for a year and then it went occasionally and very slowly. Incidentally it was said that Boni received a very handsome commission on these fine pieces of furniture for which his wife paid the bill.

Having indulged in personal extravagance which he thought might annoy his wife, he graciously presented to her a handsome diamond necklace. Soon the bill came to her. It was for $100,000. Already she realized that her expenditures were too great. She found that the necklace was not worth half the money. She hastened with it to the jeweller, one of the best known men in the business in Paris.

"You have cheated my husband," said the Countess indignantly. "I insist that you take it back."

Then the jeweller lost his temper.

"I have not cheated anybody, madame," he replied. "When I sold this necklace to Monsieur le Comte it had four rows. Now it has two rows. Perhaps Monsieur le Comte can tell you what has become of the other two. You will notice that the bill is made out to him."

Perhaps also that had something to do with the divorce.

Boni bought for his clothes a tortoise shell wardrobe which once belonged to King Louis XVI. For this he paid $280,000.

In his boudoir he had the bed used by Napoleon on the night of his coronation. This cost only $30,000. For some small tapestries he paid $10,000. His private quarters were all furnished with corresponding elegance. Naturally they proved very attractive to the visitors whom he entertained there so charmingly.

He purchased the ancient palace of the Scala at Verona in order that he might [illegible] ceilings by Tiepolo from its walls. For this he paid $200,000.

For three Celadon vases with old French mounts he paid $16,000, for a set of two Rose du Barry jardinieres and two plates of the same design $10,000, for two pairs of Louis XVI. gilt candlesticks, $4,400.

One bill that totaled $104,000 represented a Louis XVI. table in dove marble, a pair of Sevres vases and some other trifles.

For a banquet to the King of Portugal he spent $200,000. On this occasion he had 200 flunkeys dressed in liveries of Louis XIV.'s court, made specially for this occasion. For another banquet to celebrate his election to the Chamber of Deputies he spent $150,000.

He bought the English yacht Valhalla, [illegible] for $200,000. He [illegible] the trip made him seasick.

He induced his wife to buy the Chateau du Marais, [illegible] of which is shown at the top of the page, from the Duchess de Noailles, the head of the historic French family, at a cost of $350,000. It is beautiful and picturesque. Its grounds were wonderful. But it is not altogether desirable. Its name means "the Chateau of the Marsh."

Perhaps this explains why the Duchess was so glad to sell her historic mansion. She is now living in a comfortable, dry, modern establishment on the proceeds.

In return for these terrific expenditures, Anna Gould obtained a husband who deceived her outrageously, a man without public position or standing in any respectable calling in France, without position even in the artificial society in which he was born.

At last his offences became unbearable and she obtained a divorce. Then what did she do? Marry a plain American? No. She married another man of the same class as Boni, with a more sonorous title and a personal reputation very similar, according to some, even worse.

What was to be expected has happened. No sooner was she married than she found herself asked to pay a note for $200,000 contracted by the Prince de Sagan.

Then Boni proceeded to dig up all the scandal of his successor's life and throw it in his face and that of his wife.

Now the poor woman finds herself debarred from an honor she was told would be hers and confronted by a new load of debts piled up by her aristocratic connections.

Will the game ever come to an end?

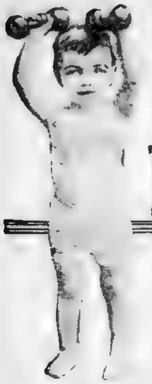
HOW TO BREATHE TO BE HEALTHY.

Do You Use All Your Lungs or Simply One-Third of Them?—Here Are Some Simple Exercises to Bring Vitality and Strength.



"Breathing combined with light dumbbell exercise is excellent for children."

"A cord of elastic may be used to stimulate the child's interest in the exercises."

THERE are 725,000,000 air cells in your lungs. These cells spread out side by side, would occupy fifty square feet. All the blood in the body goes into them once every two minutes, to be purified and energized.

Neither strength nor vitality comes from what we take [illegible] Food only [illegible] blood flows [illegible] the [illegible] from the [illegible]

But [illegible] to do, and [illegible] lungs [illegible] The blood [illegible] the [illegible] its way [illegible] the thin walls [illegible] capillaries that run between. Combustion takes place, poisonous gases, mainly carbon-dioxide, are released the blood rich and rejuvenated, goes coursing through the body, and the poisonous gases are expelled by exhalation. It has been estimated that [illegible] man [illegible]

[illegible] the [illegible] be effective every [illegible] active and [illegible] be used [illegible] every [illegible] filled with pure air [illegible] purpose of energizing and oxygenating the blood in the [illegible] [illegible] nerves [illegible] heart and [illegible] air chambers [illegible]

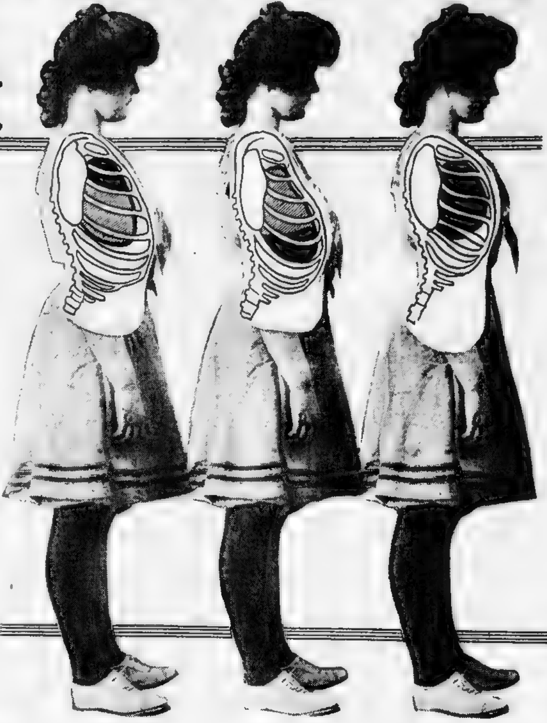
[illegible] one [illegible] knows [illegible] been [illegible] and [illegible] upper [illegible] breathe [illegible] breathing [illegible] and [illegible]

pulmonary and [illegible] disease. There [illegible] the contents of the [illegible] of the [illegible] This kind of [illegible] are a [illegible] of people who have formed the habit of using only the middle portion of the lungs.

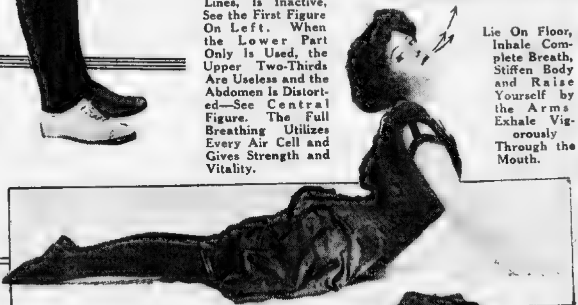
In each of these wrong methods of breathing millions of air cells are not used. If one breathes poison a blade of pure air, think of the extent of the impurity in the clogged and seldom used chambers of the lungs through which, like a sewer, the capillaries with the disease and poison laden blood flows.

These faulty breathers do not even get all the advantage that they should from the small amount of air they do [illegible] nerves and of the [illegible] is effected through lack [illegible]

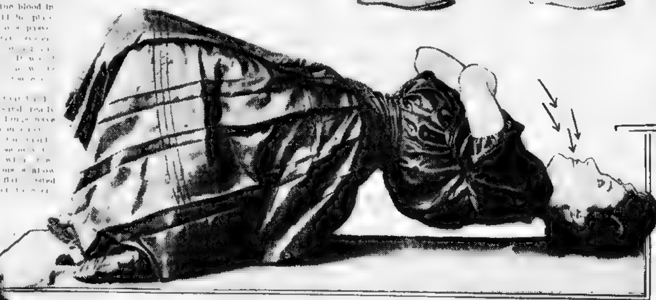
[illegible] If there is any disease [illegible] to be, with good evidence, a blood disease. With these facts known, it is strange indeed that men and women should go on breathing incorrectly, that they will not trouble to teach their children how to breathe correctly, when it is [illegible] things to be [illegible] every air cell in [illegible] through the nose.



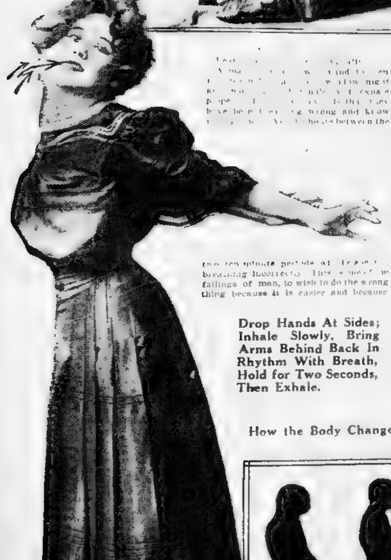
When Only the Upper Part of the Lungs Are Used, the Balance, Indicated by Shaded Lines, Is Inactive, See the First Figure On Left. When the Lower Part Only Is Used, the Upper Two-Thirds Are Useless and the Abdomen Is Distorted—See Central Figure. The Full Breathing Utilizes Every Air Cell and Gives Strength and Vitality.



Lie On Floor, Inhale Complete Breath, Stiffen Body and Raise Yourself by the Arms. Exhale Vigorously Through the Mouth.



Lie On Back, Bring Up Knees, Raise Body in Arc From Head to Feet, Inhaling Full Breath.



Drop Hands At Sides; Inhale Slowly, Bring Arms Behind Back In Rhythm With Breath, Hold for Two Seconds, Then Exhale.

[illegible] have been [illegible] wrong and know [illegible]

two ten-minute periods at [illegible] breathing incorrectly. This [illegible] failings of man, to wish to do the wrong thing because it is easier and because [illegible] and [illegible] It is easy to breathe [illegible] few simple [illegible] are separated from the [illegible] cavity [illegible] Windsor and published by Lothrop, Lee, New York, the author, who has won prizes for his muscular development says:

All women who wear corsets must of necessity breathe from the top of the lungs. The corset presses the internal organs up under the chest walls, which compels the wearer to practice chest breathing. Enough air forced into the lungs to fill them completely while a tight corset is worn would cause instant death.

[illegible] waist, and after taking hips then I would wear the corset and the cotton. But all men do not. There are men who know the real woman and won't have any other. There is also a class of parodies whose [illegible] begins with the [illegible] and physique [illegible] most a [illegible]

[illegible] simple [illegible] exercise [illegible] breathing [illegible] counting mentally, 1—2—3—4, as [illegible] the same time expanding [illegible] The expansion will [illegible] from the abdomen [illegible] to the chest [illegible] and [illegible] slowly, counting as before, 1—2—3—4, at the same time the abdominal muscles should be made to slowly recede.

This little exercise alone will place one on the way of rhythmic, correct and full breathing.

After one has been doing it all wrong for years, it will be a little difficult at first to get the full lung capacity. There are scores of little muscles that have been weakened, and the air cells have been clogged so long they have [illegible] There [illegible] be a bit of soreness for a time, but if you persevere [illegible] pass.

Here is the exercise for the complete breath: Stand or sit erect. Inhale through the nostrils steadily, filling first the lower part of the lungs. Control the diaphragm and let it descend gently, pushing forward the front walls of the abdomen. Then fill the middle lungs, pushing out the lower ribs, breast bone and chest. Then fill the higher portion, [illegible] the upper chest, [illegible] it. In the final movement the lower part of the abdomen will be slightly drawn in, which movement gives the lungs support and also helps fill the higher portions. This [illegible] three parts [illegible] should be continuous. Retain the breath [illegible] few seconds [illegible] exhale slowly, holding the chest in firm position and drawing in the abdomen a little, lifting it upward slowly as the air leaves the lungs. When the air is entirely exhaled relax chest and abdomen.

This is an exercise which will loosen the walls of your chest and drive away [illegible]

Lie on the floor, face downward and palms of hands flat upon the floor by your side. Inhale a complete breath and retain it. Stiffen the body and raise yourself by the strength of your arms and [illegible] Then lower yourself to the original position. Exhale vigorously through the mouth. Repeat ten times.

The Yogis of India follow each breathing exercise with what they call the cleansing breath. This breath is described in the Hindu-Yogi science of Breath, by Yogi Ramacharaka, which is published by the Yogi Publication Society of Chicago. This cleansing breath stimulates the lung cells and generally rests and refreshes the whole system. Inhale a complete breath, retain the air a few seconds. Pucker up the lips as if for a whistle [illegible] cheeks [illegible] the opening [illegible] exhale a little more [illegible] Relax [illegible]

[illegible] lungs are emp[illegible] Remember that considerable [illegible] should be used in exhaling the air through the lip opening.

[illegible] exercise for [illegible] chest and abdomen. Lie upon your back. Raise the knees. Then raise the body into an arch upon feet and head, inhaling gently. Hold breath for a few seconds. [illegible] back to the position. Exhale [illegible] mouth. Use cleansing breath.

When the chest is contracted from bending over one's work use this. Stand erect [illegible] behind [illegible] while doing this. Hold breath and arms four seconds. Bring arms to position exhaling slowly.

Another exercise. Let the arms hang at sides, stiffen them and bring them behind hips, inhaling all the time. Hold breath. Exhale vigorously through the mouth.

This is an excellent exercise to stimulate circulation and dissipate headache.

Stand erect. Inhale a complete breath and retain it. Bend forward slightly and grasp a stick or cane steadily and firmly gradually exerting your entire strength upon the grasp. Relax grip and return to first position. Slowly exhale.

This exercise drives the pure arterial blood to the extremities and draws the impure venous blood into the lungs.

It may take ten days or two weeks to form the habit of breathing correctly. Then one does it naturally. It will pay you in health and vigor and increased mentality.

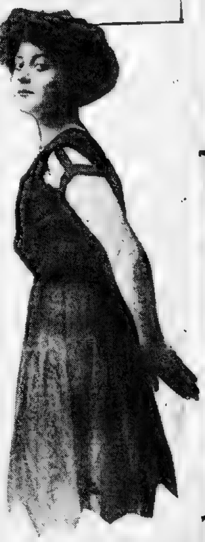
An excellent exercise upon getting up in the morning is the following. Standing erect, with head up, eyes front and hands at sides, raise the body slowly on the toes, inhaling steadily and slowly. Still standing on tiptoe retain the breath for a few seconds and then gradually return to the original position, exhaling the air through the nostrils. This exercise should be repeated several times. Instead of rising on both feet, it may be varied by rising on each foot alternately.

To render [illegible] elastic and allow for the utmost expansion of the lungs, the following [illegible] should be occasionally taken [illegible] to excess.

Standing [illegible] the hands one on each side of the [illegible] that the fingers point [illegible] front over [illegible]

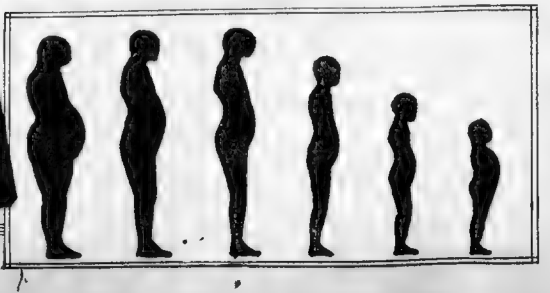
An exercise of this [illegible] valuable [illegible] whose daily [illegible] more or less cramped positions and whose [illegible] This [illegible] interferes with proper breathing.

Such simple exercises as these will do more to preserve the general health than all the gymnasiums in the world.



Inhale Full Breath, Then Touch Hands Gently Behind Back and Exhale.

How the Body Changes Its Outline From Youth to Old Age, Through Improper Breathing.



Why Drinks Destroy the Digestion.

ABUSE of tea and coffee is a frequent cause of indigestion. When tea is taken with meals it is apt to render the gastric juice so diluted and weak that it has not the power to digest solid food. In addition to this, the tannin, which all teas contain to a greater or less extent, acts injuriously on the digestive process; it also prevents the living membrane of the stomach pouring out the digestive juices. This is particularly the case with improperly prepared tea which has been allowed to stew for some time.

Coffee is in general less harmful in its effects than tea. When taken strong, however, it has rather an irritating effect on the mucous lining of the stomach, and to that extent interferes with digestion. Cocoa is more suitable than either tea or coffee as a beverage to be taken with a light meal.

Alcoholic liquors taken in excess have a grave effect in producing indigestion. Beverages containing alcohol vary much in their potency, hence they do not all act alike on the stomach. To begin with the weakest, beer may have an injurious effect on digestion by its bulk alone. In small quantities it, no doubt, stimulates the flow of gastric juice, thus counterbalancing the dilution which it must inevitably produce. When it is taken by the pint, however, the effect is anything but salutary.

Dilatation of the stomach ensues, as the result of weakened and stretched stomach walls, until the most dependent portion sags, as it were, well down into the abdominal cavity, and hangs there, more in the capacity of a sack than a stomach. If any one doubts this statement, let him put two or three pints of beer into a skin (not his own) or an india-rubber bottle, and he will be able to appreciate the strain put upon the not too securely hung stomach when filled to repletion with beer.

Wines and their influence on the digestive organs must be considered next. Excessive indulgence in either port or sherry will destroy appetite and stop digestion by the direct action of the contained alcohol, natural or acquired, on the mucous lining of the stomach. The action of light wine is in general not dissimilar from beer, except in cases of marked dyspepsia. In some of these beer is more harmful, in others wine.

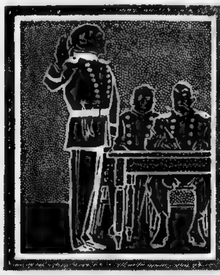
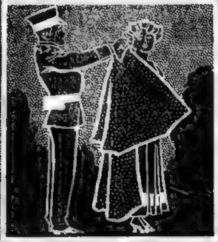
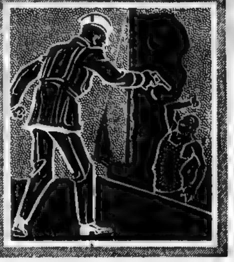
"Why it's Different in the Army"



"An officer's word is always to be believed."



"He loaned her his overcoat."



"He shot Annis down."

By MISS DOROTHY HASLER.

HONOR and gallantry are the two strongest bonds of the United States army and navy. Navy and army officers always protect a woman's honor. They feel it their duty to protect the wives and children of their brother officers just as they would their own. They are quick to defend any woman who, by association, becomes a part of their [illegible]

An army post is a small and a necessarily exclusive community. So is the navy station. Every one is bound to all the others more or less, irrespective of individual antipathies. They have to be, because the army is an organization, and so is the navy, and each post is a closely knit little community, bound by mutual interest and by discipline.

Without that high ideal of gallantry and honor what kind of an army or navy would we have?

They are inseparable from the type of patriotism that makes a man dedicate his life to the defense of his country. And the feeling that every true officer has toward his post as his home is as natural as the feeling every true man has for the place that is his home. No man would wish to have any unworthy persons introduced [illegible] and [illegible] would resent such intrusion by ejection.

No civilian, I have heard it said, would think of taking a private quarrel into the home of his hostess and fighting it out there with another guest. That, they say, would be a gross breach of hospitality. I quite agree with them. But suppose it had been his own home and some one had come in whom he was quite sure should not be there. Would he not be justified in asking that person to leave and not to return? And if that person had refused, would he not have been justified in ejecting him from his own home? I certainly think so.

Well, the whole army and navy organization is the home of every officer in it. The Chelsea Marine Hospital was as much the home of Dr. Robnett as his own quarters. Therefore his action regarding Dr. Cowles was perfectly reasonable and right and had not an element of discourtesy in it toward Mrs. Ames, the wife of the officer in charge there. You cannot fit the standards that prevail among civilians to the standards that are the necessary outcome of military life.

By A CAPTAIN'S WIFE.

OF course it's different in the army. Why shouldn't it be? One of the first things a young army matron has drilled into her is this—you have to meet the colonel's wife whether you like her or not. And the same holds true so far as the wife of every other officer of the post is concerned.

I mention this because it seems to me to hold the keynote of much of why life is different in the army. Every woman will know what I mean. If you are the wife of a civilian you meet whom you please and when you please, and whom you don't please you do not meet, or at least not often. But at an army post you have to meet them all the time, and the effect of [illegible] woman or women you detest, and of men you may detest as heartily, is demoralizing.

It [illegible] and not to break out all at once and badly unless a woman is very [illegible] indeed. And if she is that kind she is probably the one that makes the others break out.

To this condition, unavoidable and necessary, I ascribe such cases as that of Mrs. Claudia Haines, whose husband, Captain Haines, shot down and killed William E. Annis, a civilian. Mrs. Haines was probably bored to distraction by conditions. Perhaps she should not have been. I do not know. But Captain Haines was acting according to the army code when he killed the man whom he at least thought had led his wife away.

Not long ago Mrs. Lewis B. Chandler, the wife of a Lieutenant at a Western post, killed herself in a hotel at Omaha. By her side was found scribbled that verse from Omar which runs:

"Ah, love, could you and I with Him conspire
To grasp this sorry scheme of things entire,
Would we not [illegible]
Remould it nearer to the heart's desire?"

She was probably suffering from the same complaint—too much system.

You see, if we are to have an army discipline is necessary. In a small community such as a post, this discipline enforces certain rules of living upon all. There cannot be discipline where there is constant wrangling, where every woman is ready to fly at the other's throat, or where ostracism of any member can be carried on. No matter what one thinks, we must "make believe" to live in harmony. And suppression of any kind [illegible] to work out badly.

Into this small community come women of all kinds. Army men [illegible] from [illegible] not ladies. They are taken from many different classes. The only [illegible] recognized in military life is rank, and this is properly so. Discipline demands it. But the wife of a lieutenant may be of infinitely better class than her husband's colonel's wife. Still she is outranked. At once there is an anomalous situation so far as the standards of the civilian are concerned.

Again, the major's wife may be vulgar, ill-bred, illiterate. I have known such. And the captain's wife may be a very cultured lady indeed. Yet she is outranked. There is another anomaly. What is to be done? It all looks very curious to the outsider, but there is no reason why the conditions should work hardship. It is the logical outcome of the military community.

The soldier's wife should be a good soldier. As long as she meets the situation according to the army standard there. A captain's wife may be weighted with gold and the colonel's wife be [illegible] otherwise, but I outrank My Lady Midas. Where would discipline be in the army life of the posts? The question [illegible] And I believe I know that in proportion more women do scandalous things in civilian circles [illegible] of [illegible] in fortunes than [illegible] in the army because of the necessity of meeting unpleasant women, or women below their class but above them in rank.

It's all a question of standards. It was Kipling [illegible]

[illegible]

Much [illegible]

to meet it with [illegible] there is no trouble. But the moment she begins to apply civilian standards or turns an ear to civilian remedies look out for trouble. It is like putting a [illegible] plaster to [illegible] wound. The plaster is all right [illegible] but it doesn't belong [illegible]

In the outside world, in America, at least, the main thing that determines rank is money. In this respect the army is far ahead of the outside world. Money doesn't count at all world because at the court-martial inquiry into the curious death of Cadet Sutton at Annapolis, when certain of his fellow cadets were believed to have beaten him to death, that an officer should have testified that "An officer's word is always taken before a private's."

Dear souls! Why should you have been surprised? Some one said that this was unfair, that in any industrial establishment a superintendent would not be, prima facie, a truth-teller and his workmen all liars. But is the army an industrial establishment?

Here is a body of men who are useful mainly because of the discipline. Where would discipline be if every private could constantly be running to headquarters making complaints, or if an officer's word, except, of course, in flagrant instances, were not taken for truth?

"On the word of an officer and a gentleman" is a good saying. There is reason for this as well as all the other apparent inconsistencies to the civilian in army life.

The same emotion would make that officer storm an enemy's fastness, knowing certain death lay ahead for him. In England Tommy Atkins is honored always. Why? Because he is a life standing between the people and their enemies. He will give that life cheerfully when the necessity arises. Why should they not honor him?

So you see all these things I have mentioned, which seem so unusual and wrong to the civilian, are really the natural and only logical outcome of the conditions among which they rise.

Let the army follow out its code. It is based on sound reason. And let the civilian follow his. But the two won't mix. Witness the fate of Mr. Annis and the discomfiture of Dr. Cowles, of Boston.

Miss Ayres, Who Fought the Decision Against Her Brother Because He Loaned a Girl His Overcoat.

Punching a Guest at a Ball, Punishment for Loaning a Girl an Overcoat, Tragedies Like the Sutton and Haines Affairs All Due to Trying to Fit Civilian Standards to a Necessary Army Code.

"WE do it differently in the army and navy," is quite a common expression among military men. The code of honor that prescribed the duel to settle disputes between gentlemen lasted longer there than anywhere else in the United States. The service has many other manners and customs which seem quite as old and archaic to the civilian.

On this page are quoted a few of many incidents that show there is a different way of looking at things in the circle of those who guard the Republic. What is the reason?

That there are reasons and good ones the very interesting statements of Miss Dorothy Hasler, the young woman for whom the civilian was punched, and particularly that of the "Captain's Wife," who, for obvious reasons, doesn't wish to be known, seem to prove.

Some Odd Incidents.

THE conditions so clearly set forth in the statements of Miss Hasler and "A Captain's Wife" [illegible] demonstrated by such real life dramas in army and navy social circles as are mentioned on this page, are continually furnishing novelists and playwrights with some of their best plots.

Captain Charles King, U. S. A., has founded a whole series of novels upon the natural results growing out of those conditions. Quite a number of native American plays owe their success to effective portrayals of conflicts between loyalty to the army code and unquestioned individual rights.

[illegible] "Arizona," [illegible] is a powerful exposition of this point. The young lieutenant hero suffers unjust punishment and degradation by [illegible] code in connection with social life invites so much attention from writers of novels and plays.

Take, for example, the case of Dr. Edward S. Cowles, a prominent physician of Boston, and his treatment at the hands of an officer at a military ball at the Charlestown Navy Yard. Dr. Howard E. Ames, medical inspector of the yard, was giving a ball in his home in the yard. Among the guests were Paymaster George P. Auld, Passed Assistant Surgeon Ansey H. Robnett and Dr. and Mrs. Cowles. Dr. Cowles is a gentleman of the best social standing and a second cousin of Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt. Against Dr. Cowles Auld felt he had a grievance, and the sight of the physician at the ball was unpleasant to him. Notwithstanding that he himself was present through the courtesy of a mutual friend and according to our social laws on an equal footing with Dr. Cowles, he approached [illegible] said:

"You will please leave this place and not return. You are not wanted here."

And in this instance, also, there was no appeal. Dr. Cowles, a civilian guest, [illegible] to leave the house by Auld, a military guest, and there was nothing for him to do but to obey. Auld was upheld by the authorities at Washington [illegible] Mrs. Ames, [illegible] men were [illegible] Dr. Cowles [illegible]

On Easter Sunday [illegible] ago, there [illegible] West Point [illegible] was attended by [illegible] sisters, sweethearts and friends of the cadets. It was a bitter day and many [illegible] overcoats [illegible] Cadet Ayers threw his coat over the shoulders of Miss [illegible] Ayres, his sister, and [illegible] Colonel Charles G. [illegible] Howze ordered an en[illegible] the women to re[illegible] the frightened [illegible] Miss Ayres.

[illegible] courteous old war [illegible] very different [illegible] in the army and knowing [illegible] the trouble that was imminent [illegible] manner, "will you [illegible] remove the coat, my dear [illegible]" The old colonel knew she'd have to take it off anyway, no matter [illegible] she needed it, and through his [illegible] Colonel Howze ordered two en[illegible] diplomacy a scene was avoided, but not [illegible] army [illegible] was waged so fiercely [illegible] is said to have hastened Col. Ayres' death.

At the sensational trials of T. Jenkins Hains and Peter C. Hains for the murder of William E. Annis, Mrs. Claudia Hains revealed much of the woman's side of army life in this respect, and the suicide of Mrs. Lewis B. Chandler, wife of an army lieutenant, resulted in further exposures. The woman killed herself in a hotel in Omaha. By her side was found a note ascribing the act to one of these army code social conflicts.

The method of meting out justice (or not meting it out as some have claimed) to offenders of the moral or criminal code is different in the army, too. Court-martials are strictly private and every effort is made to keep the crimes of soldiers from being aired in public courts. The case of Lieutenant James N. Sutton, of the United States Marine Corps, was an illustration of this.

Sutton met his death in a squabble with brother officers. The Coroner claimed it was suicide. His mother stoutly maintained that he had met his death at the hands of two other officers, and a hearing was had. The hearing, however, presented the peculiar spectacle of Sutton's ghost being on trial for suicide rather than the two officers on trial for murder.

It is estimated that the "Chantecler" costumes have cost $100,000. The whole production has been enormously expensive. And yet it has been well worth while, for it is perfection.

Rostand himself has told of the inception of the play of "Chantecler" in his mind.

"The idea of 'Chantecler' came to me one morning in the country at Cambo, on hearing a cock crow. It was six or seven years ago. In the environs of Cambo there is a splendid farmyard that provides the setting for my first act—the dunghill, the low wall, the market cart, the dog's kennel and the blackbird's cage. And all my characters were there, including a magnificent, matched cock on the dunghill, his feathers gilded by the first rays of the rising sun.

"As I watched him he saluted the dawning day with a strident cocorico.' And suddenly the cock entered. General emotion! He became the subject of fresh conversation. Really they gossiped about the cock. And at that moment 'Chantecler' was conceived."

The Epoch-Making Play That Sets All Sorts of New Fashions.

AFTER 2,000 [illegible] the art of play writing which, [illegible] twenty-five centuries, had seemed to [illegible] every dramatic [illegible] has suddenly taken [illegible] so original and so apparently successful as to upset the whole civilized world and its affairs.

In Paris not only the theatre-goers but apparently the entire population have gone "Chantecler" [illegible]. The rooster hero that struts through Rostand's play has [illegible] himself upon the daily [illegible] of that metropolis in every imaginable way [illegible] epoch [illegible] world of human [illegible] quite as exalted a place [illegible] barnyard [illegible] to [illegible]

As shown [illegible] "Chantecler" [illegible] on [illegible] new styles in [illegible] gowns, napkin rings, besides an enormous variety of other articles of use and adornment. "Chantecler" dinners, dances and theatre parties indicate the triumphant rooster's power in social affairs. [illegible] fabulous [illegible]

"No one can [illegible] say [illegible] "Chantecler" [illegible] will [illegible]

[illegible] ever after [illegible]

"Ah," says the [illegible] of [illegible] sketch. "You are [illegible] to me. There is a white feather on your [illegible]."

So [illegible] on [illegible] crowing.

[illegible] to describe a gossipy [illegible] no longer call her [illegible] in France as well as American [illegible] "a guinea hen," alluding to the [illegible] of the fowl portrayed in the play.

On this page are translations of many of the poetic speeches spoken by M. Guitry as Chantecler, by Mme. Simone as [illegible] Pheasant and [illegible] other bird and [illegible]. The whole [illegible] Gallic [illegible] and [illegible] would have [illegible] the Paris [illegible] Porte St. Martin Theatre expresses [illegible] the play's [illegible]

[illegible] French [illegible] between [illegible] blackbird, the [illegible] puns are [illegible] for example, the owl [illegible] rooster "Since [illegible] the hen trusting that the blackbird will never "show the white feather."

The general outline of the play has been printed repeatedly—the French farmyard with buildings [illegible] ridiculously exaggerated in [illegible] where fowls and [illegible] rooster sustains his [illegible] bringing up the sun [illegible] the rooster's de[illegible] with the wounded hen pheasant, [illegible] and comfort [illegible] the forest night [illegible] owl and other night birds conspire against Chantecler, who brings up the sun, thus depriving them of their prey, the horror of the Hen Pheasant when it is made [illegible] that the sun rose [illegible] Chantecler, the eloper, overslept, the wounding of Chantecler by hunters; and, last scene—interior of a large game bag occupied by Chantecler, who is cared for by the Hen Pheasant while he philosophizes on the futility of personal ambition.

The play is supposed to be a sort of international allegory, in which the vainglorious, fickle rooster typifies [illegible] Rostand is said to have paid [illegible] of the production out of his own pocket [illegible] from the producing manager several years ago nearly $100,000 in advance royalties. Charles Frohman is reported to have paid $40,000 in advance for the English-speaking rights.

Have reached down to the soft, black soil,
Then having felt the good earth,
I sing, and that is half the mystery,
Pheasant, half the secret of my glorious song,
Which is not of those songs
That one sings by just trying,
But of those that one draws from one's native heath
As the tree draws its sap from the ground,
And the hour, above all, when this sap
Comes to the surface in me
The hour, in fact, when I have immortal genius,
The hour when I am sure of my powers,
Is the hour when the dawn trembles
Below the edge of the dark sky.
Then, filled with a shivering of leaves
Which goes through me to the tips of my wings,
I feel that the universe needs me
I emphasize still more impressively
The curve of my beautiful neck, my trumpet-like figure
The earth speaks through me as through a horn,
And I become in place of a mere bird
The spokesman, the authorized representative
Through whom the earth speaks to the sky

THE PHEASANT.

O, wonderful Chantecler!

CHANTECLER.

And this cry which goes up to the skies
Is a cry of love for the light.
A cry so furious and so tempestuous
For the thing of gold we call day,
That all yearn to see again—
The rose in its thorn bush, the forest,
The barley with its delicate tassels,
Even the little pebbles with glistening crystals—
It is the cry of everything that has missed
Its color, its shadow, its sight,
Or its pearl, the cry of entreaty,
In which the soaked forest asks for a light
At the end of each dark pathway;
A cry that goes through me on its way to the sky.
It is a cry that goes up from all things
That feel they have been in disgrace,
In the darkness, shut up in a black hole,
Punished by the sun without knowing
What wrong they have done.

It is the cry of cold, of fear, of oppression,
Of everything that the night frightens
Of the rose left trembling alone in the dark,
Of the hay which longs to be dry,
Of the tools left outdoors by the workers,
Of the white places tired of the blackness.
It is the cry of all innocent creatures
Who have nothing that ought to be hidden
Of the brook that wants to be seen through,
Of the puddle that longs to reflect,
Of the mud that would rather be earth
O, night! Your works I detest and condemn.
It is the glorious cry of the field
That longs to see its crops grow;
Of the plant that wants to have flowers,
Of the green grape that would be black,
Of the bridge that yearns for a footstep,
Of the birds that would pipe up their songs
Of everything that would give up black mourning,
Live again, become a hearth or a threshold,
Of the seat that longs to be worn
Or the stone that hopes for the hard
It is the cry of all things for the source
Of all beauty, of all health
And of everything that longs to be
At work in the joy of the sunlight
To see and be seen by its fellows
When that vast cry goes up from me,
My throat must prepare for its work
Before speaking, I hold for a moment
The vast volume of sound in my soul
Then I send it forth most mightily,
And I know I am doing a wonder
That my marvellous voice will conquer the night,
Even as Jericho fell at the sound of the trumpets.

THE PHEASANT

(Overcome with her emotions.)

O, marvellous Chantecler

THE OWL.

(From his perch on the limb of a tree.)

Hail the soft protecting night
When one who has neither heroism nor courage can ensanguine the earth,
Can do murder safely.
Hail to the shades of night, which is our Silent night, when our beaks crush the bones of the young

Mr. Galipaux As the Blackbird.

And over our eyes trickles the blood of fledglings
Hail the night when fear sweats and the fearful
At the sound of our dismal "Hoo-hoo"
Tremble and [illegible] cross themselves.
The night from which the stars should be blotted
For when our talons are wringing a slender neck
We shun even the weak light of the stars
Hail to night, when we can avenge
Ourselves for the grace of the mockingbird
For when night reigns, beauty, a terrified hostage is left
At the mercy of the enfolding dark.
At night we choose what we kill
And the white dove and the bluest jay
Are more tempting on a swinging branch at night
Hail to night, when fear makes certain our success
For at our threatening "Hoo-hoo" even the eagle's heart
Falters like a chicken's.
All hail, protecting night!

CHORUS OF OWLS

Hail to the night, when we murder and slay!
Hail to the night, friend of our race!

How a Comic Opera Made a Real King.

Prince Nicholas Upon His Favorite Donkey.

The Athletic Crown Princess Jutta of Montenegro.

PRINCE NI[illegible] day in August [illegible] will be a [illegible] cipality and [illegible] honors and [illegible] The expe[illegible] Prince N[illegible] thrifty Mo[illegible] happy in its [illegible]

Wh[illegible] sity [illegible]

Surely [illegible] that [illegible] comic [illegible] Merry W[illegible] probabl[illegible] your country [illegible]

[illegible] But this idea of a comic opera [illegible] a real king does seem very [illegible] it was this way.

Our Crown Prince Danilo is a very [illegible] Crown Prince. He is a beau[illegible] [illegible] Paris and paying court to [illegible] of those two cities. Of course, when our dear Crown Princess Jutta came upon the boards, no one supposed that Danilo would change his habits. But he did. You see Jutta is [illegible] athletic lady. She is a champion [illegible] the bag to perfection [illegible] like an Englishman [illegible] is an expert in jiu jitsu.

No Montenegrin, much less a Crown Prince, likes to feel that his wife is better than he in any way. Therefore, when Princess Jutta fitted up a "gym" in the palace [illegible] her bag and gloves and [illegible] no time to drive over to [illegible] loves in Paris and Vienna [illegible] to be spent in training [illegible] his wife. At least that [illegible] version of it. There [illegible] who tell of violent scenes in [illegible] was curbed by black eye[illegible] are always the uncharitable [illegible] Danilo from a spending [illegible] who loved the wom[illegible] has [illegible] told his own even [illegible] mountaineers.

I won't [illegible] the price. "It's [illegible] expen[illegible]"

But they have put your son, our [illegible] Danilo, in a [illegible] opera," said the shepherd.

Wh[illegible] Nicholas [illegible] Merry Widow [illegible] aroused [illegible] laughing at us [illegible] would dare laugh when we are a kingdom.

"The scoundrels," shouted the king and demanded particulars. He received them.

[illegible] be a king [illegible] in my do[illegible] always happy [illegible] Montenegro was happy [illegible] only think of [illegible] Jutta was [illegible] object under [illegible] It was to be [illegible] refused. If [illegible] no one else [illegible] Does it seem [illegible] of Mon[illegible] Montenegro [illegible] of lady [illegible]

The Dashing Princess Radmovic, the real "Merry Widow,"

Do you wonder how a delegation of shepherds, mountaineers, and so on, could make a thrifty Prince do something he didn't wish to? You would not if you lived in Montenegro.

For instance, not long ago, practicing economy as always, Nicholas sent his Count Chamberlain and two adjutants to a shoemaker in Carlsbad to order a special pair of shoes made.

And pay no more than $2," was his Highness' final order.

When the son of Crispin learned [illegible] of the gouty feet he was to cover, he exclaimed, scornfully:

Two dollars! And for a Prince with feet like an elephant! My price is $9. Then I will profit no more than $1."

The courtiers, unwilling to take the responsibility of ordering shoes so expensive, induced the cobbler to go [illegible] them to the Prince's house, where he was introduced into the presence of the Leader of the Black Mountain[illegible]

I will pay no more than $2," said the Prince.

I will take no less than $9," retorted the cobbler, a man of equal [illegible] voices rose as they grew [illegible] for [illegible] while taking his meals off the mantelpiece. And $60 is much money to the Prince of Montenegro.

He will probably get it too.

Again not long ago the Prince was in conflict with his Ministers of State over some appropriations. One of our ruler's most ardent supporters is Risto Bilamovic, keeper of the best coffee house in the capital—did I forget to say that there are only three thousand inhabitants of Cettinje? Among [illegible] was the Minister of War, who sent out to Risto for [illegible] cups of coffee for himself and four other Ministers of State there assembled.

For ministers [illegible] gracious sovereign Prince Nicholas [illegible]

When the excellencies [illegible] their deliberations without coffee, they telephoned to the police, ordering Risto's instant arrest. [illegible] the offender [illegible] before the [illegible] Ministers of [illegible]

Risto immediately [illegible]

"You were [illegible] hundred and [illegible] caps of [illegible] then [illegible] Montenegrins [illegible] and black coffee [illegible] favorite tipple. As a consequence Prince Nicholas gained a [illegible] hundred and twenty supporters of his policy and the Ministers of State at their downfall.

One of the [illegible] Montenegrins [illegible] the Merry Widow [illegible] Prince Danilo [illegible] down [illegible] with their boots [illegible] The Prince [illegible] When [illegible] [illegible] The [illegible] not interested in what is going on wander or sprawl about smoking and gossiping. These court days for the ignorant peasantry, [illegible] one of whom can read or write, seem, to a certain extent, to take the place of newspapers. Everybody [illegible] all that is going on in the narrow little sphere which makes their world. When the hearings are all over a great bell is rung and all assemble at a bountiful course dinner furnished at the Prince's expense.

The Prince's confidence in his subjects is never abused. The following story is a sample of his methods of doing business. Some time ago Nikita was in need of ready cash, accordingly he applied to the Director-General of the Austrian Lloyds for the loan of 40,000 florins. The money was immediately forwarded to his Highness from Trieste to Cattaro. When the day became due and the day of settling arrived Prince Nikita flung open his window and called out to a man who was [illegible] a pig past the palace window: "Hello, friend! Whither art thou bound?"

"To Cattaro, my Prince."

"[illegible] this bundle of notes. It's 40,000 florins for Lloyds." To the amazement of the clerks in the Lloyds office the peasant came in and, flinging the bundle of notes on the counter, said:

"My Prince sends you this bundle of notes," and stalked out, with his pig at his heels.

[illegible] the profits of Nikita's inn find their way into his Highness's tunic [illegible] "And how do you find your hotel [illegible]" asked the chieftain of the Black Mountains of an Englishman to whom he was granting an audience. "Your Highness," said the Briton [illegible] "the charges are exorbitant. The host must be a robber." Later in the day the unfortunate Briton discovered wh[illegible]

The real Merry Widow is beautiful, and the Montenegrin women are [illegible] Their lords and masters like to see their faces. [illegible] not long ago came [illegible] of Nicholas [illegible] in his domain [illegible] drop the [illegible] and let their faces [illegible] was characteristic:

"Whereas [illegible] women of Podgor[illegible] Dulcigna and other parts of our domain have hidden their faces behind yashmaks or other sorts of veils upon the streets of [illegible] towns and in the bazaars and car[illegible]

"Whereas such custom is unnecessary [illegible] free constitution [illegible] such as Montenegro by the grace of the ruling Prince enjoys:

"Therefore: We declare that henceforth the wearing of such yashmaks or veils is hereby prohibited."

And [illegible] No woman covers her face in Montenegro to-day.

These people of the Black Mountains have [illegible] proverbs regarding women.

[illegible] who doesn't beat his wife is no [illegible]

[illegible] love [illegible] quick, put [illegible] the stick" is the second.

The [illegible] "Twice in his life is a man happy: once when he marries and once when he buries his wife."

[illegible] Prince Danilo and the Merry Widows! How he must subscribe to all [illegible] of them.

This Is Prince Danilo of Montenegro, the Original of Danilo of the Opera.

And This Is Donald Brian and Ethel Jackson as Danilo and the Widow in the Stage Version, One Couldn't Tell Brian and the Prince Apart.

"I suppose, being a Frenchwoman, I can see the humorous points of my [illegible] country more plainly than [illegible] Nicholas. Alas, it was too [illegible] who knew Danilo or Mon[illegible] mistake the theme of the [illegible]

"Well, well, what's the matter?" said [illegible]

"We desire that you become a king," [illegible] spokesman.

"A king!" gasped Nicholas. "Why, [illegible] know that it is expensive [illegible] to be a prince? Aren't we all [illegible] Think of what a [illegible] would mean!"

[illegible] grew almost tearfully earnest. Why think of the cost of the increased suites, of the coronation, of the constant expense of maintaining such a rank. No, I will not become king. I can't afford it."

"But father," said the spokesman, a shepherd from the hills—father [illegible]

[illegible] of Nicholas. [illegible] happened not long ago that Nicholas, who is thoroughly mediaeval, wanted the good will of the King in a certain affair of state. [illegible] daughter [illegible] [illegible] few might have more influence than something familiar. At any rate he sent the Princess Radmovic over to get the royal good will. The Princess was delighted. Not so the Queen on her arrival. She knew [illegible] the habits of her too attractive countrywoman. Almost at once the Princess was bundled out of the palace bag and baggage and under guard. She was escorted to the frontier before the King knew she had been within his domain. Nicholas took the affair with truly philosophic calm.

"Helene was always so self-willed," was all the comment he made.

"But the Queen of Italy had the merry widow turned out, bag and baggage, under guard."

[illegible] The trembling landlord and servants, attracted by the noise, hovered outside the closed door.

Finally the door opened, and the cobbler was hurled as from a catapult into the frightened group.

Forgetting his pain, in his rage, Prince Nicholas had struggled to his feet and kicked the cobbler from his room.

But the shoemaker seeks dire revenge. He has brought suit for $60

My Secrets of Beauty

No. 62

MARCH MENACES TO BEAUTY—

By Mme. Lina Cavalieri,—the Most Famous Living Beauty.

MARCH is a month of variable weather and of many menaces to beauty. Mme. Cavalieri wisely warns her readers against these menaces. The much talked of "sudden changes" are actual dangers to the beauty of the complexion. Protect your face then by veiling it at this time if no other from the raw winds. She advises the plentiful use at this time of preservative creams and lotions. She describes a complexion mask that is of great aid in improving the complexion at this trying time.

Next week Mme. Cavalieri will write further of "Spring Remedies."

Mme. Lina Cavalieri.

"When you sit down by the fire protect the delicate skin of the face from the direct heat rays, screening it from the fire by a fan."

"To make the rain-water lotion more agreeable pour in a few drops of your favorite perfume."

By LINA CAVALIERI.

IF a pretty girl can weather this month and come out looking as pretty as before, or if a plain girl emerge on April first, looking no plainer than on March first, it is because she has taken "March precautions."

March precautions consist first in guarding with all possible care against sudden changes of temperature. The weather of this month is most variable, and the much talked-of "sudden changes" are genuine menaces to the beauty of the complexion.

Protect the face, then, by veiling it at this time of the year, if no other, from the raw winds. And when you come in from the raw, cold, outer air do not go directly to the radiator nor stove nor log fire to warm yourself. Better warm yourself gradually by slowly removing your wraps and walking about your room. When you do sit down by the fire protect the delicate skin of the face from the direct heat rays, screening it from the fire by a fan or by one of the round, dainty, painted fire screens held in the hand, that are among the coquetries of habit remaining from an age when they cared more for the little graces of life than they do to-day.

Use preservative lotions and creams and lotions plentifully at this season. This is the time of year when it is well to use the complexion mask to assure the face plenty of moisture to offset the drying effect of the March winds. My complexion, deriving much benefit from glycerine, I often apply it by "dabbing" it plentifully upon the face and then place over the face a mask made of chamois. The mask helps the skin to perspire and the glycerine softens it, removing that withered look which March winds bring as surely as do the direct rays of the August sun.

The mask is made from a square piece of chamois, which for a thin face is cut off just above the chin, so that the flesh about it will not be dissolved in the perspiration coaxed to the surface by the mask. Holes should be cut in the mask just above the eyes and one just over the nose, to permit free breathing. I place this upon the face when I take my afternoon rest before singing, or even at night upon retiring.

When my skin needs whitening also I add to the glycerine lemon juice in the proportion of Glycerine, 3 ozs.

Lemon Juice, 1 oz.

Some cannot use glycerine, as it proves too great an irritant for the skin. For such skins this is cooling, whitening, and yet nourishing:

Olive oil, 3 ozs.
Lemon juice, 1 oz.
Italian pink, or attar of roses, 6 drops.

While at my chateau in France, where I could not readily secure cosmetics, I used the old-fashioned remedy of horse radish and buttermilk for livening and freshening, and at the same time whitening the skin.

Horse radish root, ½ oz.
Buttermilk, ½ pint.

The horse radish root is shredded fine and left to simmer for five or six hours at the back of the stove. It is then corked and kept in a cool place, and "dabbed" upon the face at night, being held in place by the mask.

If you are so fortunate as to be able to get rain water or melted snow water at this time a whitening and softening lotion can be made of Rain water, 1 pint.

Lemon juice, 2 ozs.

To make this more agreeable I always add a few drops of a favorite perfume. It may be hyacinth or violet or rose or carnation, as you like.

I must remind my readers at this time of the summary a great physician once made of his science: "Keep your head cool, your feet warm and your bowels open. That is the whole of medicine."

I have repeatedly told you that permitting the scalp to become overheated is as great an evil for the hair as lack of rain is to the drought-parched fields. The cool scalp is the one that grows long, thick and lustrous hair. March is the month of heavy colds, and colds cause feverish conditions of face and scalp. Avoid colds as you would a pestilence, for they are of the minor pestilences to beauty.

"Keep your feet warm," says this great physician, who had reduced his science to so great simplicity. If you have not worn rubber covering for your boots at any other season wear them now. Damp, cold feet causes stagnant circulation and stagnant circulation colds. No woman with a cold in the head is pretty. Besides, colds leave many annoying little results, and sometimes great dread ones.

For the third division of the great doctor's advice look well to your diet at this season. Eat little meat and a great deal of fruit. Fresh fruit is best, but dried fruit stewed is almost as good. Whatever introduces acid fruit juices into the circulation is helpful. An immense cargo of the accumulated effects of rich foods is to be carried out of the body by means of its system of drainage, and the acid fruit juices are as a Spring freshet whose force shall sweep them away. The purpose of all so-called Spring medicines is to cleanse and cool the blood. Unless persons have the uric acid diathesis, that is unless they have a predisposition to gout and rheumatism, they may eat fruit plentifully in the morning. An orange or half a grape fruit is an excellent tonic for the stomach, following the stomach's morning bath of two to three glasses of water. Fruit may be eaten at each meal during this month with great advantage to the complexion.

A bottle of citrate of magnesia taken every other night for at least half the month is no aid.

A teaspoonful of powdered charcoal taken in a wine glass of water every other night, alternating with the magnesia, make still more thorough the work of brooming out the stomach and intestinal tract.

A seidlitz powder taken every other night has the same cleansing effect.

Sulphur taken internally has always been beneficent to the complexion. One teaspoonful of sulphur mixed with enough molasses to make a thin paste, and taken every morning for two weeks, or, still better, for two months, should do much to clear a muddy complexion.

Sassafras tea, drunk freely during this month, should usher the drinker into April's moist, beautifying embrace, a greater beauty for taking this March precaution against the March menaces to beauty.

Strangely true is the fact that chilblains are more troublesome in March than any other month. A chiropodist, whom I asked to explain this phenomenon answered dryly that chilblains are like bears. They hibernate in the Winter and awake in the Spring. Be more than ever careful to keep the feet dry and warm at this season. To rub the feet with turpentine once a day, preferably in the morning, is a corrective of the condition that causes chilblains. Defective circulation being their cause, actively promoted circulation is their cure. And turpentine is believed to have that power.

In the mail comes inquiries from two young women. One wants to know how to reduce her hips. The other asks "how to reduce her abdomen in six weeks."

If I were either of these young women, I think I should have recourse to rolling. Lie upon the floor, and, protecting the tender bust by clasping the hands over it and letting the elbows bear the weight of the turning body, roll over and over every morning and evening, beginning with twenty times and increasing until you can roll one hundred times. At first this may cause all the sensations of seasickness. That is a sign that a lazy liver has been forced to do its work and is a good symptom.

An abdomen may be unduly large because its muscles are flabby. Try exercises that harden the muscles. One of these is to bend far backward with face upturned to the ceiling as though to turn a back somersault. Are you sure you are well corseted? A good corset, especially one made for you, molds the flesh into greater shapeliness. Get a long corset with four sets of elastics. The strong elastics in front will hold back the mass of flesh.

Formulae for tonics for short, thin hair are asked by many of my correspondents. This formula is one of the best known restoratives or stimulants for the hair:

Castor oil	2 ozs.
Alcohol	2 ozs.
Tincture of cantharides	1 oz.
Distilled or rainwater	1 oz.
Oil of bergamot	20 drops

Rub this thoroughly into the scalp with the tips of the fingers or a soft old toothbrush every other night.

The following have a stimulating effect upon the scalp:

Alcohol	1 oz.
Oil of mace	10 drops
Bay rum	4 ozs.
Alcohol	3 ozs.
Glycerine	1 dram
Salicylic acid	1 dram
Spirits of ether	4 drams

The scalp should be washed once or twice a week while treating it for weak hair. This cleanser and tonic may be used as a dry shampoo to alternate with the soap and water:

Bay rum	4 ozs.
Witch hazel	6 ozs.
Table salt	1 teaspoonful
Diluted hydrochloric acid	1 scant drop
Magnesia	1 dram

Apply this every other night, rubbing it well into the scalp.

Does Your Baby Cry o' Nights? Read This.

OF course, infantile insomnia isn't a subject in which everybody is interested, but we believe that enough of our readers have had, are now having, or possibly expect to have, experience with refractory infants in the "wee sma' hours" to justify us in considering briefly what should be done to these mites to induce slumber.

There are all sorts of prescriptions for this ill, but most of them are considerably removed from methods which might be approved by Dame Nature herself, and doctors are coming more and more to the conclusion that simple, natural remedies are best both for babies and grown-ups.

Women are not popularly supposed to have brains enough to reason out things for themselves, but they have, as a rule, something which will take them far nearer to a logical conclusion at one thought than a man would get with forty years' wandering in the region of mathematics and logic. That something is intuition, and intuition springs from sympathy; and these are the good gifts the gods gave women as a compensation for not making men of them, and, if we are to believe all that is suggested to us, thus depriving them of their wits at the same time.

Now an average woman's intuition will tell her that if a baby cries incessantly at night something must "have gone wrong with the works" either internally or externally. She would therefore see, first of all, to the external arrangements, and discover if those sins of a modern invention and aids to laziness, the safety-pins, were safe and not encased in the infant.

If they were all right she would find out if tapes and bands were too tight—as might easily be the case if, for instance, the child had got distention from flatulence. These little preliminaries being settled, baby howling a mighty howl all the time, what is to be done?

Many women totally untrained on the lines which in the natural course of events they are taught to expect to follow, will proceed to walk up and down the room, baby resting meanwhile flat on his back in her arms, and if it continues still in the way of wickedness she will almost inevitably administer nourishment regardless of the fact that according to all the canons it is not due for another hour. Feeding can become a vice, just as reading or any other good thing is overdone, and babies should not be encouraged in habits for which they may be very much blamed later in life.

But the wise mother may have reason to suspect her infant is teething. If so, she will insert her smallest finger into its mouth, and gently but firmly rub the gums with small circular movements all along from one side to the other for five or ten minutes.

This failing, the baby should be laid on his back and circular soft, deep movements made with the palm of the hand over the abdomen, commencing at the lower part of the left side, working gradually up without lifting the hand off, and across just below the waist-line, then down the other side. This should be done evenly, without jerking or pulling the skin, ten or twelve times at least, probably longer, according to results.

As these movements have an effect of increasing the general circulation and of drawing blood down from the head, where the violent exertions of the past have most probably sent it, Lord Baby will perhaps begin to mend his ways. Peace may once more prevail, and the harassed mother take her much-needed sleep in quietness for the rest of the night, as, unless he is really downright ill, it is highly improbable that further demonstration will take place before next day. If, however, His Royal Highness still refuses to conform to the usages of good society, strip and wrap him in a shawl face downwards, leaving the face, of course, uncovered, then with the lower part of the palm of hand commence making circular movements from the neck down each side of the spine close to the vertebrae, not raising hand at all from contact with the body until the spinal base is reached. This can be continued five or ten minutes at a time, and is generally infallible. The child should then be very quietly and gently reclothed, nourishment given, if due, and placed in its cot. With a constitutionally fretful baby the latter form of treatment might be given at once on settling for the night, and could, if desired, be given through thin clothing, though this is unlikely to be so efficacious.

"Fully One-Third of a Fish Is Wasted by Extravagant Methods."

"Left-Overs"

A Few of Mme. Tetrazzini's Dainty and Economical Recipes for "Second Day Dishes."

By LUISA TETRAZZINI.

"The meat chopper is the most economical of household things," says Mme. Tetrazzini.

WHEN one speaks of using left-overs it has a sort of shabby, skimping sound, as if one were mean, or very poor; but after all it is really an art to use the good odds and ends skilfully and make of them delectable dishes. You Americans do not understand the art at all—it is a European trick, for you are so lavish and prodigal even among the poor, but in Europe even the richest of families make good use of their left-overs and make some of the most delicious entrees that are to be eaten.

I was prompted to search among my left-over recipes for especial dainties by reading a recent article by your Dr. H. W. Wiley, in which he says:

"The average American cook throws away as much as he or she uses first hand. With the French the "left-overs" make more appetizing meals than the meats and vegetables do when cooked the first time. They make the daintiest croquettes, stews, ragouts and sauces out of little bits of things that are tossed into the garbage pail by the American cook, and thereby save half their food bill. Nothing is wasted by the French chef; not even the bread crumbs or the rough, coarse celery tops, or even apple peelings."

Of course, one must add a great deal of butter and seasoning and other ingredients in order to make those left-overs palatable. One is not expected to do the impossible and make something out of nothing, but these odds and ends are made to serve as the basis for very delicious dishes, and it does mean a very great saving in household expenses if constantly followed up. No smallest scrap of anything good is permitted to be thrown away.

I remember once seeing in a New York street, in a garbage barrel or can that was standing on the sidewalk, a number of bread crusts from which the soft central part had been nibbled, leaving the best and most nourishing part to be thrown away. This was an expression of ignorance in the extreme. Some child had been permitted to form the habit of eating out the soft centers of bread slices and the mother must have known nothing of preparing a dish of such scraps, a bread pudding or croquettes, and so they were tossed into the garbage can, whereas in a French or Italian mansion they would have been preserved and utilized.

The meat chopper is the most economical of household things.

The chief things that are thrown away in the average household are cold boiled potatoes, cold breakfast cereals, scraps of bread, and sometimes scraps of cold meat and fish. Now, all of these make up into particularly appetizing dishes for lunch or even for entrees at dinner, as I shall now proceed to tell you.

FISH OR MEAT RAMEKINS.

A DELICIOUS luncheon dish or an entree for dinner may be made from the left-over cold meat or fish. Mince the meat or fish fine and mix with a good quantity of sweet butter and a well beaten egg. Use plenty of salt, pepper and a very little mustard. Line ramekins with this mixture, and in the centre of each drop an egg and cover the egg with a layer of the mince and bake in a pan of not water for thirty minutes.

CHICKEN SOUFFLE.

SAVE all the smallest bits of chicken from a roast, scraping the bones and preserving all the scraps. Chop this fine and make a delicious chicken souffle from it by making first a white sauce with two cups of sweet, creamy milk, one tablespoonful of butter and one of flour, a teaspoonful of salt and a dash of pepper to taste. Add to this half a cup of dried bread crumbs and cook the whole two or three minutes.

Then add two cupfuls of the chopped chicken, the stiffly beaten yolks of three eggs, a tablespoonful of chopped parsley, and last the whites of the three eggs beaten stiffly.

Bake in a porcelain dish for about thirty-five minutes and serve with mushroom sauce.

SAUCE LEFT-OVERS

COLD apple sauce may be used up in a delicious fashion in the two following ways:

To two cups of apple sauce add one of mashed potatoes. Blend the two ingredients by passing them through a fine sieve. Add more sugar, a teaspoonful of salt, the juice of half a lemon and some of the rind grated; also a heaping tablespoonful of butter. Beat all together and put in a baking dish. Cover thickly with dry bread crumbs and a half dozen large lumps of butter and bake brown. Served hot at lunch time it is delicious as a side dish.

ANOTHER way. Add dry bread crumbs to the left-over apple sauce and season with salt and a little nutmeg. Mould into croquettes and dip in egg and then bread crumbs, and fry in a frying basket in deep fat. Sizzling olive oil is best. It is what we invariably use in Italy, and the flavor given to things so fried is infinitely superior to that of things fried in lard. These croquettes are especially delicious for serving with pork or game.

CURRIED VEGETABLES.

PEOPLE are very apt to throw away cold vegetables of all sorts. Here is an excellent way to use them up, called curried vegetables. Take all kinds of vegetables, beets, turnips, carrots, onions, potatoes, tomatoes and parsnips that have been accumalating in the ice box for several days, and chop them together. Add to them a cupful of bread crumbs and fry in oil till brown. Just before removing from the fire add salt and a teaspoonful or curry. Mix well and let remain two or thre minutes longer on the fire. The curry lends a most delectable flavor to the various vegetables.

CURRIED COLD MEAT.

COLD meat cut in slices and dipped in olive oil and then sprinkled lightly with salt and curry powder and broiled quickly over a hot fire is exceedingly tempting.

SPINACH AND EGGS.

COLD spinach may be used to excellent advantage by being mixed with olive oil and a few drops of lemon juice. Press through a sieve or colander and then chill on the ice. Mould into individual forms. Add a border of shredded lettuce, bits of raw tomato and set on the top of each the half of a hard-boiled egg.

COLD PARSNIPS ESCALLOPED.

COLD parsnips escalloped are very tempting. Press through a sieve and mix with a quantity of butter. Season well and lay in a baking dish, first a layer of the parsnip with drops of butter, then a layer of bread crumbs, then a layer of parsnip again, and last a layer of bread crumbs with many dabs of butter. Bake brown.

CANDIED SWEET POTATOES

COLD sweet potatoes cut in thick, lengthwise slices may be made into candied dainties for lunch. Dip them in olive oil and then sprinkle thickly with sugar. Place in the oven for about ten minutes and they will be a dark brown and very syrupy.

MEAT RAGOUTS.

A TEMPTING ragout is made as follows from left-over remnants of beef, mutton or veal: Slice the meat or cut in cubes. Fry a cupful of sliced onions in butter or oil until a light brown. Add to these a cupful of cold gravy and a cupful of stewed tomatoes, either fresh or canned, and season with salt, paprika and some curry powder.

Stew the mixture for fifteen minutes and then add the sliced meat. Arrange a mould of boiled rice in the centre of a platter, place the slices of meat, that have been permitted to get thoroughly hot, all around this overlapping and then pour the gravy over all.

THE left-over which is thrown away more than any other is the left-over breakfast cereal, the cold porridge upon which the average cook or housewife looks with despair, and which many suppose cannot possibly be made use of, and yet it is one of the very best left-overs there is. One may make the most delicious things out of it. Here are a few of them:

Take the cold cereal that may be left over from breakfast and use it as one would bread for a bread pudding. Make the custard as for bread pudding, with milk, eggs and sugar, and then add the masses of cold pettijohn and lumps of butter. A cupful of stoned raisins and some grated nutmeb complete the ingredients. Bake brown. It is more tasty than bread pudding.

COLD CROQUETTES.

COLD mashed potatoes may be made most palatable by mixing with butter, some minced parsley, a well beaten egg, salt and paprika. Mix well together and mould into croquettes. Dip in egg, roll in bread crumbs and fry in a frying basket in deep fat or oil.

CEREAL CROQUETTES.

LEFT-OVER croquettes are made by mixing bread crumbs with the left-over cereal and mingled with a beaten egg, a teaspoonful of honey and a few chopped raisins. Mould into croquettes, dip in egg, roll in bread crumbs and fry in a frying basket in deep fat or oil.

Any cold cereal may be made delicious for lunch by mixing with it chopped nuts, honey, egg and thick cream, moulding into round ball croquettes, dipping in molasses and egg or honey and egg and then bread crumbs, and frying brown in deep oil or fat. Children delight in these.

CHEESE ODDS AND ENDS.

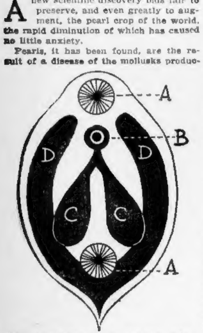
ODDS and ends of cheese usually thrown away may be saved, and when of a sufficient quantity run through the grinder. Season well with paprika, salt and a pinch of curry. Mix with thick cream and set aside to blend. It may be used then as a soft cheese.

The Little Worms That Grow the Shining Pearl.

By Rene Bache.

A new scientific discovery bids fair to preserve, and even greatly to augment, the pearl crop of the world, the rapid diminution of which has caused no little anxiety.

Pearls, it has been found, are the result of a disease of the mollusks producing them and this disease is caused by certain very minute parasitic worms.



The Pearl Worm. A—Sucking Discs. B—Mouth. C—Intestines. D—Reproductive Sacs.

These worms may be propagated by artificial means, and the pearl oysters or pearl mussels infected with them, so as to make them produce pearls.

The discovery is made only just in time. To such an extent have the pearl fisheries been depleted by reckless over-fishing that dealers have been saying recently that no large pearls would ever again come to market, save, perhaps, on occasions when Oriental magnates and potentates might be induced by extravagant prices to part with specimens held as heirlooms in their families for generations. In other words, the pearl of size and value is near to extinction.

The experts of the United States Fisheries Bureau are giving their most particular attention to this little worm that is the cause of germs in the pearly mussels of American rivers.

The pearl-producing worm of the fresh water mussel is about the size of a dot, such as one makes with the point of an ordinary leadpencil. Under the microscope it is seen to be broad and oval in form, but somewhat pointed at the head and tail ends. Beneath the head is a sucking disk, and another and similar disk is not far from the tail, on the ventral side. These disks are to enable the creatures to cling. It has a recognizable mouth, and careful dissection shows that the interior of the body is mainly occupied by reproductive sacs.

Now, this tiny worm, finding its way into the pearly mussel, invades the flesh of the latter. Why? Nobody knows with certainty. As yet it has not been definitely ascertained whether the parasite actually eats the tissue of its molluscan host. But there is no question of the fact that it sets up an irritation, which causes the mussel to deposit around it the pearl-stuff which, layer on layer being added, eventually forms what we call a pearl. This pearl is held in a capsule—though the pearl occasionally outgrows the capsule, bursts it and is found outside.

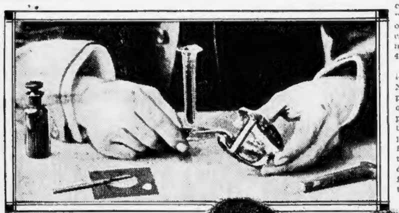
The story of the origin and growth of a pearl is very clearly told by the pearl itself when properly examined. For this purpose the experts have had resort to two expedients—one of them being to grind away half of the pearl, so as to reveal its structure in sections. The other method is to "decalcify" the pearl—this is to say, to deprive it of its limy substance by soaking it in nitric acid, after which it may easily be cut in slices. As a result of the observations thus made it is seen that the pearl always has for its nucleus one of the tiny worms—even the details of the creature's anatomy being sometimes discernible.

The experts of the Bureau of Fisheries are trying to find out all about the life history of the worm. It appears that the latter is only incidentally a parasite of the pearly mussel. It is also a parasite of the muskrat! The muskrat, which is very fond of shellfish, eats the mussel, and thereby becomes infected with the worm. The latter becomes mature in the body of the muskrat, and lays large numbers of eggs, which find their way into the water and hatch out other worms. These enter the shells and penetrate the bodies of mussels, which are in their turn eaten by other muskrats, and thus the cycle is made complete.

Thus it seems that not merely one animal, but three, are required to produce a fresh-water pearl. In addition to the mussel, there must be the worm and also the muskrat. For without the muskrat, to harbor it while maturing, the worm could not survive. Without the worm there would be no pearls. The important thing, therefore, for practical purposes, is to encourage the propagation of the worm, and not to discourage the muskrat in the neighborhood of mussel-bearing streams.

It might be supposed that the business of breeding the parasites artificially would be attended with many difficulties. But not so. Nothing, in short, could be easier. The matter has not yet been made a subject of practical trial by the experts, who are still busy in poking away at the scientific side of the problem, but they are satisfied that the application of the theory will be simple enough. In a word, all that is necessary to propagate the pearl disease among mussels is to plant them in a bed that is already infected.

Some mussel beds are infected, and, therefore, pearl-producing. Many others are not. How is it possible to tell the difference? Simply by opening a few. The infected mussel is always distinguishable (if it does not already contain a pearl) by a jink little spot in the flesh, which is the parasite.



Innoculating An Oyster With the Pearl Worm.

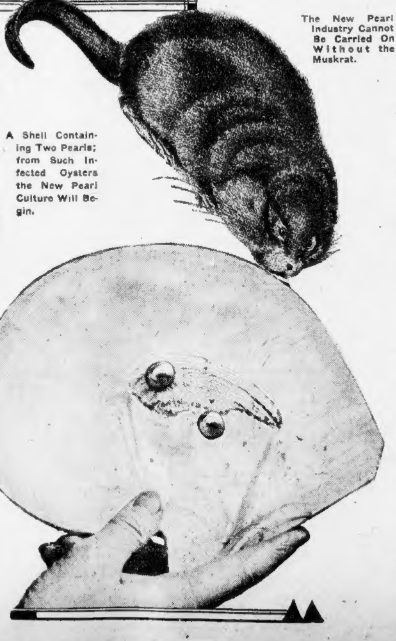
Very well, then. Let us say that an infected bed is located by this means. Hitherto the method adopted under such circumstances has been to destroy the bed immediately by taking all the mussels, securing what pearls some of them contained, and opening and thus killing all the rest. Thus the bed was literally wiped out. The goose that laid the golden egg was killed; and this was the end of that particular goose.

The new style of procedure is to be different. When an infected bed is found, even though it may contain only a few mussels, it will be looked upon as a rich and valuable prize—a source, indeed, of future wealth. Non-infected mussels in quantities will be fetched from elsewhere, and planted there. The parasites will infect them, and they will produce pearls in numbers and of size, being carefully protected against depredation. The original mollusks will not be touched, but those planted will be planted from time to time, means being adopted to avoid the killing of specimens that do not actually contain pearls big enough to be marketable at a good price.

Now, as was said a moment ago, in carrying on the business of artificial pearl production through the employment of natural means, care would be taken to kill only such mussels as contained pearls of size. One naturally asks, how is this to be accomplished? How find out without opening a mussel whether or not there a pearl inside? And, even if that were known, how determine whether iit was a big one or a little one?

The answer is easy enough—by the use of the X-ray. Recent experiments have proved that examination of pearl-bearing mollusks of any species with the "fluoroscope" will quickly disclose the presence of any pearls they contain. But the same process photographically applied—that is to say, by making "readiographs" of pearl mussels or pearl oysters—is vastly more satisfactory, because more rapid. By this means pearly mussels can be inspected at the rate of 400 a minute.

This method was first tried, not long ago, by Dr. John I. Solomon, in New York City. He used for the purpose large Rockaway oysters of the ordinary edible kind, into which pearls were introduced. On examining the bivalves with the fluoroscope, the pearls showed up plainly—obviously for the reason that they obstructed the passage of the X-rays more than did other parts of the oysters. It was feared lest the rays might kill the latter, but they showed no ill effects, though kept in tanks at the Aquarium for several months afterwards.



The New Pearl Industry Cannot Be Carried On Without the Muskrat.

A Shell Containing Two Pearls; from Such Infected Oysters the New Pearl Culture Will Begin.

Dr. Solomon thereupon got together some capital, about $50,000, and, going to Ceylon, set up a plant, which is now in operation on the Island of Ipantivu, near the famous pearl fishery of the Gulf of Manaar. He put up buildings, bought boats, machinery and photographic supplies, and arranged for the delivery of fresh-gathered pearl oysters in quantities. As fast as they arrived he radiographed them. Those found to contain pearls of value were opened; those with small pearls were planted to give the pearls a chance to grow; and those with no pearls were returned to the sea, to breed, and possibly to become inoculated with the pearl-inducing worm.

The radiographing machine is an endless strip of canvas, passing over rollers, upon which the pearl oysters are placed. The strip is divided into a series of sections, which are X-rayed one after another (with the bivalves on them) by exposing each section in turn to the Roentgen apparatus, and placing a sheet of sensitized paper beneath. The first radiographs are developed while others are being taken, and thus the process is continuous. Each canvas section is marked with a big number, so that the resulting photographs are easily compared with the groups of oysters which they respectively represent, the pearl-containing specimens are picked out to be opened, and the others are disposed of in the manner already described.

The enterprise on the Island of Ipantivu is as yet only in an experimental stage. Dr. Solomon proposes to try some parasite infection work there as soon as the problem has reached a more definite solution on the theoretical side. Meanwhile our Bureau of Fisheries will establish some scientific mussel plantations, with a view to cultivating the pearl disease; and, doubtless, the X-ray process for picking out the pearl-bearing bivalves will be utilized in connection therewith. Such a plantation will produce nothing but big pearls, because all mollusks containing small ones will be returned to the water and kept there until the pearls are of satisfactory size.

The prospect is that, thanks to this new discovery, the market supply of fine pearls will become in the near future sufficiently ample to enable women of moderate means to wear necklaces of them, instead of being obliged to fall back upon imitations, as is the case to-day. The pearl crop will be regular and to be relied upon, and exceptionally large and beautiful molluscan gems will not be so scarce as to be owned, as at the present time, exclusively by multi-millionaires and great potentates.

The pearl producing powers of the oyster have been stimulated artificially by the wonderful Chinese, but not to the point of making them produce pearls of the finest quality. The Chinese insert into the oyster an image, cross, or some other little object made of metal. The oyster, irritated by the intrusion of the foreign substance against its soft body, proceeds to deposit a layer of smooth, pearly matter upon the object.

The result is a very pretty little ornament, but it has not the quality of the pearls produced by natural means not hitherto understood. It is the natural process that the scientists are now able to produce exactly.

It is interesting to speculate whether people will want pearls at all after they become remarkably accessible to everyboyd. Are they very beautiful in themselves or are they chiefly valuable for their rarity?

"SEEING THINGS"

But They're All Real—Just Nature's Way of Showing What She Can Do When She Tries.

NATURE is very versatile. Nature is always beautiful, say the poets and artists. But they underestimate her ability. Now and then she becomes eager for the grotesque, the weird and the hideous. When this occurs the best efforts of man in this direction become very juvenile indeed.

In prehistoric times, when man was forming his first traditional notions about the spiritual world, there were many uncanny creatures in existence that are now extinct, all of which created impressions in the savage mind that have been handed down through the centuries.

But enough new ones exist to compensate man for their loss.

The Flower-nosed Bat of the Malayan region is really a very harmless little beast, yet it is held in the greatest dread and horror by the natives. The Death's Head Moth, so-called from the semblance of a skull on its back, is also generally shunned, and all the more perhaps because, when alarmed, it squeaks.

Of nature's ghosts, too, there are not a few. Some are endowed with the power of emitting a weird, phosphorescent light, and some are among the smartest of quick-change artists, varying the hues of their transparent bodies to suit their surroundings. The blind, pallid and long-drawn Proteus, the dweller in caves where night reigns supreme, is about as ghostly looking a creature as one could well conceive. If one believed in the transmigration of souls, the fate of this poor beast would suggest the reincarnation of human evil-doers, and its appearance at the opening of the cave would send terror to the heart of man and beast alike.

Some of these grotesques gambol on the warm surface of the sea. There we find the Elfin Shark, from Japan, one of the ugliest of its kind known. It is particularly repulsive and a veritable bogy among other fish.

There are many varieties of gorilla and ape that can be classed among nature's freaks, and the giant Pangolin, or Scaly Ant-Eater, is of such an appearance and texture as to send shivers down the human or even animal spinal columns.

These are the bogies that we can see, but there are many others which are invisible to our eyes, for creatures of the microscopic world have their strange shapes as well. Placing them under the magnifying glass, we can see the fantastic, grotesque formation of these tiny beings which cause respectable, law-abiding fellow creatures to flee in terror.

In the matter of feathered creatures, however, New Zealand is undeniably the most remarkable country in the world. It is particularly the home of the flightless birds, of many species, which flourished there in earlier times, owing to the fact that there were no large carnivorous beasts on the two big islands to prey upon them. Unfortunately, the white man, establishing himself in the land of the Maori, has brought with him his dogs and cats, which are rapidly driving the non-flying fowls to extinction.

The best known of these birds is the Ki-wi, or apteryx—the latter, which is its scientific name, signifying wingless. It is, indeed, practically without wings, and lives in thickets, often covering itself with dead leaves and other such material, for concealment. About the size of an average chicken, it is thick-set, with plumage long and hairy. Worms and insects furnish the bulk of its food, which it seeks at night, hiding itself by day. Any one running suddenly across a Ki-wi would be greatly startled.

The Ki-wi is especially interesting because it is a relative of the gigantic Moa—a New Zealand bird, rivalling the Roc in size, which became extinct not much more than a century ago, owing to a Winter of unusual cold. When full-grown it weighed half a ton, exceeding the Aepyornis of Madagascar in avoirdupois, though less in stature. Its leg bones were enormously heavy, and it was very sluggish in its movements.

Unquestionably the most remarkable looking of all the Australian animals are the echidna and the "duck-billed platypus"—for these are the only mammals that lay eggs. The platypus, indeed, is a veritable zoological paradox, inasmuch as it is a quadruped with a stout, fur-covered body, a toothless beak like that of a duck, webbed feet and a short tail. It feeds on mollusks, insects, crustaceans and worms, and is of aquatic habits, living in and about streams like the otter and the muskrat.

What Color Is a Baby's Cry?

TO say that music has color, and that any expression of it is possible to the human eye, as on canvas, for instance, seems almost like saying that thoughts have different hues, and that they can be thrown in concrete form onto a screen. Nevertheless, there is on exhibition in the Baillie Gallery in London a series of wonderful paintings which practically proves that proposition. It demonstrates how certain strains of music and movements in music throw up before an artist's mind certain colors, and how by a blending of different musical tones there results a blending of color tones in the artist's mind.

That this strange phenomena was not due to any particular mood that the painter happened to be in is shown by the fact that whenever he heard certain tones, no matter what the day or how he felt, the same corresponding colors were suggested to him, and under the musical spell of the strains from different musical masters he painted the wonderful series of pictures now being viewed by thousands of wondering critics. The artist is Mr. A. C. Coulthurst.

Mozart stirs Mr. Colthurst strangely, and a pictorial impression of his music shows a pearly gray sea, placid and untroubled, in the evening mists. A dreamy headland rises in the distance, and at its foot shimmer a few twinkling lights, as if a haven nestled under the hill. Laboring toward this is a procession of tiny sailing boats.

Schubert provides the artist with stronger food. His music conjures up a ruined castle towering black above the mystery of a lake which lies almost hidden at the foot of a circle of green hills. On the side of the nearest hill sit a pair of lovers—indefinite but distinguishable—watching a rack of tempestuous clouds, lighted by the rising moon, drift through the silent valley.

Beethoven stirs Mr. Colthurst to paint a Caesar-like bust, gray and sombre, against a luminous background, on which a female face is faintly shadowed. Notes of music in black or gold, with an occasional query mark appear obtrusively at the edge of the canvas.

Wagner moves the artist ponderously. In the distance he paints a ruined temple, silhouetted against a centre of cold light. In the foreground glides a procession of hooded figures, gloomy in black and red, evidently anticipating a performance of the "Gotterdammerung." Round the base of the temple circles a chaos of red-clad dancers, with an orgy of black crochets and quavers bringing up the rear. It is a thrillingly overpowering impression.

Debussy inspires a confusion of trees intermingling with dominant black notes, flats, sharps and staves. Between the distant trees a roseate light bursts into being, so like a Crystal Palace pyrotechnic display that one longs to cry, "Oh!"

Liszt causes the artist to depict a titanic thunderstorm tearing up a placid if sombre landscape, and Irish folk songs inspire a mass meeting of moonlighters' spooks grouped together at what appears to be the water's edge.

Mr. Colthurst also shows a series of landscapes and a number of figure subjects, of which "An Irish Wake" is the most impressive.

WHO KILLED PROFESSOR GREER?

THE MYSTERY OF THE RED ROOM.—By William Le Queux.

(Copyright, in the United States of America, 1909, by William Le Queux.)

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

MUCH mystery surrounds Kershaw Kirk, who lives modestly in Bath Road, Bedford Park, London—in the mind of Holford, motor engineer and dealer in motor cars, who lives with his wife a few doors distant. Elsewhere in London they have seen his shabby person dressed in the height of fashion, in company with notable persons. The story opens with Kirk visiting Holford at his motor shop on a mysterious errand about a new tire. At his request, Holford visits him. Kirk describes himself as a "dealer in secrets," who will be suspected of a secret murder which must be kept from the police. Although he is one of the persons in England who "cannot be arrested," he needs a friend who is honest and a gentleman. He has picked out Holford, who promises friendship and silence. The assassin's victim is the celebrated Professor Greer, who, Kirk says, had filched from him a valuable secret. Hence the suspicion that may rest on Kirk. Although Professor Greer has been murdered, yet, on the night of the murder, committed in his laboratory, adjoining an apartment called "The Red Room," he suddenly left the house, telling his daughter, Ethelwyn, that he has been called to Edinburgh.

Holford goes to Edinburgh, determined to trace dead Professor Greer's impersonator, but fails. He returns to London to find that his wife has been lured away on a forged telegram from Turin, Italy. He follows with his wife's sister, Gwen, and in Florence discovers that his wife has been there with an elderly man, whom Holford believes to be Kirk. They have departed for Rome. Holford hastens on to Rome, more than ever convinced that his wife has been abducted by Kirk. He does not find her, but meets Antonio Merli, Professor Greer's servant. The man pretends ignorance, but makes dark threats when Holford proposes to go to the Italian police. Holford decides to return to England and implores the aid of Ethelwyn. He sees the professor's daughter, and is nonplussed to discover that she believes her father to be still alive. He suspects her of collusion with the impostor. Holford telegraphs to Professor Greer at Strassburg in Kirk's name, and receives a reply signed "Greer" warning him to keep away from Broadstairs. He resolves to go to Strassburg, but meets Dr. Hamilton Flynn in Langton's rooms, who declares that his patient has gone to Hungary. Neither offers to help Holford find his wife. He concludes that both himself and Langton are being deceived by Dr. Flynn.

Holford learns that his wife knew Professor Greer before their marriage. He decides to watch Dr. Flynn. Thus he witnesses Kirk's arrival from the Continent, follows him to apartments where he lives as "Mr. Seymour," and threatened him with exposure. Holford attacks Kirk, but the latter remains imperturbable, denying all part in the disappearance of Mrs. Holford. Holford declares he will reveal the whole affair to the police. He tells his story at Scotland Yard, and is asked to call again for the Commissioner's decision. When he gets it he realizes that the police will do nothing for some mysterious reason. Holford has Kirk followed by Drake, his chauffeur, who trails him to Shortlands, but is "spotted."

Holford again visits Ethelwyn, finding Langton with her. He tells them the details of his discoveries in the Professor's house. Their attitude convinces Holford that they have guilty knowledge of the tragedy. Holford reads in a newspaper that Professor Greer is announced to lecture in Birmingham on his "Great Steel Discovery." He goes thither to unmask the impostor and meets Sir Mark Edwards, who is to be his host, but learns that the Professor has only just returned from the Continent and is at his house in London. Holford returns, to find only Antonio and Kirk. Kirk asks him for another pledge of secrecy.

"AH! my dear Mr. Holford!" exclaimed the bogus Professor. "I've been most anxious to meet you for a considerable time. This is a great pleasure."

"And one which I most heartily reciprocate," was my hard reply. "I've been endeavoring to find you for a long time. I followed you in Edinburgh, in Glasgow, and later on in Birmingham."

"Then surely it is a rather happy circumstance that we have met to-day?" he said, rather fussily.

"Happy for me—but perhaps unhappy for you!" I replied, with a dry laugh.

"Why?"

"Because I now intend to expose your very clever plot. The secret you have sold to Sir Mark Edwards does not belong to you at all, but to Professor Ernest Greer, the man who was killed in the room yonder—in his own laboratory!"

His lips grew paler and set themselves hard. I saw in his dark eyes an expression of fear. He held me in terror—that was quite plain.

"Holford, you are mistaken," declared Kirk.

"In what way?" I demanded.

"Professor Ernest Greer stands before you!"

"No!" I cried. "This man is the impostor—the impostor who wrote to my wife, and enticed her from her home!"

"I wrote to Mrs. Holford, certainly," was the fellow's cool reply. "But without any evil intent; of that she will herself assure you."

"Where is she?"

"You will, no doubt, see her before very long, and she will explain the reason of her absence."

"Ah!" I said, "you adventurers dare not tell me the truth with your own lips. Remember, I saw the Professor lying dead in this house. You cannot induce me to believe that my eyes deceived me!"

"And yet you see the Professor alive before you now!" declared Kirk, with a triumphant laugh.

But I made a gesture of disgust, declaring that I refused to be fooled further.

"You are not being fooled Mr. Holford," asserted the man in a calm, distinct voice, as he opened the door and called to Antonio.

The grave-eyed man-servant entered in a few seconds, and as he did so the new-comer said:

"Antonio, will you please tell this gentleman who I am?"

"You are my dear master, Signore—the Signore Professor Ernest Greer."

"I already know, Antonio, that you're a clever liar," I cried, "so you can retire."

"The Signorina Ethelwynn has just arrived, Signore," remarked the highly respectable man-servant.

"Ah! then tell my daughter to come up!" he cried. "She will no doubt satisfy Mr. Holford that I am no impostor."

"Miss Ethelwynn saw her father lying dead, as I did: how, therefore, can she identify you as her deceased parent? Have you a half-brother, or some relation strongly resembling you?"

"No, I have not," was his quick reply. "I am simply Professor Ernest Greer, whom a thousand persons living can identify."

At that moment the fair-haired girl, neatly attired in fur jacket, tailor-made skirt, and toque entered, and, with a spring, fell into the impostor's arms and kissed him.

That piece of acting was, without doubt, perfect. Yet I stood aside and smiled. Had not Kirk previously admitted to me that his earnest endeavor was to secure my silence?

"Am I your father?" asked the dark-eyed man of Ethelwynn, standing with his hand upon her shoulder.

"Of course you are, dear dad! Why?"

"Because this gentleman will not believe it!" he laughed.

"This is my father, Mr. Holford," the girl declared, turning to me.

"But did not you, with your own eyes, see your father dead in his laboratory?" I asked seriously. "Are you not being misled, as these men are trying to mislead me?" I suggested.

She hesitated, glancing toward the man who posed as the professor as though expecting him to reply for her.

"No," I went on, "this is a conspiracy—a plot to place this man in a dead man's shoes. And you know it, Miss Ethelwynn."

"I tell you he's my father!" the girl persisted. "Cannot you believe me?"

"Not without some independent proof," I said. This persistence angered me.

"Then what proof do you require?" asked the man. "Shall I call the park-keeper at Clarence Gate? He has known me and seen me every day for a number of years."

"Call him, if you wish," I said, though, truth to tell, I did not intend to be longer fooled by the ingenious machinations of Kirk and his gang.

Antonio was sent to find the park-keeper, who, in due time, appeared carrying his gold-laced hat in his hand.

"You've known Professor Greer for a long time?" I asked the white-headed man

"Several years, sir," was his quick reply.

"And you recognize this gentleman as the Professor?" I asked.

"Certainly, sir, I saw him pass in at the gate this morning. He's cut off his beard—and that makes a bit of difference to a man, you know!" He laughed.

"You have no hesitation in identifying him—eh?" I asked. "You'll be able to swear to him in a court of law?"

"Yes, sir, in any court of law. The Professor's been very kind to me, once or twice; therefore, it isn't likely that I forget either his face or his voice."

This bewildered me. Was it possible that this imposter was the Professor's half-brother? I felt confident that Kirk was continuing some very ingenious conspiracy. Was not his suggestion to me that I should forget the tragedy sufficient proof of double-dealing?

I thanked the park-keeper, who withdrew with Antonio, whereupon Kirk asked me whether I was not satisfied.

"No," I said, "and I shall never be satisfied until I discover the identity of the man who killed Professor Greer."

"But Professor Greer stands before you!" declared Ethelwynn. "Nobody killed him!"

"So you wish me to believe," I said, with a smile; "but as my secrecy has been demanded on your account I can only suspect that you were, in some way, implicated in the crime."

She went pale as death. My words, I saw, had a startling effect upon her. She looked first at Kirk and then at the man posing as her father—the man who had secured many thousands of pounds for a secret that was not his own.

"Then you refuse to accept even the park-keeper's testimony?" Kirk remarked, while the man who had assumed the Professor's identity walked across to the writing table and began looking at some letters lying upon it.

"I do, my intention is to unmask you all!"

The imposter, the fading light falling upon his clear-cut countenance, turned quickly, and upon his face rested an expression of deadly fear that I had not previously noticed. Hitherto his attitude had been one of bold unconcern. But now, realizing my determination, he had grown alarmed. He saw that he had carried the imposture too far.

"Ethelwynn," he said, in a low, strained voice, "I—I wish to speak with Mr. Halford. Will you leave us for a little while, dear. Go into the red room, and we'll join you there later."

SAVE MONEY ON BICYCLE TIRES

The way to save money on bicycle tires is to get NOT the cheapest, but the kind that last the longest.

It stands to reason that cheap tires must be made of cheap material. And you know that second-hand, lifeless rubber can't wear long.

In the end you will have worn out two or three pairs of poor tires, and paid more for them than if you bought one pair of GOOD tires at the start.

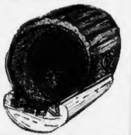
For this reason you SAVE the MOST by getting

INDIANAPOLIS G & J TIRES

They are made of the choicest of fresh Para rubber, costing several times that in cheap tires. It is put through slow, tedious, expensive processes that develop its toughness and durability to the utmost.

As a result Indianapolis G & J Tires wear from two to three times as long as cheap tires. They ride easier. They are the most popular bicycle tires on the market.

NOT CEMENTED TO THE RIM



Indianapolis G & J Bicycle Tires are not cemented to the rim. They are held by inflation. They cannot slip or come off until you let out the air. In case of puncture a repair can easily and quickly be made without the aid of tools

MoToR BOATING

THE NATIONAL MAGAZINE OF MOTOR BOATING

A Friend, a Help and an Advisor
To Every Man Who Runs a Boat or Wants to

A magazine that will enable you to cut down your expenses and at the same time to increase your comfort and enjoyment in your boat. Month by month it brings right to your finger tips all that is progressive, interesting and helpful in the Motor Boating World.

This broad experience is crystallized in the practical, suggestive pages of MoToR Boating. Its special departments are "Motor Boating Navigation," "New Things for the Motor Boatman," "Yard and Shop," etc., etc. Each page has some helpful hint, some practical suggestion that will do its share in making your boat more truly a source of unqualified enjoyment. From cover to cover there are no articles to be skipped, no pages to be turned blindly. Every contribution will either help or entertain—usually both.

FREE and all charges prepaid, we will forward you Goldie's world famous treatise, "From Novice to Pilot," including a complete exposition on how to run a motor boat. Merely write your name on a slip of paper, enclose a dollar bill and mail to-day at our risk. The February issue will be particularly good. Therefore please be sure to mail your dollar to-day—now. Remember you thus secure both twelve big issues of MoToR Boating's helpful, suggestive pages, and also Goldie's famous book.
